Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1757 [Eleven Jewell]

“That’s not what I said!”

Keegan’s expression turned ugly, “Can’t you just give me some time to think about it?”

“There’s nothing to think about.” Stella’s gaze was cold, “There’s no need for you to come up with another plan. We’ll break off the engagement, abort the child, and then both of us will have nothing to do with each other anymore. It’s a simple thing; why complicate it?”

Keegan was probably angered by her attitude. His face turned even paler, “Stella Hall, that’s a life! How could you speak of it as if it’s nothing?”

“What do you want me to do then? Give birth to the child for you, and you give me some money?” Stella continued mockingly, “Actually, that’ll work too. Give me your offer. Let’s see if it’s going to be worth the pain.”

Keegan’s expression turned even more unpleasant.

Stella continued, “You promised to give me ten billion if we divorced. Giving birth to a child is definitely going to hurt more than going through a divorce. So, it should be double, right? Otherwise, why should I do this? I-“

“We’ll get married.”

Keegan suddenly spoke.

Stella paused and abruptly lifted her gaze, “What did you say?”

Keegan swallowed before saying in a low voice, “I said we’ll get married. Let’s give birth to this child. And if you want to divorce afterward. I’ll set you free. Also, I promise you’ll get what you deserve in the divorce settlement.”

Stella’s mood, which was initially joyful, instantly turned gloomy.

Keegan continued, “If you agree, I’ll have Aldor find a lawyer to draft the agreement-“

“Agree my ass!” Stella cursed and suddenly pulled her hand back. “If you want to marry me, you’ll need to get down on one knee!”

After saying that, she walked away with an angry face.

Felicity quickly caught up to her, “Stella, are you still going to get the abortion?”

Stella gritted her teeth, “Yes, I am. I’ll probably suffer a metrorrhagia with him around. Let’s go to another hospital and get it done!”

Keegan remained silent.

He was about to go after Stella, but Vermont stopped him, “Stop provoking her.

She’ll probably have a miscarriage from anger before she can have the abortion.”

Keegan shook off his hand, “Didn’t you hear that she’s going to do it in another hospital?”

Vermont was speechless, “Do you know nothing outside of work? Can’t you understand that she only said that because she was angry? If she really wants to do it, it wouldn’t matter if you’re there or not.”

Keegan finally calmed down as he turned his gaze to Vermont, asking, “When did you find out that she was pregnant?”

Vermont glanced at him, “Is that what you really care about now? Why don’t you figure out how to persuade your ex-wife not to get an abortion instead? We’re lucky my brother saw her coming here while he was working. What if she goes to another hospital next time? Your daughter might have reincarnated by the time you get there.”

“Shut your stinky mouth up!” Keegan said.

Vermont shrugged, “The truth is often hard to handle.

Physically stopping her isn’t going to work forever. You’ve got to make her give up on the idea completely.”

Vermont then laughed at what Keegan said earlier, “Did you hear what you said just now? You said you would get a divorce with her after the child is born! Do you think she needs your money? Don’t forget that she’s the heiress of the Saun family. If she wants it, the child inside of her can carry her last name and has absolutely nothing to do with you!”

Keegan’s body stiffened as he said nonchalantly, “I won’t allow it.”

“It’s not going to matter.” Vermont shattered his delusional thoughts. “Who do you think you are to her? You couldn’t even control her when the two of you were still married.

Now that you’re divorced, what makes you think you can change her mind? Dream on!”

Keegan kept quiet. After a long pause, he said, “She’s my fiancée.”

Vermont replied sarcastically, “Wow, you still remember that, huh? If I remember correctly, the first thing you said to her when you came back was to break off your engagement to her. Did you lose your memory as well as your mind? Did you forget what you just said a few minutes ago?”

Keegan’s eyelid twitched as he exploded in anger, “Can you be serious for once? I’m not talking to you just so you can ridicule me!”

Vermont snorted, “If I’m not on your side, I would have waited until she had the abortion before telling you!”

Keegan kept a tense face, and his eyes were gloomy.

Vermont spoke coldly, “If the child is all you want, I advise you not to provoke her any further. If the child is gone, just accept it. You don’t remember her anymore, after all. You can always find someone else to bear your child.”

Keegan, still frowning, felt a sharp pain in his temples. He forcefully pressed his hands against them. After a long pause, he said, “I... My mind is a mess right now.”

