Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1946 [Eleven Jewell]

Aurora paused and turned to Keegan.

Without looking at her, Keegan said nonchalantly, “She brought this on herself.

No one can save her now.”

Aurora had been raised by Dahlia and was once her precious daughter, after all.

Although she had harmed Stella and framed her, Aurora could not bear to see Dahlia in such a miserable state.

She wanted to plead with Keegan for help. She thought that even if he was going to settle the score with Dahlia, he should do it privately and not with so many people watching.

However, before she could say anything, Vermont spoke up.” Aurora, there’s a lot of people here. Think about it, if you stepped in to help, you’re getting the Kane family involved. Even if it was proven that the Kane family had nothing to do with this incident, the public’s comment on the Kane family will inevitably take a toll on the Kane family’s reputation.”

Aurora turned hesitant.

Felicity chimed in and said, “I don’t understand you at all. You act ruthlessly when you should be kind, and you try to act like a saint when you shouldn’t. I guess she didn’t slap you hard enough earlier. Maybe she should get you locked up again before you can think clearly!”

Her blunt words made Aurora's face look even more unpleasant.

Aurora looked around and realized that no one was willing to step forward and help.

Although Dahlia had been the center of attention amongst the socialites, nobody truly respected her. They supported her not because of her character, but because of the Kane family. The "friends" she often had afternoon tea with had all been undermined by her just because they were better than her in some way.

Having been so arrogant all the time, a lot of people enjoyed watching her downfall.

"Aurora!" Dahlia was still calling out to her daughter. Olivia was thoroughly disgusted by her. After harboring resentment for so long, she was not going to let her go so easily. She forcefully held Dahlia's face and showed it to everyone.

"You love being in the limelight, don't you? Come on, let everyone look at your selfish, nasty face!

"Erick is disgusting for cheating on me and using my money to support his illegitimate son, but you pretended to be my friend and lied to me for so many years. You're a thousand times more disgusting than him!

"You invite your friends here to have afternoon tea and charge it to my hotel almost every time. Yet, have I ever said anything about it?

"On your birthday, you wanted to give your friends collagen drinks as gifts, so I traveled abroad to buy the best ones for you.

"When your ex-mother-in-law celebrated her birthday, I even provided the venue and planned everything for you. Dahlia Crosby, what have I done to upset you all these years to deserve such humiliation?"

Olivia exposed Dahlia's ingratitude and betrayal, severing their once seemingly friendly ties.

The crowd started gossiping, and Dahlia's image as an aristocratic lady had crumbled. She could not break free, so she felt embarrassed and retorted, "I didn't tell you about this for your own good. If you didn't spend that ten million to shut that woman up, do you think that Erick would still want to be with you? She gave birth to a son, and what about you? You gave birth to three whores! He wanted to dump you a long time ago!"

Olivia's expression darkened, and she slapped Dahlia. "You have a daughter too, and you're a woman. How can you say such disgusting things?"

"How dare you hit me!" Dahlia's face turned pale. While struggling with Olivia, she shouted at Aurora, "Aurora Kane, are you dead? Are you just going to stay there and watch me get slapped?"

Aurora clenched her fists.

Felicity then taunted her. "Okay, okay. Go ahead and be a good daughter. Let's see if she'll remember your kindness. Don't ask us for help if she ever frames you again."

Vermont said softly, "Actually, we haven't done anything to help."

Felicity elbowed him.

Aurora bit her lip and slowly turned her face away from Dahlia.

Dahlia was about to scold Aurora for being ungrateful, but Olivia grabbed her by the hair again.

“Erick is nothing but a piece of crap! Without me planning and strategizing for him, he would’ve achieved nothing with how stupid he is!

“And you!” Olivia lowered her voice and continued, “Mrs. Kane Sr. takes Stella more seriously than you because she saw through you a long time ago. She knew that you’re a worthless, selfish trash with nothing to offer. You’re delusional if you think that you can ever be in charge of the Kane family!”

Aurora could not stand it anymore. She stood up and said, “ Keegan, I need to use the restroom.”

Keegan nodded and glanced at the time.

‘Why aren’t they here yet?’ Just as he wondered, the police arrived at the scene, putting an end to the absurd drama in the hall.

