Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1391 [Eleven Jewell]

“That happened several years ago, right? I’m not aware of her condition back then. But, based on her current state, there shouldn’t be any major issues if she were to get pregnant, as long as she takes good care of herself during the pregnancy,” said Luke. He paused and chuckled, “You shouldn’t stress too much about the pregnancy. Unless your wife has a history of recurring miscarriages or underlying health issues, the likelihood of a miscarriage isn’t high. According to the report, she is in good physical health, and her blood regulation has improved over the past few months. So, you might not need any contraceptives.”

Hearing that, Keegan breathed a sigh of relief. The weight that had been pressing down on him was finally lifted.

Luke then prescribed some medicine for Stella and gave her a lot of advice while Keegan eagerly memorized and wrote down every word he said.

On the other hand, Stella did not pay much attention to what the doctor was saying. Instead, she was highly focused on Keegan.

Stella was stunned by how Keegan was even more anxious than her about her infertility. Little did she know that he was not worried about whether he could have children. Instead, he was concerned about the possibility of infertility becoming the ultimate reason for her to leave him.

However, he did not know that he was the love of her life and that she would never give him up to someone else.

After Luke finished speaking, he turned to Keegan and said, “You should also find some time to undergo a reversal procedure for your vasectomy. Just let nature take its course. Who knows, you might be in for a pleasant surprise.”

Keegan nodded and was about to leave when Stella suddenly said, “Can you wait outside for a second? I need to ask Dr. Quinn something.”

Keegan frowned. “What are you going to ask, and why cant I stay and listen?”

Stella gave him a stern look. “It’s just some gynecological matters. You don’t need to know about it. Come on. Out you go,” she shooed him away.

Keegan was unhappy, but he could not argue with Stella. In the end, he was kicked out of the consultation room.

“So, what would you like to know?” Luke asked in a kind manner.

Stella glanced at the door to make sure that Keegan was not eavesdropping. Then, she asked, “Dr. Quinn, do you only specialize in gynecology? Or, do you have experience in urology as well?”

“I do know a bit about urology. What is it that you want to ask?” Luke replied.

Stella hesitated for a moment before she whispered, “I want to know how to treat a man who... has difficulties in the sex department and can’t get hard. Is there a way to improve this?”

Luke was taken aback. Thinking about Keegan, who was waiting outside, he asked, “Does your partner have this issue?”

“I...” Stella did not know how to explain the situation with Vermont and Felicity, so she lied, “Yes.”

This was the first time Luke had encountered a situation where both partners had infertility issues.

“If that’s the case, there is truly no need for vasectomy. But you should have him checked out by a urologist to understand his condition and treat it accordingly,” he advised.

Stella continued on with her fabricated lies and said, “This only happened after the vasectomy. His pride won’t allow him to get it checked out. He’d argue with me if I suggested it. So, I thought I’d consult you first.”

Luke had seen many patients in his years of practice.

Among them were couples where the man would blame the woman despite the obvious issue being with them. Hence, Stella’s words did not strike him as odd. ‘Men can be highly protective of their pride when it comes to certain matters,’ he thought.

“Could you describe the specific symptoms?” Luke asked.

Stella recalled what Felicity had said and exaggerated a bit. “Well... he has trouble getting hard. And, even when he does get hard, he can’t keep it hard for long. It gets soft very easily. Even explicit videos don’t arouse him. It’s like he has completely lost interest in sex.”

“And this happened right after the vasectomy?”

Stella hesitated and said, “It mainly started in the last couple of months.”

Her description was rather vague. Those with kidney disease might also exhibit these symptoms.

“Can this condition be treated, Dr. Quinn?” asked Stella.

Luke thought about Keegan. ‘That young man doesn’t seem like someone with kidney disease or blood deficiency.’

He pondered for a moment before he said, “Based on what you’ve described, I can’t make a definitive judgment. Here’s what we’ll do: I’ll write down a few prescriptions for you to try. If they’re effective, then there shouldn’t be a problem. Remember to keep a healthy lifestyle. If the meds don't work, bring him in for a thorough examination at the hospital. He's still young. There's a good chance of recovery with early intervention and treatment."

