Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1806 [Eleven Jewell]

Keegan stared at the leaves for a while before saying, "It's not symmetrical."

Then, with a gentle flick of his finger, he made one leaf fall off. Satisfied, he remarked, "There, that looks better."

'I'm going to kill him!' Stella seethed inwardly.

She gritted her teeth and swiftly reclaimed her cherished plant. "You're such a troublemaker!" she snapped.

Keegan grabbed her hand. "It's getting late. Maria can help you out tomorrow."

"Maria doesn't really know how. She just waters them, but some flowers don't need much water. I haven't been here for a while, and many of my flowers died.

I can't just leave them alone."

Gently cradling the potted succulent, she turned to Keegan with a smile. "Do you think it's beautiful?"

Keegan found himself ensnared in her sparkling eyes.

Stella did not have any makeup on, revealing smooth skin, and her disheveled hair cascaded gently around her ears.

In the breeze, her hair danced, and her long lashes fluttered slightly. Keegan couldn't help but feel his heart race at the sight.

Feeling flustered, he awkwardly averted his gaze. "Yeah," he mumbled.

"Once its roots are in place, you can place it in your office desk. When you're mad, just look at it and see your angry face," Stella teased with a smile. "It looks so much like you."

Only then did Keegan realize that the plant in the cup was a gourd, the same one from Plants vs. Zombies.

His face immediately darkened.

Just as he was about to leave, Stella stood up. Suddenly, her vision went black, and she stumbled.

Startled, Keegan swiftly grabbed her arm. "Are you okay?" he asked.

Stella stood still for a moment, regaining her composure. "I probably stayed crouched for too long, and my vision went blank when I stood up suddenly," she explained softly.

With a tense expression, Keegan took the cup from her hand and led her back into the house. "Forget about your plants. You should go to sleep."

Stella hesitated and questioned, "Are you concerned about me?"

Keegan tightened his lips, taking a moment before replying, "You're pregnant."

"What if I'm not?" Stella looked directly into his eyes, catching every nuance.

"Would you still be worried?" she asked softly.

Keegan avoided showing his emotions, lowering his gaze.

Ignoring her question, he urged, "Let's head inside before you catch a cold."

A fleeting hint of disappointment crossed Stella's eyes, though she swiftly composed herself.

At least he's showing some concern now. It's progress,' she reflected silently.

In Cordelia's mansion, Corrin was carrying a glass of collagen drink while heading upstairs when she collided with Aurora.

"Corrin, it's so late. Why aren't you in bed yet?" Aurora, who had been raised by Corrin during her younger years, had a good relationship with her.

Corrin responded gently, "I'll turn in after I take this collagen drink to Mrs. Kane.

What about you? Why are you still awake? If Aurora frowned. Keegan had sold the place where Dahlia used to live. Even though she had returned to the Kane family, she had no place to stay and was now residing in Cordelia's home.

'Grandma is making it obvious she doesn't want Mom here. How could Mom ask Corrin to make a collagen drink in the middle of the night? Isn't she worried Grandma will kick her out?' Aurora said, "Corrin, give it to me. I happen to be going to get something from my mom. I'll help you with it. You should get some rest now."

Corrin said gently, "Thank you, Aurora. There are still some of this downstairs.

I'll fetch you another glass if you feel like drinking.

Aurora waved her hand. "It's okay. You can go to bed now."

Then, she took the glass from Corrin and went to Dahlia's room.

Aurora knocked on the door. There was no response, but she could faintly hear someone speaking from inside.

She twisted the doorknob.

"Are you sure that Stella is pregnant?" 1

As soon as Aurora entered the room, she overheard Dahlia speaking in a hushed tone, looking nervous as she held her phone, engaged in a conversation.

What Dahlia had said left Aurora deeply shocked.

"Are you saying Cordelia knows about it too? No wonder she immediately agreed with Stella staying in the Royalpark Villa!

"Calm down? How can I calm down? It's easy for you to say! If Keegan remembers what happened, I'll be the first person he kicks out of this house!

"She's been taking that medicine for so long, why can she still get pregnant?

"Absolutely not!

“We can’t let the baby stay. Keegan would never allow her to live in the Royalpark Villa without the baby. I’ll have nothing to worry about as long as he can’t remember what happened.

■ Aurora’s face turned pale. She tightly gripped the glass to prevent her hands from trembling.

However, the sound of the door closing caught Dahlia’s attention, causing her to abruptly end the call. Upon seeing Aurora, she breathed a sigh of relief.

Collecting herself, Aurora spoke softly, “I knocked for a while but didn’t hear a response, so I came in. Mom, Corrin made you some collagen drink.”

“Why are you bringing it? Let the maids handle it. I didn’t raise you to be a servant,” Dahlia remarked, echoing similar sentiments she had shared before.

This time, though, Aurora felt differently about it.

‘Grandma once said nobody is born to serve. It’s just a job, and one should never feel superior. Life can take unexpected turns. When the tables are turned, consider how others might treat you,’ Aurora reflected silently.

Aurora lowered her gaze. “I need to talk to you about something, so I brought it over.”

