Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1721 [Eleven Jewell]

Keegan looked coldly at her and sneered, "Why would your blows improve my injuries? Who do you think you are? A goddess?" "Yeah," Stella replied, poker-faced. "You used to say that I'm a goddess, so I guess that makes my blows extra special."

Keegan was stunned, "That's absurd! I'd never say something so cheesy!"

"Tsk. This is nothing compared to the cheesy things you used to say to me. For example, you've told me you can't live without me. You also said I'm the only one you love and want us to be together forever. You're especially cheesy during..."

"During what?"

Stella wanted to lean in and whisper in his ear, but Keegan stopped her, "Don't come closer. You can say it right there." i "But it's inappropriate to say out loud."

Keegan unscrewed his water bottle and said, "Just say it!"

Stella smirked and said, "You're especially cheesy during... sex. You love calling me baby, saying that I'm soft and sweet. You said you're willing to do anything for me."

"Pfft- Cough, cough-" Upon sipping water, Keegan involuntarily sprayed out half of it and choked on the remaining portion. His face and neck turned red.

Stella walked over, worriedly patting his back. "I told you I couldn't say it out loud. I know you don't remember me. You probably still think you're a virgin. This topic is too much for you," she said, somewhat aggrieved.

Keegan's ears reddened as he coughed. He glared at Stella, embarrassed and annoyed. "You're so... vulgar!"

Stella rolled her eyes, thinking Keegan's amnesia had turned him into an innocent college boy. The banter between them used to be much more efficient, i “Yeah, yeah,” Stella accepted the comment. “Stop coughing, or your wound might split open.”

Keegan was not in a good mood. He glared at her and said, “You’re the one to blame if that happens!”

“I am. I am.” Stella was extremely patient. She felt that arguing with Keegan, even if he did not recognize her, was a more favorable outcome than him never coming back.

“Are you okay? Tell me if it hurts.” Keegan looked at her with a mixture of unease and annoyance. His lips moved as if he wanted to say something, but Jaylene showed up, “Keegan, I’m ready.”

Keegan pushed away Stella’s hand coldly, saying, “Don’t bother.”

As Jaylene approached, she noticed the unusual atmosphere between the two.

She asked softly, “What happened, Keegan?”

“Nothing,” Keegan replied with a stiff expression.

Stella’s face did not look good either. It seemed like something unpleasant had happened between them.

Seeing this, Jaylene did not ask further. She turned around, smiled, and said, “I’ll take Juno for a ride.”

Keegan nodded, “Be careful.”

Stella lowered her eyes. ‘Either he forgot how challenging Juno could be, or he is overly confident of Jaylene’s skills,’ she thought. ‘It was surprising to see Juno let her touch him, though.’ 2 Jaylene mounted Juno, and it trotted into the racetrack. Its new horseshoes made a loud and rhythmic clinking sound.

Juno moved at a leisurely pace. It was more of a stroll than a run. Jaylene did not experience the thrill of riding a horse. She noticed Keegan seemed to be talking to Stella again and started to feel worried. She fiercely whipped Juno, hoping to speed up and divert Keegan’s attention to her. i Juno winced in pain and, indeed, began to accelerate. Seeing Juno running faster, Keegan turned his head to look.

Jaylene's heart leaped with joy as she again urged Juno forward. However, Juno unexpectedly went berserk this time and darted around the racetrack. It leaped forward and backward in an attempt to throw Jaylene off its back.

Jaylene was tossed so violently that she nearly fell off the horse. She clung desperately to the horse's neck and shouted Keegan's name loudly.

Keegan's expression changed, and he was prepared to go forward when Stella grabbed his wrist.

"You're injured," she said.

Keegan's face tightened, "Jaylene might die if she falls!"

A shiver passed through Stella's heart. She clenched her fist and choked, "Do you care that much if something happens to her?"

"She saved my life," Keegan said with a serious expression.

Stella closed her eyes momentarily, "Fine, I'll repay this debt for you."

Saying that, she pushed Keegan out of the racetrack, determined to handle the situation herself. Through gritted teeth, she added, "I'm not going to help her if you come in here!"

With that, she quickly mounted another horse.

Keegan's heart tightened. "Come back!" he angrily said.

Stella ignored him and tightened her grip on the reins. She headed toward Jaylene with determination.

Meanwhile, Jaylene was feeling dizzy due to Juno's erratic behavior. She clung desperately to the horse's neck, prioritizing her safety. ?