Stella expressed her gratitude profusely. She could easily share the prescription with Felicity if she asked for it. This also meant that she could stay in the loop. As Stella was leaving, another thought occurred to her. She decided to ask Luke about it. "Dr. Quinn, is it considered a medical issue if a person struggles to perform well during sex after consuming alcohol?"

Luke was shocked to hear her question. He chuckled and said, "Well, for most people, it's perfectly normal not to perform well when heavily intoxicated. In fact, if someone is able to perform under those circumstances, it usually means they aren't actually all that drunk."

Stella sighed in relief after confirming that it was not a grave concern.

Keegan had been waiting for a considerable amount of time when Stella emerged from the consultation room. "Did you get your questions answered?" he inquired. Stella nodded.

"What did you ask?"

"Curiosity killed the cat, you know?" said Stella.

Keegan looked at her momentarily and remarked, "Why do I feel like you're acting a little guilty?"

Stella did not say a word. It was not guilt on her face but rather pent-up anticipation. She wanted to share the news with Keegan, but she held back. 'Let's leave Vermont with some dignity,' she thought.

Keegan dropped Stella off at the film set before heading back to the office. Just before he arrived at the office building, his phone rang. He glanced at the caller ID and saw it was Luke calling. Keegan quickly answered the phone, assuming it was additional medical advice.

"Dr. Quinn," he said.

Luke proceeded, "Mr. Kane, could you give me your partner's contact number? It appears I made an error regarding one of the prescriptions."

"You can tell me, and I'll make sure she gets the message," Keegan responded.

However, Luke insisted, "It would be best if you could provide me with her number. I need to discuss something with her. She's expressed a preference not to involve you in this matter."

Keegan was not usually so inquisitive. But Luke's cryptic remark instantaneously aroused his interest. 'What could he be referring to? Why the secrecy?' He pursed his lips and said, “Dr. Quinn, does my wife have any other symptoms? Please don’t withhold any information from me. I’m sure I can handle the truth.”

Luke did not know how to respond. ‘This man clearly has great affection for his wife. Oh, why does he have to possess such a problem?’

In the end, Luke sighed and decided to lay it all out. “It’s not her with an issue; it’s you.”

Keegan was stunned to hear that. “Huh? What do you mean, Dr. Quinn?”

“Your wife told me about your symptoms,” said Luke as he repeated everything to Keegan, word for word.

Keegan’s face darkened while he listened to what Stella had told the doctor.

“I’ve prescribed a few dietary supplements for you to try out. Come see me again if you don’t find any improvement in your condition. I’ll tailor the treatment accordingly,”

Luke said to Keegan.

He then considered Stella’s concerns and added, “This condition isn’t a big deal. Many people experience it, especially with the high levels of stress nowadays. There’s no need to be ashamed. Seek help early, and you’ll be holding your little one in your arms soon.”

Keegan’s expression became ugly. He gritted his teeth and said, “Thank you for the advice, doctor.”

Aldor clutched onto the steering wheel as his eyes looked straight ahead. Keegan’s appearance was too scary at the moment.

‘Mr. Kane is in good health. That means that the prescription Mrs. Kane got was not for him. Why would she request such medication on his behalf?’ thought Aldor, stealing a glance at his boss before quickly averting his gaze. ‘He looks furious. I hope nothing serious happens to Mrs. Kane.’

Meanwhile, Stella was entirely oblivious to what had occurred. Today marked her first fight scene with Nicole, which she had previously filmed with Bella. The scene had the most dialogue in the entire show, and the tension was intense. However, Stella was not entirely satisfied with the previous take. Bella’s acting skills were limited, making it difficult for her to fully engage in the scene. Moreover, Bella kept forgetting her lines. In the end, the editing team had to cut a significant portion of the scene, resulting in a passable but far from impressive result.

Now, with Nicole as her scene partner, Stuart reintroduced the original lines and asked the entire set for their full cooperation during filming.