Dahlia did not take it. Instead, she checked outside the door, ensured no one was nearby, and closed it again.

“Put it on the table.”

Dahlia motioned for Aurora to approach. As Aurora drew nearer, Dahlia asked, “What did you want to talk to me about?”

It dawned on Aurora why she had come. “I don’t want to meet Mrs. Wood’s son.

Can you decline on my behalf?”

Dahlia paused, a frown appearing on her face. “Why? You’re not still thinking about Marshall, are you?”

“Mrs. Wood’s son is pursuing a Ph.D., he’s exceptional in every aspect. Their family’s company is going public soon.

“Many socialites are vying for his attention, but he’s only interested in you.

What’s not to like about him?”

Aurora clenched her fingers and bit her lip, remaining silent.

“Say something! Keegan is already giving me enough trouble, and now you’re acting like this. Her son has good manners, a strong family background, and is even more knowledgeable than you. Moreover…” Dahlia paused before continuing, “Don’t be so selective. Consider what you bring to the table when choosing your partner.”

Aurora’s expression immediately turned somber.

Sensing she might have been too harsh, Dahlia attempted to reassure Aurora, “I didn’t mean it like that. I wouldn’t consider him if he weren’t a good match. But Mrs. Wood’s son is genuinely an exceptional man. I’ve met him a few times, and he’s always so well-mannered. He asks about you often. He genuinely admires you.

“I don’t want you to marry young either. But Keegan left most of his wealth to Stella. Can’t you see what’s happening? He doesn’t care about us at all. I’m just trying to find you a good husband so that you’ll have someone to support you in the future.”

“Okay,” Aurora murmured, lowering her head.

Dahlia gestured dismissively. “You should go back and get some sleep.”

However, Aurora remained rooted to the spot. Instead, she asked Dahlia, “Mom, is Stella pregnant?”

The look on Dahlia’s face changed as she spoke in a serious tone, “What did you hear?”

“I couldn’t catch everything. I just heard you mention her being pregnant,”

Aurora inquired softly. “Is it true?”

Dahlia had raised Aurora from infancy, and Keegan had once locked her up for a few days because of Stella. Considering the deep-seated conflict between them, Dahlia seemed to believe there was nothing she couldn't share with Aurora.

"Your brother was previously planning a divorce," Dahlia disclosed, "but suddenly brought her back to the Royalpark Villa, claiming he needed her assistance.

"Even Cordelia hired a nutritionist to take care of them. I suspected something was amiss and had your uncle investigate.

"Turns out, your brother lied about why he wanted her to stay. The truth is, she's pregnant!"

Aurora lowered her gaze and asked, "Keegan's going to be a father soon. Isn't that a good thing? Weren't you always hoping for Stella to get pregnant?"

"What's good about that?" Dahlia looked annoyed. Seeing the confused expression on Aurora's face, she suddenly realized that Aurora was unaware of her drugging Stella. It was information known to only a few.

Dahlia composed herself and spoke softly, "He disowned me because of her. Do you understand how much Stella despises us? If she has his child, do you think there'll be any place for us in this family?"

Aurora pursed her lips and said, "Mom, we're Keegan's family. He won't let Stella do whatever she wants."

Dahlia asserted vehemently, "How naive of you! Don't you remember how he had you locked up because of Stella?"

"He was so afraid that something might happen to him that he made a will in advance, giving most of his wealth to Stella. When has he ever cared about us?"

"If her child is born, and he gains full control of Vinci Rivera after Cordelia passes away, Stella will make our lives miserable.

"I can't let the baby be born!"

Aurora clenched her fists tighter, seemingly recalling her past ordeal when she was imprisoned, causing her face to pale.

After a pause, she asked, "Mom, what's your plan?"

With a stern face, Dahlia said, "The maid from Royalpark Villa has been complaining to me these days, saying that Stella will only listen to everything that the nutritionist says. I think we can use this person."

"Outsiders can't be trusted," Aurora said with a cold expression, "Mom, let me do it. Stella caused my imprisonment. I want to personally take revenge on her and make her feel the pain."

Dahlia was taken aback. "You? No way. What if Keegan finds Mom, do you think he won't find out if you made the maid do it?" Aurora interrupted, her tone firm. "No matter who carries it out, he could still uncover the truth eventually."

But if Stella were to lose her baby right under his nose, do you think she could ever forgive him? Even if he discovers I did it, what could he do?

"I'm his sister, and for the sake of our family's reputation, he wouldn't dare to take action against me. I have to seek revenge for myself!"

Aurora spoke with bitterness, her gaze turning icy. Her fingers trembled, revealing the deep-seated hatred she held.

Dahlia harbored mistrust toward the maid as well.

Considering the gravity of the situation involving a human life, even a slight mistake could result in a tragedy.

Having Aurora take charge was, in a way, more secure than relying on an outsider.

Moreover, as Aurora pointed out, she was a part of the Kane family, and for the family's honor, Keegan and Cordelia would likely avoid drastic measures.

Just like in the past when evidence linked Jackson to Keegan's abduction, everything had been brushed aside in the end, and Jackson was even released on bail.
