Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1416 [Eleven Jewell]

Keegan finished his soup and said, "The date for the banquet has been set. Has Trevor told you about it?"

Stella replied, "Yes, he did. He told me not to worry about anything, and all I've got to do is show up on that day. However, I'm still a little nervous about it. Is there really nothing I have to do?"

Keegan smiled. "Just prepare yourself mentally. I've had Aldor order a few gowns, which should be here soon. You can choose the one you like and let everyone see how beautiful the heiress of the Saun family is."

Stella laughed. "How beautiful can I be? I just don't want to embarrass them. Everyone's attention will shift to Jaylene anyway once she appears."

After spending some time in the industry, Stella learned how to read people well. Judging by their manners and etiquette, she could easily distinguish between fake and real socialites.

Jaylene had the elegant aura that only a well-raised lady could possess. Although not exceptionally beautiful, her discerning demeanor set her apart from many other ladies.

Rainee had spent some money hiring someone to help Stella with her postures, seating, and table manners.

It was not difficult to learn those things, but making them a habit was challenging.

Stella could pretend she belonged in the upper-class circle in public but for Jaylene... It was different. She did not have to pretend and could do everything right naturally.

The manners and etiquette were ingrained in her, and she could never reveal her true self easily.

Keegan gently held her hand up and kissed the back of it before he said in a deep voice, "She can never compare to you, no matter how good she is. I don't think it's just me who thinks that; I'm pretty sure your family does, too."

Stella chuckled and leaned in to give a peck on the corner of his lips. "It doesn't taste sweet, but why do the words coming out of it sound so sweet?" she whispered.

"Are you sure? Why don't you get another taste of it?"

Keegan was about to get it on with Stella, but her phone suddenly rang.

Stella, who had always been a loyal friend, pushed away her boyfriend and answered her best friend's call.

"Stella, Stinky Cucumber is having a terrible nosebleed. Was the soup prescribed by a professional?"

Stella paused. "Of course, it was! Keegan drank it, and he's completely fine. Why would I recommend something that's not safe for you?" She paused before continuing softly, "Could it be that he's too weak to handle it?"

Felicity was taken aback. 'That might actually be it. Since the efficacy isn't working for him down there, it has probably gone somewhere else.'

Felicity frowned. "Could he be so weak that he can't even handle soup?"

Stella said empathically, "You should take him for a proper checkup. If it really doesn't work, it's best for you to end this relationship before you develop deeper feelings for him."

Keegan was speechless.

Felicity was very worried as she said softly, "It seems like the bleeding has stopped. I'll hang up now to check on him."

"Okay."

After hanging up, Stella turned around and saw Keegan looking at her with an inquisitive expression.

"What's wrong?" she asked.

Keegan asked, "Are you going to break up with me too if I became like Vermont?"

"Of course not," Stella replied.

Keegan felt a little better inside. Then, he heard Stella adding, "I mainly fell for how you look, and that's what I prioritize."

Her words left Keegan speechless again.

However, Stella was not actually suggesting a breakup. She was simply making fun of Vermont's condition.

She just could not help but find it amusing that Vermont, someone with so much experience with women, had trouble getting his little man up.

The news of the return of the Saun family's heiress had spread among the upper-class circle of Rivera.

It had become a hot topic among the ladies.

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1417 [Eleven Jewell]

The group of wealthy wives were gossiping in their group chat:

[Isn't Jaylene the Saun family's daughter? When did they discover they had another daughter?]

[Someone is a bit behind on the news. Jaylene is actually the child of Darcie and her ex-husband. It's true that she grew up in the Saun family, but she's not Wenham's biological kid.]

[Wait. Wenham had a daughter with another woman while he was with Darcie?]

[No. He's not Albert, you know. Wenham's ex-wife gave birth to the girl. She's a full-blooded Saun. She shares the same mother as Trevor.]

[So she's Freesia's child?]

[But I heard Freesia had a difficult childbirth and didn't make it.]

[I heard that, too. They said the child didn't survive. Did the Saun family make a mistake?]

[I don't think so. They've already arranged a banquet to announce the return of their long-lost daughter. I doubt a prestigious family would make a mistake on something like this.]

[I've heard some rumors that she's the child Freesia gave birth to during the difficult childbirth. It seems like there was a mix-up. The Halls thought that child didn't make it, but she's actually alive and well.]

[What a stroke of luck to be able to find her after all these years.]

[Though, won't things get a little awkward for Darcie and her daughter with the real heiress back?]

[Why would things be awkward? It's not like it's the ex-wife who's back.]

[But won't Jaylene's position as the heiress waver? Tons of young men in Rivera are pursuing her for her status.)

[She's still Wenham's daughter, though. So, who knows what will happen.]

Dahlia read the messages in the group chat and frowned.' The true heiress of the Saun family? When did this happen? Why haven't I heard a word about it?' She pursed her lips and called Olivia.

Olivia was busy arranging the venue when she received the call. Seeing that it was Dahlia, she casually tossed her phone aside. It was not until she finished her tasks that she called her back.

