Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1741 [Eleven Jewell]

Keegan felt a sting and retorted, "When did I assert dominance? I'm just thinking it would damage my reputation if this got out!"

"Oh, but it's fine when you and Jaylene flaunt your relationship without caring about my reputation? If so, why should I care about yours?" Stella nonchalantly replied.

Keegan was displeased to hear that. "I'm not flaunting anything! I came here to express gratitude!"

"And Marshall came here to apologize. Is that not allowed?" Stella countered.

Keegan was no match for Stella, even before his memory loss. Hence, he directed his dissatisfaction toward Marshall, glaring at him.

Stella covered Marshall's face with her hand to block Keegan's line of sight.

With a stern look, she said, "We're the ones arguing. Why the hell are you glaring at Marshall?"

"You're still young, so it's understandable if you lack selfrestraint. However, he's much older and should know better, " said Keegan, furious at Stella for protecting Marshall.

Stella's eyes twitched. Keegan never knew how to express his jealousy in a healthy way. He would never tell her that he was jealous. Instead, he'd argue with her on moral grounds and put the blame on a third party.

If Keegan were to direct his grievances toward Stella, not only would she deny any wrongdoing but also retaliate and eventually disregard him entirely.

However, he could simply vent his frustration when it came to a third party. He seemed to enjoy a momentary release as he aimed his criticism at Marshall.

He labeled Marshall as being much older as a personal attack, especially since they were the same age.

Stella felt compassion for Keegan but did not back down.” Marshall is only a few months younger than you. If he’s considered old, what does that make you? A grandpa?”

Clearly provoked, Keegan pointed at her, only managing to say, “You’re being unreasonable!” Keegan and Jaylene’s joint visit to the Saun residence left Stella angry, so she purposely addressed Marshall by name. Even though Marshall was aware of her intentional use of his name, he couldn’t help but feel a certain emotion when he heard it.

He gently lowered Stella’s hand and jokingly said, “Maybe Keegan thinks he’s still young without his memory, and compared to him, I might seem older. Let’s not argue with him.”

Frustrated by the insinuations, Keegan was about to retort when Jaylene appeared with a fruit platter, prompting him to begrudgingly resume his seat.

“Stella, you came.”

Stella nodded in acknowledgment, not particularly fond of Jaylene’s host-like comments whenever she saw her.

Despite her dissatisfaction, she remained committed to avoiding needless conflicts.

However, Marshall said, “Ms. Saun, why would you say that she came when she’s returning to her own home? Is she an outsider to you?”

Jaylene was momentarily surprised and quickly expressed remorse. “I’m sorry. I didn’t mean it like that. It’s just that Stella hasn’t been living here recently, and I got used to saying that.”

Glancing at Stella, Jaylene continued, “Stella, I’m sorry. I didn’t think you’d mind.

I truly didn’t mean anything by it, and I won’t say it in the future.”

Marshall was asking for basic respect, but from Jaylene’s point of view, it looked like Stella was making a big deal out of nothing.

Stella lifted her gaze, pursed her lips, and said, "I see. I guess I misunderstood Jaylene. I've always been a sensitive person. I thought Jaylene only said those things because she doesn't like me as her sister and doesn't want me to be a part of this family."

Jaylene was taken aback as she had not expected Stella to say things like that.

Then, she immediately tried to deny it, "I didn't mean that at all. Stella, why would you think that way?"

Marshall said to Stella, "You're not sensitive. Anyone would think the same way."

Then, he shifted his gaze to Jaylene," Stella has been separated from her family for over twenty years and has endured so many hardships. Now that she finally got the opportunity to come back, her father has formed a new family with someone else. She already doesn't have much sense of security in this family.

And as her elder sister, you would greet her like a guest whenever she came home. How could you blame her for being sensitive? You're being unreasonable." i Stella was taken aback.

She had always thought that Marshall was the kind of gentle and soft-spoken person who would not have the guts to say or do anything outside the courtroom. But at this moment, she realized that she had underestimated the eloquence of a lawyer.

He never lost a battle in the courtroom, so there was no way that he would allow someone else to outargue him in daily life.

He could easily win over anyone in an argument if he would just speak.

Clearly, Jaylene was not his match at all.

