

Read Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1693 [Eleven Jewell]

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1693 [Eleven Jewell]

Everyone fell silent when they heard Keegan's words.

Stella wore a look of utter disbelief, "What did you just say?"

Keegan maintained his indifference, "When I arrived, I saw news of you kissing Marshall in the concert hall. Did you divorce me because you got involved with him?"

Trevor's face turned cold, "Keegan, are you out of your mind? It's fine if others don't get it, but you should know what kind of person Stella is. What nonsense are you spouting?"

Stella's expression turned unpleasant. She thought Keegan was jealous due to those rumors. However, he said, "I'm sorry. I don't remember much. I was just making wild guesses without any offense intended."

After a pause, he continued, "Trevor, are you close with my ex-wife? You seem to know her quite well." 2 Trevor was dumbfounded, "She's my sister. What's wrong with you? Are you out of your mind?"

"Sister?" Keegan was puzzled. "Isn't your sister Jaylene?"

It was then that the group noticed that something was wrong with Keegan.

His appearance, tone, and behavior were consistent with the past, but how he looked at Stella differed. His gaze lacked the previous tenderness and warmth he reserved only for his beloved. Instead, it carried a cold detachment and unfamiliarity he had for other people. ' "Keegan," Stella watched him closely with teary eyes as she noticed every subtle expression on his face. "What happened to you? What are you saying? Don't you remember accompanying me to the banquet where they announced my return to the Saun family?"

Keegan furrowed his brows. "Banquet?" He tried hard to recall, but his head started to hurt, turning his face pale.

Jaylene hurriedly helped him press a certain acupoint on his head and anxiously said, “Keegan, stop thinking about it. Have you forgotten what the doctor said?”

1 She turned to Stella and said, “Stella, don’t force Keegan to remember. He suffered a head injury, and the doctor said it might have affected his brain, causing memory loss. There are many things he can’t remember...”

“Shut up!” Stella yelled in anger and grabbed Jaylene by the collar. Her eyes were red, and her voice was hoarse, “What have you done to him? Why did you lock him up and keep him away from us? What happened to him? Tell me!”

Suddenly, someone grabbed her wrist.

“You’re hurting her.” 3 Stella froze. She looked at Keegan in disbelief and asked, “What did you say?”

Keegan would have never said such a thing to her back then. He would have supported her actions.

But now, he wore a cold expression. He looked at Stella and calmly stated, “I said you’re hurting her. Jaylene didn’t lock me up; I told her not to tell anyone that she found me. I was in critical condition at the time. Other than that, I wanted to find out who was behind my kidnapping.”

After a pause, he continued, “You seem very concerned about me. But where were you during my disappearance?” Keegan chuckled slightly, a hint of mockery on his face. “Attending a concert with someone?”

Stella turned pale as she clenched her fingers.

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1694 [Eleven Jewell]

“Keegan, if you’ve got a bone to pick, just lay it out straight. There’s no need for these cryptic jabs. If you’re wondering where Stella was when you went missing, I can fill you in,” Marshall’s voice cut through the tension.

“You got shoved into the river, and she jumped right in after you without hesitation. You were missing, and she wasn’t doing any better either. She had a high fever for three consecutive days and was covered in frostbite!

“You were nowhere to be found, and she did not know what to do. She even turned to divine intervention, scaling a steep mountain just to carve your name on a stone, believing it would bring you back safely!” Marshall continued.

“Enough...” Stella’s voice wavered as she spoke softly.

Marshall’s expression stayed stern, but his tone grew more emotional, “The path to the summit is only about 12 inches wide. One wrong step, and she could’ve died! You refused to come out of hiding for the sake of luring out the person behind your kidnapping. And now you’re asking where she was during your disappearance? You should be grateful she’s alive! How dare you blame her?!”

Seeing things unfold, Dahlia realized that Keegan genuinely did not remember Stella. Not just that, but he probably did not recall many other things, like when he kicked her out of the Kane residence and when she drugged Stella, causing her infertility.

As soon as Marshall finished speaking, Dahlia spoke up, “Well, aren’t you Mr.

Know-It-All? I’ve never heard nor seen anything you said. All I know is that she was eager to get involved with you after Keegan went missing. You two went parachuting and skiing and even attended a concert together. Why would she do that with another man if she truly cared about Keegan?”

“Shut your filthy mouth, Dahlia!” Trevor sternly interjected. “You tried to reduce the manpower in the search and rescue team two weeks after Keegan’s accident. If we hadn’t continued sending more people out there to look for him, I’m sure you would’ve arranged his funeral by now.”

Wenham’s demeanor became serious. This was the first time he did not step in as Trevor challenged an elder. It was clear that Dahlia had pushed him to his limits.

Dahlia’s expression changed when she heard that. Fearing that Keegan would hold a grudge against her, she hastily said, “The rescue team suggested reducing manpower, emphasizing that the optimal rescue time had passed.

