Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1934 [Eleven Jewell]

“I lied to you?” Dahlia sneered and walked over to Aurora. When she stood in front of her, she suddenly raised her hand and slapped Aurora across the face.

She slapped her so hard that it left her ear buzzing for a moment and made her face feel numb.

Aurora lifted her head and looked at Dahlia in disbelief, ‘ Mom, why?’ With a stern face, Dahlia spoke in a sharp voice, “Don’t call me Mom! Aurora Kane, who exactly are you trying to fool?!”

“Did Stella really argue with Keegan? Does Keegan really hate her? Did you really put something in the fruit vinegar she drank? I trusted you so much, but all you do is lie to me! Has that foxy woman enchanted you as well?”

Aurora’s face turned pale, “Mom, that’s Keegan’s baby, your grandchild. Why do you want it to die so badly? Is it really this difficult for you to let go of your hatred for Stella?”

“Is that why you chose to betray me?” Dahlia’s expression turned grim, “Do you think that Stella will let you go if you stop acting against her? Do you honestly think that they’ll forget about everything you did before just because you did something good for once? Open your eyes and take a look; I was just pretending, yet your brother, Stella, and everyone else suspected you first without any evidence.”

Aurora looked at the person in front of her and suddenly felt like she had never really known her for the past twenty years.

Although Cordelia told Aurora to stay with her after she was released from being locked up, her relationship with Dahlia remained as good as ever. No matter what Dahlia was like to others, she showed Aurora unconditional love and gave the best of everything since she was young.

After Quentin passed away, Aurora and Keegan were separated from each other. So, she would always put Dahlia first before Keegan.

Dahlia has not liked Stella from the moment she entered the family. Aurora knew that Dahlia had always wanted Keegan to marry a socialite from an influential family to aid him in taking over Vinci Rivera.

However, that was something Stella could not provide him with. Therefore, Dahlia hated Stella, and so did she. She could never figure out why Keegan, being as excellent as he was, would choose to be with someone like Stella.

That was why she tricked Stella into entering Jackson's room. She intended to play a play and scare her.

However, she became frightened when she saw Jackson returning to his room.

At that moment, she did not know whether she was afraid of Stella getting in trouble or if she was afraid of getting into trouble herself. So, she went and told Dahlia about it.

But Dahlia said that everything was fine because Jackson would not cross the line.

It was not until Stella hurt Jackson and ran out of the room that she realized it was not fine at all.

Stella was furious and wanted to tell Cordelia about it.

However, Dahlia used the reputation of the Kane family as a reason to stop her from exposing the incident.

At that time, Aurora felt lucky that her mother helped her cover it up. Otherwise, if Keegan and Cordelia found out, she would have been in serious trouble.

That was also probably the reason why she became even more reckless in her actions.

Sometimes, Dahlia would sigh and say that if Keegan had followed her arrangements and married someone from another wealthy family, he would not have been suppressed by Chandler in the company. Whenever Aurora heard this, she hated Stella even more.

After Stella got married to Keegan, Aurora often bullied her behind his back.

Although Stella would stand up for herself occasionally, she would mostly keep quiet for Keegan's sake. However, no matter right or wrong, Dahlia always sided with her, making her feel more and more that she was in the right.

Indeed, if it were not for marrying Stella, Keegan would have long become the successor of Vinci Rivera. Instead, he had to struggle so hard in the company for so many years, constantly oppressed by Chandler.

Aurora had always thought that Dahlia disliked Stella because she felt like Stella had been an obstacle to Keegan's success.

But now, Stella was already a part of the Saun family and even carried Keegan's baby in her stomach. Yet, Dahlia still could not accept her.

Suddenly, Aurora realized that it was not Stella that she could not accept, but anyone who threatened her from enjoying wealth and luxury.

She should have known this when Dahlia was so eager to obtain Keegan's wealth after he fell into the water.

Blood and family ties apparently meant nothing to Dahlia compared to a luxurious life in the future.

Suddenly, she thought of when Dahlia insisted on raising her back then. Was that because she truly could not bear to part with her, or was it just a convenient way for her to extract money from the Kane family?

If Dahlia genuinely loved her, why would she do such a heartless thing and falsely accuse her?

Aurora could not figure it out and felt her heart being torn apart.

Then, she said in a trembling voice, “Mom, we’re family. Is it necessary for you to go this far? You know that Keegan is not as heartless as he seems. He won’t abandon you—”

Dahlia cut her off harshly, “Keegan won’t, but Stella will! I’ve been drugging her for so long. How could she ever forgive me? My life will be over if she marries Keegan again!”

Aurora was taken aback, “Drug? Wasn’t that prescribed to her by a medical practitioner to nourish—”

She widened her gaze as she spoke, “To nourish her health?”

Dahlia stared at her coldly.

Aurora finally understood why Keegan kicked Dahlia out of the Kane family without giving anyone an explanation. It was all because of this!

Upon realizing that, Aurora also knew why Dahlia was so determined to get rid of Stella’s baby. How could Stella ever let her stay in the Kane family after what she had done to her? Now that Keegan had lost his memories and did not remember Stella anymore, it served as a perfect opportunity for Dahlia to act against her.

If the baby were to die because of someone from the Kane family, Stella would never want to marry Keegan ever again.

That was why Dahlia framed Aurora. Firstly, it was to retaliate against her betrayal. Secondly, with Mrs. Chapman defending her, she would be able to completely keep herself out of it while continuing to enjoy the privileges as one of the Kanes.

Aurora felt chill all over.

She could not accept the fact that her mother was someone so selfish, ruthless, and despicable.

Dahlia spoke indifferently, “Don’t blame me for what I did. I’m doing all this for our future. You don’t know anything. If we don’t secure as much wealth as we can, how will your husband and his family treat you with respect after you get married? Because of my weak family background, your grandmother had never truly accepted me.

“After all the bad things you did to Stella, do you think she’ll ever forgive you? If Keegan married her, would he still care about you after you married into your husband’s family?”

Dahlia said those words as if she were right, but everything sounded absurd to Aurora.

Especially the part where she said, “You don’t know anything, n It turned out that she was just someone who did not know anything. Dahlia completely ignored her progress at Vinci Rivera. To her, a woman’s value was defined by marrying a man with power and influence.

When Aldor asked her why she wanted to work in Vinci Rivera, she claimed it would make her look more presentable to her future husband. She finally understood why Aldor looked at her in disbelief and ridiculed her.