As expected, Jaylene's expression turned extremely ugly and fearful upon hearing what Marshall said.

"Marshall, how could you accuse me of such a thing? I really didn't mean it," she nervously said as she looked at Keegan to seek his help. ' Keegan, trust me. I really treat Stella as my sister."

Stella looked at Keegan. She was really curious to see how he was going to defend Jaylene.

But Keegan seemed very uncomfortable as he rubbed his temples and said, "Sorry, I wasn't listening. What were you arguing about?"

Stella was shocked.

Jaylene immediately stopped arguing with them and sat beside Keegan, her face filled with concern as she asked, "Keegan, are you okay?"

Keegan furrowed his brows and said in a low voice, "I don't know. I have been having terrible headaches recently.

Sometimes, I find it hard to concentrate, like just now."

"Did you bring the medicine that Dr. Stone gave you?"

Keegan nodded, took out a small medicine bottle from his pocket, and shook out a pill from it.

Jaylene quickly handed him a cup of water. After Keegan took the pill, he closed his eyes and lay back on the sofa. Then, the look on his face eased up.

As Stella saw what happened, she asked, "What kind of medicine did you give him?"

Stella had thought Keegan was pretending to have a headache because he was worried that helping her would anger Jaylene, so he deliberately avoided that question.

However, she could not help but question her own speculation upon looking at Keegan's pale complexion.

She figured that Keegan could not possibly be acting, judging from the look on his face. He looked so pale and weak that even a professional actor might not be able to do that.

So, she could not help but express her concern for Keegan.

Jaylene answered, "It was prescribed by Keegan's attending doctor, which can help him recover his memory. I don't know the name of this medicine, but it works well for Keegan. His headache will go away immediately after he takes it.”

Stella frowned without saying anything.

‘What kind of medicine is that? How could it work instantly?’ She held back her questions and walked over to Keegan. He was lying on the sofa with his eyes closed and looked much weaker than just now. Stella whispered to him, “How are you feeling? Still uncomfortable?”

Keegan opened his eyes slightly and looked at Stella standing in front of him.

“I’ll feel better once you stay away from me,” he said.

Stella paused, sat beside him, and got very close to him, “I guess you have to keep feeling uncomfortable then.”

Keegan was speechless.

Then, Jaylene said in a low voice, “Stella, please don’t provoke Keegan. The doctor said to follow his wishes as much as possible.”

Stella glanced at her, “Follow his wishes? Should we follow his wishes, too, if he requests to eat in the washroom?”

Keegan continued to remain silent.

“See, he looks just fine now that I’m not following his wishes. ” She smiled at Keegan and continued, “Right, fiance?”

“Boorish!”

That was the word Keegan described Stella with.

“Weak!” Stella retorted. Then she said, “Let me see your medicine.”

Keegan swept his gaze across her, asking, “Are you planning to poison me?”

Stella glared at him, “Yeah. I want to see if I can make you mute!”

Before Keegan could react, Stella reached into his pants pocket to search for the medicine.

Keegan's expression stiffened, and he immediately tried to push her away.

However, Stella slapped away his hand and glowered at him, 'Don't move!'

The next second, her hand felt something.

She thought it was the medicine bottle, so she drilled deeper into the pocket and tried to take it out forcefully. But Keegan suddenly reacted as if he was being electrocuted when she did it. He then pushed her onto the sofa and stood up abruptly.

His chest heaved violently, and his eyes looked somewhat embarrassed when he glared at Stella. His lips moved, but he did not say anything to her. Instead, he shifted his gaze to Jaylene and asked, "Jaylene, can you come to the washroom with me?"

Jaylene thought that Stella's action annoyed him even more, seeing that Keegan still looked angry. She was secretly delighted as she stood up and said, "Sure. I'll come with you. If Stella sat on the sofa and looked blankly at Keegan's receding back. Her hand that had just grabbed the " medicine bottle" could not help but curl up.

Suddenly, she realized what she had just grabbed.

'No wonder Keegan reacted that way just now! Oh my god!' Stella covered her eyes with her hand. Even when they were doing the deed, she had never touched it so directly.

After all, all she had to do was enjoy it while Keegan did all the work.

It was simply outrageous!

It seemed like Keegan would forever brand her as a pervert from now on.

