Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1686 [Eleven Jewell]

Darcie whispered, "You shouldn't have gone so far anyway. I just received updates that the Kane family has dropped all the search and rescue teams. It won't be long before they publicly announce his death."

Wenham was taken aback. "So soon?" he said.

"It's been almost a month. The entire Kane family has been through a lot, and it's time for them to have closure.

Wenham felt a pang of sorrow and remained silent for a longtime.

Stella had waited for Keegan's return, but she received news of his tragic fate through an announcement from the Kane family instead.

The Kane family had told the public about Keegan's accident, and his memorial service was scheduled for the day after tomorrow.

Stella stared at the words on her phone and felt a sense of suffocation overwhelming her. It felt as if she was being choked, and her head became dizzy and heavy. Every word on the screen seemed as though it was spinning, and she could not comprehend what the announcement was saying at all.

A wave of nausea hit her. She rushed to the bathroom, bent over the sink, and dry-heaved.

Felicity got worried and immediately followed her. She stroked Stella's back and concernedly asked, "Stella, are you okay?"

Stella rinsed her mouth, and she held herself up on the sink with both hands. At the same time, her eyes felt sore.

She did not say anything. Instead, she took her phone and dialed Cordelia's number. The call went through this time, but it was Baldwin's voice that she heard.

"Ms. Hall, how may I help you?"

Baldwin's tone sounded distant and nonchalant. He had probably seen the recent news and lost the sense of familiarity he had for her.

Stella replied in a hoarse voice, "Baldwin, Keegan isn't dead. Please tell grandma that the funeral cannot be held."

Baldwin remained silent for a moment and then said in a flat tone, "Ms. Hall, this is the Kane family's matter. I'm sure that Mrs. Kane Sr. has her own considerations."

Stella's face instantly turned pale.

She knew that this would happen since the moment she used Marshall to create rumors, but she did not care.

"Baldwin, please beg grandma for me. Ask her to wait for another month. No, just half a month will do. We'll keep looking. The river is not that big, so how can we not find him? I know he's still alive. Baldwin, please..."

Stella almost choked up at the end. Compared to Keegan's disappearance, the fact that everyone assumed that Keegan was dead was something that Stella found the most heartbreaking.

Baldwin sighed and said after a long pause, "Come over the day after tomorrow to say your last goodbye to Mr. Kane. Regardless, I'm sure that he would want you to be happy."

He ended the call after saying that.

Stella listened blankly to the beeping tone on the other end, and her heart broke.

Felicity looked at her ghostly white face and whispered, "Stella, let me take you to the hospital." Stella's health had deteriorated over the past few days. Her appetite had been extremely poor, and she would vomit right after eating. Today was the most severe, and it made Felicity very worried.

"I'm fine. It's probably because I skipped breakfast," Stella wiped her face and said softly. "Felicity, come with me the day after tomorrow."

Keegan's corpse was not found, so the memorial service was held at the Kane residence instead of a funeral parlor.

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1687 [Eleven Jewell]

The main living room was transformed into a memorial hall. Dahlia wore a black dress as she stood next to Aurora beside Keegan's photo. They were welcoming the guests who came to pay their respects to Keegan.

Cordelia sat in the wheelchair, and Baldwin stood behind her.

Her expression was solemn, and her hair seemed even whiter than before. Her once chubby face turned bony, making her wrinkles more obvious.

Keegan was the eldest grandson of the Kane family, and he died before he could have any child. Despite the grand setup of the memorial hall, there was an indescribable sense of sorrow.

As soon as Stella stepped inside, she saw Keegan's photo hanging on the wall.

The image was cropped from their wedding photo, but it was now in black and white.

Dahlia, initially welcoming the guests, burst into anger as soon as she saw Stella. She approached Stella with a cold face and scolded, "Get lost! Keegan doesn't want you here!"

Cordelia held her cold necklace in her hand as she watched everything with a cold and indifferent expression. When Stella met her eyes, Cordelia looked nonchalant. This caused Stella's heart to sink a little.

Wenham and Trevor came with Stella, and their expressions immediately turned ugly. Wenham said, "We're here to pay our respects to Keegan. Mind your words!"

Dahlia despised Stella. Upon hearing Wenham's words, she sneered, "Keegan hasn't been gone for a month, and she's already found a new lover! It's a shame that my dear son will never know what kind of person she truly is now that he's dead. He even made her the primary heir in his will! How dare she still show up here?!" Marshall's face turned cold as he said, "Ms. Crosby, what you say can harm Stella's reputation. Please be careful with your words."

Dahlia laughed bitterly, "You shameless people can do anything. Why be afraid of what I say? I'm starting to think you two conspired to harm Keegan just to inherit his wealth!"

"Have Keegan given Stella his wealth?"

Everyone there was shocked to hear that.

"How did he think of making a will at such a young age? I can't believe he named his ex-wife the primary heir instead of his family members."