“How do you really feel about this?” Vermont scrutinized him. “Keegan, out of everyone, Stella is the only person you can’t remember. Don’t you find it strange?”

Keegan kept quiet. It felt like there was a locked area in his brain; whenever he tried to access it, he would experience a splitting headache.

His brain was subconsciously resisting Stella, and he could not fully control it.

He would instinctively observe Stella’s actions. For example, when they were eating yesterday, he noticed that Stella did not take a single bite of the dishes that Marshall had served her.

Instead, she stared at the light dishes the maids were serving. Her eyes would light up when they were about to serve her. However, when someone else told the maids to serve those dishes to them first, she would look somewhat disappointed.

So, Keegan would deliberately tell Jaylene to serve him the heavy dishes, just so the maid would go to Stella’s side more often.

His mood would strangely turn better when he saw her eating happily.

However, whenever Stella took the initiative to approach him, he would subconsciously put his guard up to keep her away.

It was contradictory.

Abnormally contradictory.

Even without Vermont’s reminder, he was sharp enough to notice something was not right. But he still wanted to keep Stella away before he could figure out exactly what went wrong.

This was not because he hated her, but... he felt that doing so was the right thing. He even hoped that Stella would go far away from not only him but Marshall as well.

But why Marshall? 1 Keegan’s head throbbed again.

Vermont saw his pale face and could not help but ask concernedly, “Keegan, are you okay?”

“My head hurts.” With a painful look on his face, Keegan took out a bottle of medicine from his pocket and swallowed a pill.

Soon, his headache subsided.

Vermont was amazed, “What kind of painkiller is this? How can it be so effective?”

Keegan did not say anything but looked at the bottle for a while before asking, “Where’s your brother?”

“Working, why?”

Keegan tightened his grip on the medicine bottle, “Take me to see him.” i Vermont was confused but did as he said anyway.

Stella went back to her ward to get changed.

Felicity asked while standing next to her, “Stella, are you really going to another hospital to get the abortion?”

“Do you really have to give up on my goddaughter?”

“I sent the baby’s ultrasound to my mom yesterday. She could tell the baby will live a life with great wealth and success.”

Stella was speechless.

“She could tell all that just by looking at the ultrasound?”

Felicity said, “My mom said the time you conceived was a very good day. She even told me to bring you and your child back to my hometown so that she can treat the fortune teller to a meal.”

Then, she continued in a somewhat dejected tone, “If you get an abortion, my mom is not going to have a chance to meet the child.”

Stella rubbed her temples, “Who said I’m going to get an abortion?”

“Didn’t you just tell Keegan you’re going to another hospital to get it done?”

Stella sighed, "I just wanted to make him angry."

"What?"

Stella snorted, "He wanted to marry me just to get a divorce after the child is born. Who does he think I am? Am I just a baby machine to him?"

Felicity could not understand, "Stella, isn't that what you wanted all along? Now that he's willing to marry you, shouldn't you be happy? Why would you say that to make him angry?"

"He's only marrying me because of the child, not because he loves me!"

Felicity was puzzled, "Didn't you do everything today just to let him know you're pregnant so he'd want you back?"

"Yeah." Stella put on her cap. "Even if that's what I wanted, I'm not going to agree to what he suggested. I need to let him know that even if I have this child, I can still live without him. If he wants me to keep this child, he has to show me that he's sincere about it."

Felicity was about to say something, but the ward door was suddenly opened.

She turned around and saw Keegan and Vermont standing there. Then, she immediately shut up and stepped aside.

Stella glanced at him and wore her socks without saying anything.

Keegan stood there. His lips moved, but he remained silent.

Vermont got nervous and almost kicked him, "Say something. Did you forget your lines?"

Keegan pursed his lips and asked, "Are you planning to get it done at another hospital?"

'Fuck! What bullshit is he talking about?' Stella gazed at him, "Yeah. Mr. Kane, do you have any recommendations for a good hospital? Preferably one where they can get it done quickly and painlessly."

Keegan was speechless.

"Don't act impulsively. Y-You should come home with me first."

“Home? Which home?” Stella’s eyes turned cold. “Are you talking about the Kane residence? I’m sorry, but that’s your home. As for the Saun residence, I’m sorry too, but you’re not welcome there.”