They said that he would likely be dead even if we found him. I was simply following their advice. Do any of you know the pain I felt from having to think about my own son’s funeral?”

Tears welled in her eyes as she said, "I would never give up on you, Keegan. I was losing sleep thinking about you. I thank God for hearing my prayers. Thank goodness you're safe. Otherwise, how would Aurora and I go on without you."

Upon hearing that, Felicity could not hold herself back. She bit the hand that was covering her mouth and said, "Stop with the nonsense, you crazy old hag!

How dare you try to shift the blame onto others! You were in a rush to declare Keegan dead and claim his inheritance two weeks into his disappearance. If Keegan hadn't written Stella down as his primary heir, he would have come back to nothing! How dare -Mm-

Before she could finish her words, Vermont covered her mouth again.

Dahlia looked suspicious and angrily scolded, "You despicable woman! You're the one who's spouting nonsense! n "Fu- Off- You- Mm-

Vermont smiled apologetically and said, "She's had a bit too much to drink. All of you may continue."

Felicity squirmed in his arms and almost slipped. That was when he decided to lift her and carry her out of the room.

Keegan remained unfazed, seemingly unbothered by Felicity's disrespectful words toward Dahlia.

Having detached herself from her perplexing emotions a while ago, Stella gazed at the man before her. He looked the same, yet his attitude was not. "Keegan, I need to speak with you privately," she said in a serious voice.

Read Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1694 [Eleven Jewell]

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1694 [Eleven Jewell]

"Keegan, if you've got a bone to pick, just lay it out straight. There's no need for these cryptic jabs. If you're wondering where Stella was when you went missing, I can fill you in," Marshall's voice cut through the tension.

“You got shoved into the river, and she jumped right in after you without hesitation. You were missing, and she wasn’t doing any better either. She had a high fever for three consecutive days and was covered in frostbite!

“You were nowhere to be found, and she did not know what to do. She even turned to divine intervention, scaling a steep mountain just to carve your name on a stone, believing it would bring you back safely!” Marshall continued.

“Enough…” Stella’s voice wavered as she spoke softly.

Marshall’s expression stayed stern, but his tone grew more emotional, “The path to the summit is only about 12 inches wide. One wrong step, and she could’ve died! You refused to come out of hiding for the sake of luring out the person behind your kidnapping. And now you’re asking where she was during your disappearance? You should be grateful she’s alive! How dare you blame her?!”

Seeing things unfold, Dahlia realized that Keegan genuinely did not remember Stella. Not just that, but he probably did not recall many other things, like when he kicked her out of the Kane residence and when she drugged Stella, causing her infertility.

As soon as Marshall finished speaking, Dahlia spoke up, “Well, aren’t you Mr.

Know-It-All? I’ve never heard nor seen anything you said. All I know is that she was eager to get involved with you after Keegan went missing. You two went parachuting and skiing and even attended a concert together. Why would she do that with another man if she truly cared about Keegan?”

“Shut your filthy mouth, Dahlia!” Trevor sternly interjected. “You tried to reduce the manpower in the search and rescue team two weeks after Keegan’s accident. If we hadn’t continued sending more people out there to look for him, I’m sure you would’ve arranged his funeral by now.”

Wenham’s demeanor became serious. This was the first time he did not step in as Trevor challenged an elder. It was clear that Dahlia had pushed him to his limits.

Dahlia’s expression changed when she heard that. Fearing that Keegan would hold a grudge against her, she hastily said, “The rescue team suggested reducing manpower, emphasizing that the optimal rescue time had passed.

They said that he would likely be dead even if we found him. I was simply following their advice. Do any of you know the pain I felt from having to think about my own son's funeral?"

Tears welled in her eyes as she said, "I would never give up on you, Keegan. I was losing sleep thinking about you. I thank God for hearing my prayers. Thank goodness you're safe. Otherwise, how would Aurora and I go on without you."

Upon hearing that, Felicity could not hold herself back. She bit the hand that was covering her mouth and said, "Stop with the nonsense, you crazy old hag!

How dare you try to shift the blame onto others! You were in a rush to declare Keegan dead and claim his inheritance two weeks into his disappearance. If Keegan hadn't written Stella down as his primary heir, he would have come back to nothing! How dare -Mm-

Before she could finish her words, Vermont covered her mouth again.

Dahlia looked suspicious and angrily scolded, "You despicable woman! You're the one who's spouting nonsense! n "Fu- Off- You- Mm-

Vermont smiled apologetically and said, "She's had a bit too much to drink. All of you may continue."

Felicity squirmed in his arms and almost slipped. That was when he decided to lift her and carry her out of the room.

Keegan remained unfazed, seemingly unbothered by Felicity's disrespectful words toward Dahlia.

Having detached herself from her perplexing emotions a while ago, Stella gazed at the man before her. He looked the same, yet his attitude was not. "Keegan, I need to speak with you privately," she said in a serious voice.