Stella actually looked forward to acting with Nicole. She was not afraid of having an opponent. She believed that having a good scene partner could significantly elevate her acting skills.

As it turned out, things went just as Stella had anticipated.

It was a retake of the same scene with the same makeup and wardrobe. However, when Nicole stepped out on set, the atmosphere was completely different from when Bella was there. Bella portrayed Lexi as somewhat timid, even though she was the one with the upper hand. The lines she delivered always carried a hint of hesitance, which was why Stuart always frowned when he directed the takes. He thought that a hesitant female lead was hardly relatable to the audience.

Nicole, on the other hand, exuded a different aura. She had come from an impoverished county. When she came to the city, she could not help but feel inferior when she faced her wealthier peers.

However, her insecurity stemmed solely from the difference in their living conditions. Nicole shined like a star the moment she stood on stage. With a subtly raised chin, she exuded confidence and determination. Her refusal to give in and her relentless effort to climb up the industry could be seen in the characters she portrayed.

Greatness is not innate but achieved through hard work.

This was the first time Stella felt pressure from an opponent in acting. Nicole was truly an impressive actor. She was in character in every movement she made. If Stella had not had several years of voice acting experience and had encountered numerous outstanding scene partners, she might have struggled to keep up with Nicole's performance.

The eight-minute-long scene was done in one take.

Stuart was elated with the shot and thought, 'This is precisely what I have been looking for!'

Stella stood in place, slowly grabbing the water Shea had handed her. Her heart was still pounding rapidly, and she felt nervous in front of the camera for the first time.

"Relax. Nicole has had seven years of acting experience. She's been at it for a long time. It's understandable if you messed something up," Shea said. She noticed how nervous Stella was during the take, but it did not affect her overall performance of the scene.

Stella took a sip of water, and her rapid heartbeat slowed down gradually. "She's amazing. She literally transitions in and out of character easily," she said.

"Yeah. She is incredibly talented and willing to put in the effort. People like her are born for this profession," Shea replied. "But you're not bad, either. This is technically your second role. You'll encounter many co-stars like Nicole in the future, and they'll help you improve your skills. Don't be afraid of messing up."

Stella smiled upon hearing that. "I'm not afraid," she said.

Nicole could not stop glancing in Stella's direction as she touched up her makeup. Seeing Stella quickly regain her composure, she murmured, "Not bad."

Lindy immediately stepped in front of her and blocked her view of Stella. "Focus on your acting. Don't let your heart wander!" She warned.

Nicole was stunned to hear that. "I'm not interested in her, okay?" Nicole shot her manager a glance and said. "I'm just a bit surprised she managed to keep up with me." With all the rumors circulating, she had genuinely believed that Keegan had married some random eye candy. Though, it seemed that he had found a hidden gem. Just as Nicole was thinking about this, Leighton suddenly walked by her, and she extended her leg subtly. As expected, Leighton tripped over it and almost fell flat on his face.

"Hahaha..." Nicole burst out laughing.

Once Leighton steadied himself, he glared at Nicole, his face dark. "Why the hell did you do that?" He asked.

Nicole innocently shrugged. "It's not my fault you don't watch where you're going. My leg hurts after you tripped over it, you know?"

She shook her legs and playfully teased him, "Or did you trip over them on purpose because you find my legs attractive?" Leighton laughed in exasperation and said, "Sorry. I'm a man with taste. What's there to find attractive about your skeletal-looking legs?"

Nicole paused and stepped up to him. "Who are you calling a skeleton?"

Leighton looked at her and firmly said, "You."

Nicole then grabbed his hand and placed it on her breasts. Her red lips curled slightly upward as she asked, "Is that so?"

Leighton's face burned up instantly. He pushed Nicole away and began heaving heavily. The veins on his forehead were about to pop. It took him a while to grit his teeth and say, "You should be ashamed!"

It was a good thing that they were indoors and away from fans. At the same time, everyone else was too busy with their own tasks to pay attention to them.

Nicole put on an innocent look and said, "I was just providing proof that I'm not all skin and bones."

