Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1839 [Eleven Jewell]

Keegan was stunned to hear that Stella was drinking vinegar.

Stella slid a cup toward him and said, "Try it. The vinegar arrived last night. Go on and see if it has the right kick."

Keegan waved it off. "You enjoy."

Stella smirked and brought it to her lips, taking a sip.

Since her pregnancy, her palate had evolved, steering away from the spiciness she once favored to a penchant for sweet and sour flavors. However, her doctor recommended she cut back on sweet treats to ensure a healthy weight for the baby.

Hence, Cordelia had a friend make some homemade fruit vinegar that carried a subtle sweetness and a strong fruity fragrance. Stella tried it for the first time today, and it suits her tastebuds perfectly.

As Keegan finished putting on his shoes, Stella called out to him once more, "My brother is returning tomorrow."

Keegan halted, asking, "What time is he arriving?"

"He mentioned catching a flight tonight and reaching tomorrow morning. He said he'd get in touch with me before boarding."

Nodding, Keegan responded, "I'll come with you to pick him up tomorrow."

A smile spread across Stella's face as she replied, "Okay."

"Keegan, wait a sec." Aurora descended the stairs, getting Keegan's attention.

She handed him a bottle of medication, explaining that Jaylene had given it to her when dropping them off. "She wanted me to pass this on to you."

Stella observed the medicine bottle, remembering Keegan using it for his headaches. "What kind of medicine is this? It seems quite effective, and why is there no label on it?' Keegan accepted the pills and asked Aurora to thank Jaylene for him.

Aurora acknowledged his request and retreated upstairs.

Stella stood up with a tie in hand and walked over to Keegan.

He was about to grab it when she said, "Let me help you with it."

Keegan hesitated but consented.

Stella tiptoed and looped the tie around his neck, expertly tying a Windsor knot.

"Ease up on the meds," she murmured, "Using a fast-acting medicine with powerful ingredients too often might not be beneficial for your body."

Truth be told, Stella did not entirely trust the medicine Jaylene provided.

However, considering Jaylene's decade-long affection for Keegan, she likely wouldn't endanger his health. Moreover, Keegan did experience relief every time he took the medicine.

Yet, Stella remained concerned about the rapid effectiveness of the medicine.

"Let's find another doctor later and get some milder medication."

Keegan lowered his gaze to look at her. Her voice was soft and soothing, yet traces of indissoluble worry lingered between her brows.

"Alright," Keegan responded in a low tone. "I'll go with your judgment."

Stella gently adjusted his tie and said, "Off you go. Be safe on the road."

Keegan gazed deeply into her eyes before departing.

Not long after he left, Stella intended to tidy up and visit Leighton's place.

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1840 [Eleven Jewell]

Leighton had had another argument with his father, and what made matters worse was that it all happened on his birthday. They didn't even enjoy the cake that day. Leighton just left.

Following the disagreement, Leighton not only blocked Daryl on WhatsApp but also on his social media.

Left with no choice, Daryl sought information from Stella indirectly.

Concerned about the tension between the father and son, Stella reached out to Leighton.

She learned he was attending a roadshow for Motives for Murder that day, conveniently near her. Seeing an opportunity to mediate and alleviate the father-son conflict, Stella decided to go there.

As Stella headed upstairs, she overheard Aurora conversing on the terrace. She thought about the strawberry pudding from last night that she hadn't given to Aurora.

Planning to inform her about it, Stella approached and overheard Aurora saying, "I found an opportunity, too, but I can't make it too obvious. You know how cunning Stella can be. If I'm too obvious, she'll start getting suspicious."

Stella felt puzzled upon hearing that.

Aurora laughed softly, "Keegan's had enough of her. They had an argument this morning before leaving the house.

Stella tried to help him with his necktie, but he found her repulsive and pushed her away. She was on the verge of tears. I was keeping my distance at the time, afraid Keegan might notice me. Otherwise, I would've recorded the entire thing for you."

This left Stella even more puzzled.

"I wish you saw Stella's expression when Keegan returned from his date with Jaylene. She was making a scene, but he completely ignored her.

"Yes, Jaylene drove us back last night. Keegan was drunk and kept calling Jaylene's name. Stella was so mad. Yet, she still didn't leave the room.

“I’ve been putting a little safflower in her fruit vinegar. She’s been drinking it for a week, and she hasn’t noticed a thing. She’s so clueless.”

Didn’t I just receive the vinegar yesterday? What is she talking about?’ thought Stella.

Aurora continued on the phone, “No worries. Anyway, I’m living here now. I’ll find more ways to sabotage her.”

As the voices in Aurora’s room gradually faded, Stella pursed her lips and knocked on the door.

Startled, Aurora quickly hid her phone and asked with a stern face, “What?”

Stella’s expression was odd, and after a while, she said, “Nothing. If you don’t want the pudding, I’ll throw it away later.”

Aurora shrugged, “Whatever.”

Stella fell silent, deep in thought, and then went upstairs.

While changing, she heard someone leave the house. Stella paid no attention to them and finished freshening up before heading downstairs.

She casually went to the fridge in the kitchen and saw that the strawberry pudding she had placed there earlier was gone.

Stella then picked Felicity up and went to visit Leighton.

After Felicity learned about their connection, she became an avid fan.

On the way, Stella shared about the phone call she had overheard from Aurora in the morning.

Felicity widened her eyes, “I knew that wicked girl had ill intentions! Why is she adding safflower to your drinks? Is she trying to induce a miscarriage?”

Stella said, “The problem is, I haven’t drunk any vinegar before. I had it for the first time this morning, and it had a wax seal.”

Felicity was puzzled, “Then why did she say that?”

Stella shrugged. She paused momentarily and added, “She told Dahlia that Keegan and I have been quarreling. But in reality, we haven’t had a single argument. Moreover, Keegan has been treating me quite well lately. So, she’s been conveying the wrong information to her mom.”

“I feel like Aurora has changed quite a bit since Keegan’s accident. Of course, it might be because I haven’t interacted with her much. She doesn’t seem as overbearing as before, although her way of speaking is still irritating,” she continued.

Felicity was skeptical. “You’re drawing conclusions too early. What was Aurora like before? I don’t believe she can change so quickly. I think we still need to be on guard.”

Stella nodded. Just as she was about to say something, her phone rang. It was Trevor.

She answered the call. “Trevor, are you coming back?”