I'm so stupid. How could that be the medicine bottle? It wasn't even as hard...

Hard?' Stella thought to herself.

She abruptly stood up from the sofa.

Marshall was startled by her sudden movement, "What's wrong?"

Stella tried her best to act calm and cleared her throat, "It's nothing. I'll go get some snacks from the kitchen."

"Oh, sure," Marshall did not ask any more questions and nodded.

As soon as Stella turned around, her expression changed dramatically.

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1744 [Eleven Jewell]

'Keegan claims that he doesn't remember me, so why would he have a reaction when I touched him? He's someone who'd watch an adult film and criticize their acting skills with a straight face. Why would he possibly have a reaction when a completely strange woman touched him? i 'Impossible... It's simply impossible!

'Let's see how long this scum is going to keep up the act!' Stella thought inwardly.

After a while, Wenham also came downstairs.

Although he was still very unhappy about the fact that Keegan had lost his memories, his daughter was still in love with him. So, he stopped saying anything unpleasant.

Everyone took their seats at the dining table.

Trevor did not join them as he had something to take care of. So, Marshall took his seat between Stella and Wenham.

As for Keegan, he took the seat between Jaylene and Darcie.

At first glance, it looked like the two daughters had brought their respective husbands back to their parents' home for a meal.

Wenham had imagined this scene before; his children started their own families and gathered at home during special occasions. However, it was nothing like how awkward things were now.

Wenham served Marshall a piece of chicken and asked in a gentle tone, "Marshall, how has work been?"

Marshall thanked him and said, "It's all right. It's the holiday season now that there are hardly any cases. I'm mainly involved in voluntary legal assistance and educating the public about law."

Wenham nodded, "Good, they're all very meaningful stuff. Stella mentioned that you were the one who helped her with her defamation lawsuit. Is that true?"

"Yeah, that was when we had just met."

Wenham suddenly asked Stella, "Stella, why didn't you think of letting Marshall help you with your divorce lawsuit back then? With his capabilities, I'm sure he wouldn't have let you leave with nothing, right?"

Keegan remained silent.

Stella said in a low voice, "Dad, I did get something after the divorce. People were just spreading rumors."

Not only did Keegan transfer her a substantial amount of money after the divorce, but she also received two multimillion-dollar luxury homes.

Stella knew that Wenham deliberately said those things for Keegan to hear because he was unhappy with him.

However, it was something that had happened a long time ago. She could joke with Keegan about it, but she did not want other people to make fun of him.

Wenham pursed his lips and stopped talking about it, knowing how soft-hearted his daughter was. Then, he served Keegan a piece of fish fillet, "Eat some. It's good for your brain."

Stella looked at Keegan's "pitiful" face after being teased by Wenham, and her heart immediately softened. She lifted her fork, intending to serve him some food, but Jaylene had already placed a plate of peeled shrimp in front of him.

"Keegan, the shrimp are delicious. Try them."

Stella paused and retracted her fork.

The next moment, Marshall picked up a piece of spicy crab and placed it on Stella's plate, "I remember you like spicy food."

Stella kept quiet. She indeed liked spicy food.

However, things were not the same anymore.

She was pregnant, and the doctor advised her to cut down on spicy food.

Besides, crabs could contain high levels of mercury, which can damage the baby's developing nervous system.

However, Marshall had already placed it on her plate, and she thought it would be impolite to refuse. So, she simply thanked him.

She pretended to crack the piece of spicy crab on her plate with her knife and fork but did not take a single bite of it.

Wenham knew what she liked to eat, so most of the dishes were her favorites.

Unfortunately, there were only a few she could eat now.

She could only pick the lighter dishes to eat. However, whenever she tried to get the food she wanted, somebody else would beat her to it. She could only watch them eat as she thought asking them to serve her the food would be impolite.

"Keegan, what else do you feel like eating?" Jaylene asked.

Keegan glanced at the dining table and said, "Teriyaki pork."

Jaylene stood up and placed a piece of teriyaki pork on Keegan's plate. At that time, the plate of boiled broccoli was finally placed in front of her.

Her eyes lit up as she immediately put some of it on her plate.

Keegan glanced at her subtly before pointing at another dish. "What's that one?"

he asked