There was a moment when Stella really wanted to turn and leave. She resented Jaylene for keeping Keegan hidden for so long, only for him to return with amnesia. Jaylene was a thief in Stella's eyes. She was trying to steal away her life and her lover.

The darkness in Stella's heart surged, but in the end, reason prevailed. She whistled, and upon hearing the sound, Juno immediately stopped its erratic movements. Running toward Stella, the horse demonstrated a remarkable level of understanding.

While riding the horse, Stella kept a pace that matched Juno's. She yelled to Jaylene, "Don't just stand there! Grab the reins!"

Still shocked by Stella's excellent riding skills, Jaylene only realized what she was shouting after some time. Clutching the horse's neck, she struggled to grasp the reins. Soon, Juno started leaping again as if deliberately defying her. ' This time, Jaylene was thrown to the side, and only one leg remained on the horse's back. Her other leg was almost close to the ground, and she could fall at any moment.

"Juno!" Stella shouted. "Don't jump, okay, good boy?" i Jaylene had seized Juno by its neck hair, causing it to jump. It would not have leaped so vigorously if otherwise.

However, upon hearing Stella's command, it seemingly understood her and stopped.

Stella closed the gap between her and Juno, eventually securing its reins with its cooperation. Yet, as she tightened the harness, her mount became startled, resulting in her being thrown off its back, i Keegan swiftly approached on a horse. Seeing this scene, his throat tightened.

The next moment, he witnessed Stella climbing back onto the horse.

Keegan clenched his fists, raised his whip, and went forward. He then tightened Stella's reins from the side.

Stella was stunned. She turned to look at him, and Keegan said sternly, "Why are you just standing there? Save her!" 4 Stella tugged forcefully on Juno's reins, prompting the horse to slow down and transition into a gentle trot.

At that point, Jaylene was exhausted. She finally let go and fell off from Juno.

After Jaylene landed, Keegan and Stella did not go far before coming to a stop.

Stella turned to say something to Keegan, but he ignored her and headed straight for Jaylene. She tightened the reins and dismounted the horse.

Jaylene had a minor scrape on her hand, but there were no significant injuries apart from that. Juno's speed had decreased significantly when Jaylene fell off, preventing substantial consequences.

However, Jaylene was still in shock. Stella had experienced the terror of being tossed around on horseback when she learned to ride, so she understood what Jaylene was feeling, Jaylene sat on the ground, red-eyed and on the verge of tears. Upon seeing Keegan, she felt even more distressed. At that moment, she could not help but call his name.

Keegan did not answer her. He squatted down, grabbed her hand, and softly said, "Try moving your limbs to see if they're alright."

Stella's face was tense, "Juno had already slowed down when she fell off from him. She's fine."

Jaylene leaned against Keegan and followed his instructions by moving her arms and legs. After confirming that she had not broken anything, Keegan asked, "Apart from your hand, do you feel pain in any other areas?"

Jaylene shook her head with reddened eyes. "Keegan, I was so scared," she said hoarsely.

"Come here. You're fine now," Keegan comforted her in a low voice.

Stella pursed her lips, suddenly feeling that her presence was unwanted.

She was about to turn and leave when Jaylene suddenly stopped her, "Stella, you clearly know how to tame Juno. Why did you lie? Were you deliberately deceiving me to get on the horse?"

Stella looked coldly at her, "When have I told you that I couldn't tame Juno?"

Jaylene calmed down and recalled the conversation they had. Her tone became sharper, "You said that Juno only allowed Keegan and Grandma to touch it.

Doesn't that mean it won't let you touch it? Yet, it seems responsive to your voice. It's hard to believe it would deny your touch."

"You misunderstood me. When I said that, I meant that they're the only two people from the Kane family that Juno's okay with. I'm not a part of the Kane family."

Jaylene could not believe her ears. Her expression turned ugly. "Are you playing games with me?"

Stella chuckled, "Jaylene, riding the horse was your own decision. I advised you many times, mentioning that Juno has a fierce personality and is not easy to control. Yet, you insisted on going against my advice. How could you say what happened to you is my fault? If I had known you would blame me, I wouldn't have saved you. Instead, I would've just let you fall to your death!"

Keegan frowned upon hearing that, "Enough! Stop being so harsh!"