Keegan frowned, “Do you have to talk to me like this?”

“Why? You’re not my fiance anymore. Am I obligated to speak to you in certain ways? You got me pregnant, and now I have to go through an abortion. I’m the one suffering here. Are you suggesting that I should pamper you instead?”

“Pfft-“

Vermont burst into laughter. However, Keegan shot him a vicious glare, causing him to shut up instantly.

“I don’t want you to get an abortion.” Keegan frowned, not understanding why she would always twist his words. “I want to marry you, but you said no. What exactly do you want, then? How am I supposed to know if you don’t make yourself clear?”

Stella lifted her gaze, “Keegan Kane, you want me to marry you, give birth to the child, and then have a divorce. So, let me ask you this. Who will the child belong to?”

Keegan answered, “You can take it with you if you want to raise it. I’ll pay you the expenses every month. If you don’t, I’ll still give you what you deserve.”

Stella chuckled and pointed to the door, saying, “Get out.”

Keegan was taken aback.

‘What did I say wrongly? Why is she mad again?’ Keegan thought to himself.

He looked at Vermont for help.

Vermont cleared his throat and said, “The purpose of getting married is to give the child a complete home. Why talk about divorcing? Both of you should be together till death do you apart.”

His words left Keegan utterly speechless.

Felicity was impressed by how quick-witted and smooth Vermont was.

Keegan licked his lips, "Well... if you don't want a divorce, we don't have to do it."

Stella said coldly, "How generous of you."

Keegan kept quiet. He felt extremely puzzled about why he would marry someone with such a sharp tongue.

The ward door swung open again when he was about to say something.

"Stella! Stella!"

Cordelia walked in hurriedly, looking anxious. When she saw that Stella was still wearing her patient pants, she put her hand on her chest, "Did I come too late?"

Is my precious great -grandchild already gone?"

She looked like she was about to faint as she spoke.

Vermont, standing next to her, immediately supported her, "No, no. The baby is still here."

Cordelia immediately felt relieved, "Really?"

Vermont nodded, "For now, yeah. The parents are still discussing its fate."

Cordelia felt like fainting again upon hearing that.

Keegan then walked over, asking, "Grandma, what brought you here?"

Cordelia's hand was still across her chest when she said irritably, "I should be the one asking you that question. Why did you bring Stella here?"

Keegan was confused, "I didn't. I came to find her."

"What do you mean? Are you saying that Stella decided to abort my great-grandchild?"

Cordelia was frustrated, "She has been looking forward to having a child for so long. Now that she's finally pregnant, how could she abort it? You must've been the one who brought her here. After you lose your memory and can't recognize her, you want to break off the engagement. Now, you don't even want your baby with her. How can you be so irresponsible?"

Keegan felt extremely wronged. He had come to stop Stella, yet to his grandmother, he was the one who forced Stella to have an abortion.

"Grandma, it's not like that. I just found out about it and came to stop her. If you don't believe me, ask Stella."

After saying that, Keegan looked at Stella, hoping she would explain. However, Stella's eyes reddened, "Grandma, you're finally here. If you were to come later, I... I..."

Then, she started crying.

Keegan was puzzled, 'Tell her the truth. Why are you crying?' Cordelia was furious. She lifted her cane and hit Keegan with it, "You liar! What would you have done if I didn't come today?"

Although his injuries had recovered, being hit still hurt. He could only dodge while explaining, "Grandma, don't listen to her nonsense. She's the one lying Ouch-"

Cordelia chased Keegan around the hospital room to hit him. Felicity's jaw dropped in shock.

'Even someone as imposing as Keegan could look like a drowned rat.' Felicity thought to herself.

Cordelia was getting older; she ran out of breath after a while. She leaned on her cane, panted, and pointed at Keegan, "I'll deal with you later when we go home!"

Then, she walked over to Stella and held her hand, "Child, I'm sorry for what you had to go through. I'll teach that hopeless thing a lesson for you."

Stella hugged Cordelia and thanked her. Then, she turned to Keegan and stuck her tongue out at him, making a funny face.

Keegan rubbed his sore back from getting hit earlier and could not help but laugh. Just when he was still feeling guilty, Stella turned the situation around.

1 After being labeled as violent, Stella further solidified her reputation as cunning and crafty in Keegan's eyes.