Leighton knew just how shameless this woman was. He also knew he could not possibly win over their argument and might end up getting played again like before. So, he swallowed his frustration and walked away with a dark expression.

Nicole felt a bit disappointed seeing that the Tiger was not biting back like he used to. "Did he get a rabies shot or something? Why is he suddenly so docile?"

Lindy could not help but say, “It’s best you don’t provoke him. His fans will literally kill you.”

“I have a fanbase too, you know? I know they’ll fight back...” Nicole shrugged.

Hearing that, Lindy scoffed and said, “Most of your fans are middle-aged and busy taking care of their kids. Who’s got the time to fight for you online?”

Nicole was rendered speechless.

Meanwhile, Keegan was not in a good mood after the call with Luke. He went straight home once he finished his work. He could smell some alternative remedies as soon as he entered the house. Keegan pursed his lips and headed for the kitchen without a word.

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1395 [Eleven Jewell]

Stella was in an apron, with a spoon in one hand and her phone in the other. Her eyes were fixed on the screen, completely unaware of the person behind her.

The pot on the stove bubbled and simmered, its aroma filling the kitchen.

I can’t believe she’s cooking up a soup for the erectile dysfunction I clearly do not have! Was she planning to prepare and deliver it to someone?’ thought Keegan as he approached Stella. He held his breath and gently wrapped his arm around her waist.

“What are you cooking?” He rested his chin on her shoulder and inquired in a deep voice.

Stella was startled, but she relaxed upon recognizing his voice. Initially, she had planned to give Felicity the medicinal recipe directly. However, Stella realized she did not have an answer for how effective the remedy was. So, she decided to prepare a batch for Keegan to try first. This way, she could gauge and relay his reaction to Felicity later.

“Dr. Quinn gave me the recipe for a nourishing soup that helps replenish energy and boost blood circulation. I followed his instructions and cooked a pot. I assumed you could use a little boost since you’ve been staying up late frequently due to work,” she explained.

“I see,” Keegan responded. “What ingredients did you use?”

Stella hesitated for a moment and replied, “Just some common herbs like cordyceps, angelica roots, and some gelatin.”

Keegan noticed a bag of dried herbs nearby and reached out to take a look. Stella, feeling a tad guilty, quickly moved the bag away. “Did you wash your hands?” She asked.

“What’s in that bag?” Keegan inquired.

‘They’re angelica roots. They’re really good quality. Look at how thick they are,” said Stella with a straight face.

Did she think I couldn’t distinguish cordyceps from angelica roots?’ thought Keegan.

Cordyceps are known to improve sexual function and libido in men with erectile dysfunction.

“... It sure does look thick,” Keegan said. “Was it expensive?”

Stella turned her head and planted a kiss on his cheek. “Who cares when it can help improve your health?”

Keegan would have been swept away on his feet if he did not know Stella had secretly asked for this prescription for another man.

“Why didn’t you let Dr. Quinn examine me before prescribing this natural remedy?”

Stella coughed and explained, “Well, since we live together, I know all your symptoms.”

“Oh,” Keegan replied, unsure if he believed her. After a while, he asked, “Is this medicine just for replenishing my energy and improving blood circulation?”

“Yes,” Stella replied, maintaining her composure. “Let me know if it’s effective or if there are any side effects after you try it later. I’ll tell Dr. Quinn about it and see if we need to adjust the formula.”

Keegan’s eyes darkened. He tried to smile but could not bring himself to it. “Thanks, honey,” he said.

Feeling guilty, Stella did not dare look into his eyes. She patted his arm and said, “Go wash your hands. The soup will be ready soon.”

Keegan nodded and let go of her waist. He then turned around and left the kitchen. He could no longer control his expression once he was out of there. His face turned ugly in frustration.

‘Not only did she get a prescription for another man, but she’s also treating me as a guinea pig! I can’t wait to find out which asshole is trying to steal my partner from me,’ thought Keegan.

Soon, Stella brought out a bowl of soup. “Here, honey. Eat up. rv