"I will not stop!" Stella was furious. "Are you blind, Keegan? Why aren't you able to distinguish right from wrong?!"

Jaylene wanted to show off in front of you, yet she ended up embarrassed, and now she wants to put the blame on me. Why the hell did I even save her?!"

Keegan's lips twitched, 'I didn't even accuse her for what happened just now.' Stella was too tired to deal with the two of them. The longer she looked at them, the more her anger grew. She left the stable without looking at Keegan's unpleasant expression.

"Keegan, it's all my fault. Stella is right. She advised me not to ride Juno, but I didn't listen to her. I didn't know what I was saying. Hurry up and go after Stella and apologize to her, " said Jaylene.

"Why should I apologize to her?" Keegan said unkindly. "She has such a bad temper. All I did was just tell her to stop being so harsh."

Jaylene lowered her gaze and said, "I think what I said just now must have angered her too."

Expressionless, Keegan said, "It has nothing to do with you. She always gets mad when she sees you. It's probably just her nature."

Jaylene did not say anything else.

She and Keegan finally went back to the house after they treated her wound.

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1724 [Eleven Jewell]

Stella and Cordelia were engrossed in a conversation in the living room when footsteps interrupted them. Stella, who had been wearing a smile, swiftly composed herself, her gaze turning chilly.

She turned to Cordelia and said, "Grandma, I've got some errands to run later. I better head off now."

"Lunch is almost ready. I had them prepare some of your favorite dishes. You should grab a bite before you leave," Cordelia tried to convince her to stay.

Stella declined politely, "Sorry, Grandma, but I have plans to meet some friends for lunch at half past twelve. I'm afraid I won't make it on time if I stay any longer. It isn't ideal for me to be late since we're colleagues."

Not wanting to insist, Cordelia relented, "Alright then. I'll have Corrin pack your favorite dishes for you to take home.

You can enjoy them later."

"You make it so hard to refuse, Grandma," Stella sighed.

Pleased with Stella's agreement, Cordelia grabbed her arm and said, "Come, let's go to the kitchen. You can pick the dishes you want us to pack for you."

As they walked a few steps forward, Cordelia suddenly remembered something and turned to her grandson, "Keegan, take Jaylene to wash her hands. Lunch will be ready soon."

Jaylene felt somewhat uncomfortable as she noticed the obvious contrast in Cordelia's treatment toward her. She was warm and affectionate toward Stella, even more so than when she was with Aurora.

Keegan glanced briefly at the kitchen and said to Jaylene, "Come on. Let's go."

Jaylene lowered her gaze and tagged along.

In the bustling kitchen, Corrin and the household staff were busy preparing a variety of aromatic dishes. Corrin's culinary skills were on par with Felicity's, evidenced by Vermont's prolonged appreciation for her cooking.

While Cordelia directed the other staff to pack the food, she asked Stella, "Do you like fish porridge?"

"I've never tried it," Stella admitted.

Cordelia introduced the dish with a smile by lifting the lid of a ceramic pot, "It's Corrin's recipe. She enhances it with seafood broth. I find it delicious. Give it a sniff."

Before Stella approached the pot, she smelled an overwhelming fishy odor, triggering an immediate wave of nausea. She quickly covered her mouth, retreated to the side, and took a moment to hold her queasiness.

Her reaction left Cordelia taken aback, "Are you okay, Stella?" Stella nodded, "I'm fine. My stomach isn't doing well lately. I became sensitive to meaty odors. I feel like vomiting as soon as I smell them."

Cordelia's face changed slightly. She covered the pot, looked at Stella seriously, and asked, "How long has this been going on?"

Stella furrowed her brows, "About a week, I think. I haven't kept track."

Cordelia calculated the days in her mind, and her eyes assumed a more profound and unpredictable gaze.

"Have you taken any medicine?"

"It's just a minor stomach issue. There's no need for medication," Stella assured her.

Cordelia did not continue the topic. Instead, she motioned for Stella to pick her favorite dishes and said, "Take a look and see what other dishes you want. I'll have Corrin pack them for you."

Stella smiled while shaking her head, "Grandma, this is enough for me to eat."

"Alright. If you ever crave something specific, let me know. I'll have Corrin send it over."

Stella expressed her gratitude and left.

After seeing Stella off, Cordelia chuckled unexpectedly.” What is it?” Baldwin asked.

Cordelia shook her head and muttered after a while, “She went around in circles...”