Dahlia was a bit annoyed that her call had been ignored." What are you up to? Why did it take you so long to get back to me?" She spoke in a low voice.

Olivia did not like the way Dahlia questioned her. 'Who does she think she is?'

"I know you have a filial son whom you do not need to worry about, Dahlia. But I have my daughter's wedding to plan."

Dahlia's mouth twitched when she heard that. Her son had already turned his back on her and kicked her out of the house. She did not consider him as filial. However, she ignored Olivia's remark and whispered, "Have you seen the group messages? The Saun family is hosting a banquet to announce the return of their long-lost daughter."

"Yes, I've seen them," Olivia nodded.

Not only had she seen them, but she was also currently decorating the venue where the Sauns would hold the celebration. Apart from Dragon Lagoon, Olivia also owned a slightly smaller hotel specializing in wedding banquets.

Olivia was unsure why the Sauns chose the hotel for an event as significant as a family reunion. Though, she did not ask too much about it. She knew her job was setting up the place and making her clients happy. That way, she would get more opportunities in the future.

"Do you know anything about the girl?" asked Dahlia.

"I have no idea. The Saun family has kept it very confidential. They haven't disclosed specific information about their daughter, probably to avoid any complications before the event."

Olivia paused momentarily and said, "The Saun family raised Jaylene from a young age. I'm sure they're not going to treat her poorly even if they've reunited with their biological daughter. So don't worry. They won't hinder you from your dreams of having Jaylene as your daughter-in-law."

Dahlia's eyelid twitched at the sound of that. 'Why would I go for Jaylene if the true heiress of the Saun family had returned? The Sauns are the perfect in-laws for our family. Keegan should marry the real heiress instead.'

Despite thinking that, Dahlia was not invited to the banquet because the Kane family disowned her. Therefore, she did not have the chance to see who the true heiress of the Saun family was.

"Olivia, did you receive an invitation to the celebration?"

"Though I really want to attend the party, I don't have much connection with the Saun family. So, no. I did not receive an invitation. Maybe you should ask Mrs. Kane Sr. She has a good relationship with both the Sauns and the Halls. She's probably on their guest list. Or... You could ask Keegan since he and Trevor are close. I doubt he'll miss such a big event."

Dahlia's face grew darker at each suggestion Olivia made. She could not help but feel that Olivia was intentionally touching her sore spots. However, her tone was so perfectly normal that it made Dahlia wonder if she was reading too much into things.

"Come on. You know many people and have so many connections. Can't you ask them for an invitation for me? I'll try to pull some strings and help your husband's business in return," she pursed her lips and said.

Olivia's expression darkened. She knew Dahlia could not keep her promise. Yet, she still said, "Alright, I'll ask around."

After hanging up the phone, Olivia cursed Dahlia before calling Stella.

Stella had just finished work and made plans to meet Keegan for a suit fitting. She was on her way there when she saw Olivia's call and answered it.

"Dahlia, that shameless bitch..."

Stella remained silent. She listened to Olivia cussing for a full five minutes before asking, "Did you call me just to show me your impressive swearing?"

Olivia gritted her teeth. "Why in the world would Quentin marry such a useless and idiotic woman?"

"For true love, maybe?"

"Don't kid me, girl." After another round of tongue-lashing, Olivia asked, "Do you know that the Sauns want to announce the return of their long-lost daughter?"

"Yeah," replied Stella.

"Okay. So, Dahlia has been inviting Jaylene out every few days to shop or look at jewelry. It's like they're mother and daughter. I thought she genuinely liked Jaylene. But as soon as she heard about the true heiress of the Saun family, she immediately gave up the idea of wanting Keegan to get together with Jaylene."

Stella was completely unaware of this situation, and Keegan definitely did not know about it either. Otherwise, he would not have been so surprised when he found out that Jaylene was interested in him.

“I know that she’s practical, but couldn’t she at least pretend? She didn’t even try to hide her intentions. I’ve met all sorts of people, yet I’ve never met someone like her.”

“You’ve been friends with her for a long time, and you’re just figuring out what kind of person she is?” Stella laughed.

Olivia sighed. “I was young, okay? Ugh. Let’s stop talking about her. Do you know anything about the Sauns’ long-lost daughter?”

“I do,” Stella nodded.

Hearing that, Olivia immediately perked up. “Well, what kind of person is she?”

“She’s as beautiful as a celestial being and has an extremely good personality. She’s also very approachable and is destined to become an A-list actress in the future,” said Stella.

Olivia was as quick-witted as ever. She immediately connected the dots and asked, “You’re the Saun family’s long -lost daughter?”

“It seems that everyone acknowledges that I am as beautiful as a celestial being,” Stella responded.

‘How shameless,’ Olivia smiled wryly and said to herself. As she thought about Stella’s face, she remembered seeing Trevor from previous events, and it suddenly clicked. ‘No wonder he looked oddly familiar; they have the same features.’

Olivia did not believe that Rainee had cheated on Albert. Despite not interacting much with her, she knew Rainee was a force to be reckoned with. ‘She literally gathered evidence about her husband’s affair and filed for divorce. I don’t think someone like that would betray her marriage.’