The police separated the two women, and when Dahlia saw the police officers, she thought she was finally saved. As soon as she was pulled away, she angrily told the police to arrest Olivia. She accused her of assault and even threatened to sue Olivia.

“Assault?” Olivia chuckled. “That was clearly a mutual fight.” She then rolled up her sleeves to show the scratches Dahlia left on her arms.

“Officers, you’ve got to make the correct judgment here.”

Dahlia exclaimed frustratedly, “You wretch! You were the one who started it!”

Olivia pretended to slap her and caused Dahlia to immediately hide behind the police. She looked nothing like the wealthy woman she would always be.

Then, the police stopped them. “Well, you two sure are brave. Are you going to continue fighting right in front of us?”

The leading officer glanced at the scene and thought to himself, 'No wonder the person who called asked for more police. This is such a huge mess, and it's not something that two officers can handle.¹ The two younger police officers were assigned to maintain order at the scene and evacuate unrelated bystanders while the other two officers questioned the two women. "Which one of you is Dahlia Crosby?"

Dahlia was taken aback, feeling uneasy. She quickly took out her phone and was about to call for help.

Olivia noticed it and immediately knocked her phone out of her hand. Then, she loudly said, "She's the one, officers."

Dahlia's expression turned ugly. She immediately picked up her phone and attempted to make a phone call. However, the police stopped her and said, "Dahlia Crosby, we've received reports that you are endangering public safety.

Please cooperate with our investigation."

"Endangering public safety? You must be mistaken, officers. " Dahlia waved off the police and refused to cooperate.

"We will investigate whether there's a mistake or not. Now, please come with us."

"Are you crazy? The person who physically assaulted me is right here, yet you're going to arrest me? Talk to my lawyer if there's any issue. I'm not going anywhere with you!"

When she saw the cold gaze from Keegan in the audience, Dahlia suddenly realized why the police were there. She panicked and shouted, 'Keegan Kane, are you out of your mind? Did you just call the cops on your own mother? You're ridiculous!"

The police officer was not having it at all, and he said in a serious tone, "You're free to consult a lawyer after we're done with the investigation. But, for now, please cooperate with our investigation!"

Dahlia refused to do so and even swung her bag around, hitting the police officer standing close to her.

She did not stop after three consecutive warnings from the police. In the end, they had no choice but to use force to arrest her on charges of assaulting a police officer.

Right after the police officer kept Dahlia under control, a few personnel from the Public Integrity Section showed up.

The police were shocked. ‘Are they here to take over this case?’ After exchanging a few words, they realized that the Public Integrity Section was there for Erick.

A few days ago, Olivia had submitted evidence of Erick’s crimes, including bribery and dereliction of duty. The Public Integrity Section had been verifying the authenticity of the evidence ever since. After confirming the authenticity, they came to invite Erick for a chat.

Upon seeing the representatives from the Public Integrity Section, Erick got so scared that he slumped to the ground, trembling like a frightened puppy.

His legs were so weak that he could not stand, and the people from the Public Integrity Section had to lift him up from the ground.

When he was walking past Olivia, he seemed to have suddenly regained his senses, and he shouted desperately,” Olivia, my dear wife. Please save me! I can’t go to jail! My mother is so old, and Riley just entered university. What will they do if I’m locked up? That woman seduced me, and there was nothing I could do after she got pregnant. Olivia, please help me. I’ll listen to everything you say in the future.

I’m begging you...”

The man who was riding high on promotion now knelt in front of her, tearfully begging with absolutely no sense of dignity.

Olivia remained calm, as she had woken up the moment she saw the true nature of this man.

Erick refused to get a divorce after cheating on Olivia not because he loved her, but because she was his best choice. Not only that Olivia could take good care of the family, but she could also wholeheartedly pave the way for his career.

Once he reached the pinnacle of his career and finally had more options, he would undoubtedly dump her with no hesitation.

the sake of their daughter, Olivia would not have made such a resolute decision today.

However, Erick had lost his conscience a long time ago. He was willing to sacrifice his daughter’s happiness for the sake of himself.

Thinking of this, Olivia raised her hand and slapped him.

“How dare you mention my daughter? Why didn’t you think of them when you betrayed your family and your profession? Let me tell you something. I’ll make sure that not only you but your lover and the illegitimate child you had with her will live a miserable life!”