"I heard that she was there when he had the accident. She's perfectly fine here, yet Keegan is now dead. She's even inheriting most of his wealth. She got together with someone else a few days after Keegan was gone. It's terrifying if you think about it."

"This sounds like a movie plot to me."

"Damn. I can't believe she still has the audacity to come here."

Felicity listened to these baseless assumptions and was about to explode in anger. However, someone covered her mouth from behind as she was about to speak.

She turned around and stomped on the person's foot.

Vermont frowned in pain but did not let go. Instead, he whispered in her ear, "Don't get involved in this. It's not the time for you to stand up for your best friend. Both her father and brother are here, and no one can bully her."

Felicity widened her eyes and glared at him. After not seeing her for a few days, Vermont missed her like crazy. He wanted to let her go, but upon second thought, he knew he had lost credibility in her eyes after what happened. So, he chose to keep on covering her mouth while wrapping his other hand around her waist.

Felicity would have given him a shoulder throw right there and then if they were somewhere else.

Trevor looked coldly at Dahlia, "Ms. Crosby, instead of fueling the fire and throwing all the blame onto my sister, you should think about why Keegan named Stella the primary heir and not you. Do you think it's because he thinks an outsider actually deserves more than his own mother?"

His words touched a sore spot in Dahlia, and her expression immediately turned unpleasant.

Chandler, who had been silent all this while, spoke at this moment, "Keegan is my family member. After the divorce, he had already given her what she deserved. As for this secondary will, no one here knows under what circumstances it was made and whether he was manipulated by someone while making it. We've hired a lawyer to look into this matter.

"If Keegan really made this will, it won't be valid because he still has blood related kin who are not listed as heirs. We have the right to demand a redistribution of his wealth."

Stella paused as she lifted her gaze at Chandler. "What did you say?" she asked.

Stella was not worried about the wealth distribution but the blood-related kin Chandler mentioned.

Beside Dahlia, who could that person be?' Chandler smirked, "You've been married to Keegan for so long. Don't you know he has a daughter?" Stella instinctively denied it, "That's impossible!"

Chandler replied indifferently, "Do I have a reason to lie about such things?"

As soon as he finished speaking, Stella saw Aurora coming inside with a little girl dressed in a full black outfit.

The little girl looked somewhat tanned and skinny but had large, lively eyes. Her facial features looked very prominent, too. Aurora was holding her hand while she looked at the unfamiliar faces around her curiously.

When she saw Stella, her eyes instantly lit up. However, she quickly looked away, took small steps through the crowd, and walked to the center of the memorial hall. Then, she called out to Dahlia in an adorable voice, "Hello, Grandma."

Dahlia's eyes turned red as she bent down to pick the little girl up, "My dear child, I'm so sorry that you have to go through this."

Everyone in the memorial hall watched the shocking scene unfold.

Nobody could believe that Keegan actually had a daughter. He had hidden her away so well that even Vermont was extremely surprised. Felicity even kicked him again, thinking that he worked with Keegan to hide this little girl from everyone else.

Only the members of the Kane family seemed to have known about this. None of them looked surprised, including Cordelia.

Then, Chandler's voice rang out, "Today is Keegan's memorial service and also the day his daughter officially returns to the Kane family."

Stella's mind immediately went blank as she murmured, "No... this is impossible..."

She rushed over as she spoke and grabbed the little girl's hand. "Who are you?"

"Who exactly are you? Who brought you here?" she asked, agitated.

The little girl was startled and said softly, "Ms. Jewell, it hurts."

'Ms. Jewell...' Stella's emotions became even more uncontrollable, "How did you know my last name used to be Jewell? Who told you that?"

The little girl got more scared as she replied timidly, "Daddy said so. He also said he would bring me to see you when the right time came. He told me that you'd like me. Ms. Jewell, do you not like me?"

Stella's entire body turned chilly as she clutched the little girl's arm. "You're lying! Tell me, who are you?!" she gritted her teeth and asked.

Dahlia finally reacted as she stepped forward to push Stella away, "How could you hurt a child just because of the inheritance? Are you crazy?"

Stella lost her balance and stumbled after Dahlia pushed her. Fortunately, Marshall, who stood behind her, held her back up.

Trevor's expression immediately changed after seeing someone assaulting his sister in front of everyone. He stepped forward and pushed Dahlia away without holding back at all.

"You're the one who brought a child here, claiming that she's Keegan's daughter just for his wealth. It sounds like you're the crazy one here. Keegan has been missing for less than a month, yet you're in such a hurry to organize a funeral.

To me, it's pretty obvious who's the one coveting his wealth!"

He grabbed Stella's hand and spoke coldly, "Let's go. From now on, we will have absolutely nothing to do with the Kane family!"

A familiar, deep voice came from the door as Trevor was about to pull Stella away.

"Who's dead?" 5 Stella trembled all over and froze in place.