So, she almost instantly accepted the new narrative when she found out that Stella was not Rainee's daughter.

She then recalled Dahlia's eagerness to latch onto the true heiress of the Saun family and burst into laughter.

Dahlia had been fixated on finding a woman for Keegan who was of high social status and deserving of him. She was even willing to interfere with his marriage to Stella. Yet, it turned out that the person she wanted her son to marry was her former daughter-in-law, whom she had previously looked down upon.

'I can't wait to see her face when she finds out,' thought Olivia.

She felt extremely fortunate. She could not believe she had met such a powerful ally when, initially, she had just wanted to get back at Dahlia.

Olivia thought about how the Saun family had chosen her hotel for the banquet and asked, "Were you the one who suggested my place for the party?"

"It wasn't exactly a suggestion. It was more of a passing comment," said Stella.

Stella was ruthless toward her enemies but was very kind toward her friends. She was grateful for Olivia's help in spreading the news about the incident with Andrea and the kindergarten food safety issue.

Hence, she decided to repay her.

Knowing that Stella had done that, Olivia thought, 'No wonder Mrs. Kane Sr. didn't think highly of Dahlia. Stella helps her friends in secret without asking for anything in return. On the other hand, Dahlia would insist on extracting benefits from others every chance she gets. While she had indeed provided some help to my husband's career, what I gave back to her far exceeds what she has done for me.'

Since Stella had handled the matter nicely, Olivia decided to open up and say, "The banquet is a big deal. If the Saun family only had you as a daughter, then it wouldn't matter where it was held. However, since they have a stepdaughter, others will think that the Sauns love you less if the event is held in a small setting. You should show up with a bang, so they won't underestimate you."

Stella was taken aback. "I didn't think of that," she said.

"Who did you talk to about the hotel?" Olivia asked.

"I went to the Saun residence for a meal the other day, and Darcie gave me a few hotel options to choose from.

Coincidentally, your hotel was among them, so I brought it up."

"Do you remember the names of the other hotels she mentioned?"

Stella racked her brain and managed to name two other hotels.

Olivia's gaze darkened when she heard them. She bit her lip, and it took her a while to say, "I don't want to jump to conclusions... But the hotels you mentioned are about the same scale as mine. In my opinion, the Sauns should've found some of the top venues in Rivera for this banquet."

'These hotels shouldn't have even made it onto the list of potential venues,' thought Olivia. She had a lot of experience living in this world. Having met different kinds of people, she tended to analyze them based on her own judgment.

Stella fell silent when she realized that Darcie and Jaylene were the ones with the most to lose from her return. Though her suspicions might be unfounded, the mother-daughter duo might not be as welcoming as they appeared.

During the dinner, Darcie had shown genuine warmth, and Jaylene had been polite. The meal had been harmonious. As the conversation shifted to the choice of venue, Darcie had been thoughtful by providing Stella with several options.

"Stella, I've personally visited these hotels, and each of them has a unique style. While we want the banquet to be grand, your comfort is our priority. Take a look and choose the one you prefer."

Stella casually flipped through the options and noticed Olivia's hotel among them. So, she made her selection.

At the time, she did not think much about it. But later, when Trevor drove her home, he revisited the topic. He suggested the event be held at either Dragon Lake, which had the best outdoor scenery, or Emperor Suite, the highest-rated hotel in Rivera.

Considering it was already November, an outdoor venue would be too chilly, making Emperor Suite the most fitting choice. However, Stella did not think much about it then. She told Trevor that Regal Banquets was owned by her friend and that they should support her. Trevor respected her choice and dropped the subject.

‘Looking back at it now, was Trevor implying that I should change the venue? Was this what Olivia meant?’ Stella was sharp, but her mind could not naturally navigate such scenarios. Fortunately, Olivia’s suggestion made her weigh the situation.

After some contemplation, Stella finally said, “Regardless of whether she intended this, it’s too late to change it now. The event is tomorrow, and changing venues at this point would be a hassle.”

Even if feasible, making a switch at this stage would be overly inconvenient. Guests had already been notified; a sudden change would undoubtedly lead to speculation. It might even lead to a bad impression.

Olivia furrowed her brows as she tried to come up with a solution. “Since we can’t change the venue, I’ll help you elevate the ambiance. Your return to the Saun family must be a grand one.”

Stella was intrigued. “How will you do that?”

Olivia smirked and said, “Just wait and see.”

‘Since the Sauns will be paying for this event, I’m sure they’re willing to spend a little more on their long-lost daughter.’

After ending the call, Olivia told the manager, who was busy with venue preparations, to clear out the decorations.

The manager was taken aback. He could not believe that he was being asked to remove everything after a day of hard work. “Is there an issue with the arrangements, or is the party canceled, Mrs. Chapman?"

Olivia waved her hand dismissively and said, "Don't ask questions. Just carry out my instructions."

Thus, the decorated venue was quickly returned to its original state.

Olivia reached out to a few of her contacts and immediately set her plan into motion.

Not long after, Stella arrived at the location where she had planned to meet Keegan.