Erick swayed, enraged, and was about to fight back. “You wretch, you nasty wretch!”

The officer immediately held him back, and Olivia took the opportunity to give him two more slaps.

The officer from the Public Integrity Section weakly pulled Erick away and said, “Hey, don’t get physical now.”

Olivia tidied herself up and said in a gentle tone, “Sir, all of Erick Chapman’s embezzled money is with a woman named Linda Joanna. She lives in Astra Height, Block 3, Unit 1303. You need to hurry and go there. With how big of a scene that occurred here, she might be alerted and try to move her assets elsewhere.”

Erick was still cursing at Olivia, but his words could no longer hurt her. She was going to take back everything that Erick had given to Linda and their son.

She wanted them to lose everything they ever had and be looked down upon by everyone else!

The wedding’s drama finally came to an end.

Stella felt somewhat regretful for not being able to witness the scene where the police subdued Dahlia on the ground. Fortunately, Felicity recorded a full video for her with commentary included.

“With a swift move from the handsome police officer, that old witch was pinned to the ground. She wouldn’t stop murmuring and cursing both Keegan and Aurora. She even called them useless. But, when Keegan asked the police about how many days she could be detained for insulting others, she immediately shut up.

“Only the police can deal with such an evil person. I just can’t stand a word she says!”

Vermont handed her a cup of tea. “Calm down, my dear.

You’ve been talking non-stop since you came in.”

Felicity took a sip and suddenly said, “Where’s Keegan? He didn’t go plead for Dahlia, did he?”

Vermont replied, “Why would he call the police if he wanted to do that? He’s probably speaking to Mrs. Chapman, I mean, Ms. Warren to find out what exactly happened. Dahlia has been so close with Erick that if there were really significant financial transactions between them, it could be a big deal.”

Suddenly, as they were chatting, there was a knock on the door.

“It’s got to be Keegan. I’ll get it,” Felicity said.

However, when she opened the door, she did not see Keegan. Instead, it was Marshall standing outside.

Felicity paused and immediately exclaimed, “Mr. Moore, you’re here.”

Stella tossed a bitten apple to Vermont, laid back on the bed, and instantly assumed a weak appearance.

Vermont was speechless. ‘What an actress,’ he thought.

He casually placed the apple back in the fruit tray, stood up, and said, “Marshall, you haven’t left yet.”

Marshall walked in and frowned at the sight of Stella looking sickly in bed. “I’m here to visit Stella. Why didn’t you guys take her to the hospital?”

“Lena insisted that it wasn’t a big deal. She just asked us to keep an eye on her,” Vermont replied.

Marshall stayed silent. He approached the bedside and asked, “How are you holding up, Stella? Let’s take you to the hospital.”

Stella shook her head. Mr. Moore, I’m fine. Lena said it was just a superficial injury. She told me to rest at home and keep the wound dry. If you’re that worried, I’ll get it checked tomorrow.” She paused, trying to make her lie more convincing. Then, she added, “Plus, Keegan’s due for a hospital visit tomorrow, so I’ll tag along. It’s late now.”

Marshall furrowed his brows. He looked at the bandaged wounds on her head and legs and asked, “You sure you’re okay?”

“You don’t trust Lena?” Stella joked.

Marshall pursed his lips. With a concerned look on his face, he said, “I just can’t figure out why Ms. Crosby would pull a stunt like that. Why would she hurt you and Aurora?”

‘That’s because—’

Felicity was all fired up and ready to speak when Vermont grabbed her butt.

While blushing, she kicked Vermont’s ass and said, “You sneak! How dare you take advantage of me!”

Vermont casually dusted off his pants and said, “I don’t think I need to be sneaky to take advantage of you.”

Felicity was ready to retaliate, but Vermont hid behind Marshall and evaded her.

Vexed by their antics, Marshall grabbed Felicity and inquired, “Ms. Thompson, what were you about to say earlier?”

Felicity felt puzzled and asked, “What?”

“Nevermind,” said Marshall.

“Stop hiding and face me, you sneak!” Felicity pressed on Marshall’s shoulder, as she attempted to jump over and catch Vermont.

Seeing this, Vermont quickly lifted her and pulled her down.

“You hooligan, why are you jumping into Marshall’s arms?”

Felicity pulled his ear and said, “Where did you grab me earlier?”

Vermont hesitated for a moment. He then patted her butt and asked in a low voice, “Does your tailbone still hurt?”

Felicity’s expression changed, and she bit him on the shoulder.

Stella smiled and looked at Marshall. “Mr. Moore, it’s getting late. You should head back.”

For a while, Marshall was silent. He took out a talisman from his pocket, handed it to her, and said, “I got this for you back when we visited the wishing well. They said it’s effective for protection.”

Before Stella could respond, Keegan chimed in and said, “What wishing well?”

Stella was speechless. ‘What a terrible timing!’ she thought.

Keegan walked over and stood between Marshall and Stella. He glanced at the talisman in Marshall’s hand before he grabbed and examined it.

With a nonchalant tone, he said, “If it’s that effective, maybe you should snag one of these talismans for your love life, Marshall.”

Marshall paused, as he locked eyes with Keegan.

Felicity, who was nestled in Vermont’s arms, widened her eyes. ‘Is this about to turn into a showdown? Are they going to throw punches?’ Clearly, Felicity did not understand Keegan.

‘Only kids would get into fights. Keegan is definitely more immature than this,’ Stella said to herself.

Just as that thought crossed her mind, Keegan dropped the talisman into a cup on the table, and it floated on the water.

He hesitated for a moment before he swiftly reached out to retrieve it. However, in the rush, he pushed the talisman even deeper.

When he finally pulled it out, the talisman had been soaked, and the symbols on it were now blurred.

Keegan frowned and looked visibly troubled. “This thing is now wet. Can it still work?”

Marshall’s finger curled slightly, as he stared at the talisman briefly. He then slowly looked up and offered a faint smile.” We can only make a wish at the wishing well once a year. Overdoing it diminishes its power. Stella wished for your safe return, and it worked. As for me, I got her this talisman. We’ve exhausted our wishes for the year.”

Keegan’s face noticeably darkened.

Felicity gripped Vermont’s collar in excitement and reveled in the idea of the drama unfolding. ‘Oh, my. The adrenaline!’ Stella took the talisman from Keegan and remarked, “Maybe the water will activate its powers. It’s like taking it to the next level. Nice touch, Keegan. Thank you.”

Marshall chuckled, “I’ll head out now. Take care of yourself and those injuries.”

“Drive safe,” Stella replied.

Marshall nodded and turned to Keegan. “Look after her,” he said.

Upon hearing that, Keegan felt annoyed and thought, ‘Who does he think he’s talking to?’ Stella was worried that his jealousy might flare up, and he would say something that would give her away. But, Keegan bit back his words and simply said, “I think you should worry more about yourself.”

Following that, Marshall left without saying anything further.

Felicity was eager to say something, but Vermont carried her out and said, “Come on. We should leave too. Let’s not disturb Stella while she recovers.”

Felicity tugged at his hair and gritted her teeth. “She’s not even injured for real,”

she said.

Vermont kissed her cheek and whispered, “You clueless thing, do you want to be the third wheel? Be careful. Keegan has a temper. He might get mad at us.”

Felicity immediately closed her mouth.

With the two gone, the room settled into silence. Keegan glanced at the talisman in Stella’s hand, pursed his lips, and said, “Let’s go. I’ll take you home.”

Stella was about to get up.

However, Keegan pressed her shoulder and bent down to carry her in his arms.

Stella was taken aback, and Keegan explained, “You’re covered in blood. What would people say about me if I let you walk downstairs by yourself?”

Taken aback, Stella thought, 'Fine, I'll go along with your act.' She pursed her lips and said, "So what?" However, her hand did not loosen.

Keegan looked down and chuckled. He lifted her a bit higher and carried her away.

Once they were in the elevator, Stella leaned on his shoulder and asked, "Are you going to the police station later?"

"Yeah." Keegan thought for a moment before he explained, "Not to bail someone, though. Just for some routine questioning."

"Then, I'll go with you."

Keegan hesitated, looked at her blood-soaked condition, and asked, "How would you handle the police if they were to assess your injuries?"

His question left Stella at a loss for words.
