

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1966 [Eleven Jewell]

Aurora paused momentarily before calling out softly, “Mom...

Dahlia choked up as she spoke, “Aurora, I didn’t mean to treat you like that just now. I was just too angry that you stood on Stella’s side and lied to me, so I did that.

“You know I’ve always loved you and gave you the best of everything.

“When you were locked up back then, I did everything I could to get you out.

You can’t leave me alone.”

Aurora lowered her gaze and said in a hoarse voice, “Mom, I can’t help you.

Keegan won’t let me do that.”

Dahlia continued to plea, “Are you just going to watch me get locked up here without doing anything then? Do you know what it’s like in here?

“There are seven to eight people here together, has no beds, smells terrible, and has no heater too.

“I’m freezing cold now. Aurora, my body is weak, and I can’t stand this at all.

Please help me.”

Aurora pursed her lips. “I know what it’s like in there. Mom, you’d better control your temper.

“The people inside are not to be messed with. Don’t provoke them or your time inside will be worse than it is now.”

Dahlia was taken aback and suddenly stopped crying. She had called Aurora for help, not to listen to her advice.

When she realized that her plan did not work, Dahlia stopped pretending and said with a harsh tone, “Aurora Kane! You ungrateful thing! I’ve doted on you all these years for nothing!

“All you have to do is sign and pay some money, yet you’re not willing to come.

I’m already so old and you want me to stay in a place like this.

“You’re a monster. If I knew I would raise such a thing, I should’ve strangled you to death the moment you were born!

“I’m locked up now, and what good does it do to you? Do you think that no one will point fingers at you when something like this happens to your mother?”

None of those rich kids would want to be your friends anymore! No one with a decent family background would want to marry you! You-“

Aurora abruptly ended the call.

Aldor looked at her, who had a pale face and seemed to be in a very bad mood.

He asked softly, “What’s wrong?”

Aurora lifted her head and tears welled up in her extremely red eyes.

With a hoarse voice, she asked, “Am I a pathetic person?”

Aldor chuckled and said, “This doesn’t sound like something you’d ask.”

Aurora wiped away her tears and said while choking, “I know you’re just going on a date with me because you’re afraid that my grandmother will give you a hard time and Keegan will cut your salary.

“You don’t really care about me, right? You think I’m annoying, don’t you?”

Aldor responded honestly, “Well, you’re not exactly wrong.”

Aurora was taken aback and cried even louder.

Aldor handed her a tissue and said with a smile, “I prefer the arrogant expression on your face when you look at everyone else as if they’re all worth nothing to you. Crying is not your thing at all.”

Aurora did not stop crying while she said, “Are you making fun of me?”

“I’m praising you.”

Aurora did not take the tissue, so Aldor wiped the tears away for her.

He laughed while doing so.

Aurora felt worse. “Are you sick? I’m crying, and you’re not comforting me.

Instead, you’re laughing.”

Aldor replied in a low voice, “I didn’t mean to, I just... couldn’t help it.”

He switched on the front camera of his phone as he spoke and showed it to Aurora.

Aurora found her mascara smeared all over her eyes, and the tears streaming down her face were black, clinging under her eyes like worms. She looked horrifying.

After Aldor wiped her face, the two streaks of tears became even longer, making her look funnier.

Aurora immediately stopped crying.

However, Aldor was still laughing.

Now I know why you've been single despite earning so much! You're so annoying!"

Aurora grabbed the phone angrily, wiping her smeared makeup while sobbing.

Aldor chuckled, but surprisingly, did not refute this time.

Aurora was a little scared that Aldor would ask about what happened, but he unexpectedly did not. This included the incident back at the hotel and what Dahlia had said to her on the phone.

As Aurora was still cleaning her makeup, her stomach growled.

Suddenly, the atmosphere became awkward.

She had been worried all day about what Dahlia would do to Stella at the wedding, so she had not eaten much. She only realized that she was hungry when her stomach growled.

However, at that moment, she felt embarrassed more than hungry.

Aldor did not say anything. Instead, he took a lunch box from the side and handed it to her.

A strong aroma of eggs filled the car, leaving Aurora stunned.

Aldor said, "My mom made some egg sandwiches for you. They might be a bit cold, though. If you don't want it, I can take you somewhere else for a meal."

"It's fine." Aurora took the lunch box, lowered her gaze, and softly said, "There's no need for that. This is good enough."

Aldor rolled down the window slightly and handed her a bottle of water. After that, he said, "Go ahead and eat, then.

I'll take you home after you finish them."

Aurora nodded and started munching on the egg sandwiches.

“Mrs. Hart is really good at making these. They’re delicious.”

Really? She just started learning how to make them not long ago. She said that she saw you eating a lot of egg sandwiches when we ate together, so she tried making them. So, when Mr. Kane wanted me to pick you up, she prepared some for you to try.”

Aurora was stunned. Then, she felt a lump in her throat and started crying again.

She was not even Aldor’s girlfriend, yet Sylvia was already willing to learn and make something she liked to eat. In contrast, her own mother just heartlessly framed her for her personal motives.

Aldor saw her crying again and asked with a frown, “Is it so bad that you’re crying?”

Aurora laughed upon hearing what Aldor said and continued crying again. “Shut up.”

Aldor chuckled. “That’s right. This is the disdainful look I was talking about.”

Aurora was speechless.

She held the lukewarm sandwiches in her hands, but her heart was filled with warmth.

In the end, no one came to bail out Dahlia. Blake was in the midst of a divorce, and all his money had been frozen by his wife. Although he wanted to help, there was nothing he could do.

As for others, Dahlia had already burned all her bridges, so no one was willing to help her.

After leaving the police station, Keegan went to Cordelia’s home and stayed there until 1 a.m. before returning to his house.

Stella could not stay awake and had fallen asleep long ago. However, she kept the bedroom light on for him.

Keegan walked over to the bed and removed the book resting on her stomach.

Then, he tucked her in and went to the bathroom.

After taking a hot shower, he came back to the bed.

Ever since he “lost” his memories, they had been using separate blankets on the same bed.

As he got into bed, he deftly removed Stella’s blanket and then covered them both with his own.

When Stella felt a source of heat getting closer to her, she instinctively snuggled into Keegan’s embrace and hugged his waist.

Keegan stroked her disheveled hair, leaned down to kiss her gently, and slowly closed his eyes.

The next morning, when Stella tried to move after waking up, she was startled by the person above her. She lifted her head, met Keegan's gaze, and realized she was clinging to him like a koala.

Keegan woke up from being half-asleep. He looked down at Stella's hand touching his chest and said, "Are you enjoying it?"

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1967 [Eleven Jewell]

Aurora was a little scared that Aldor would ask about what happened, but he unexpectedly did not. This included the incident back at the hotel and what Dahlia had said to her on the phone.

As Aurora was still cleaning her makeup, her stomach growled.

Suddenly, the atmosphere became awkward.

She had been worried all day about what Dahlia would do to Stella at the wedding, so she had not eaten much. She only realized that she was hungry when her stomach growled.

However, at that moment, she felt embarrassed more than hungry.

Aldor did not say anything. Instead, he took a lunch box from the side and handed it to her.

A strong aroma of eggs filled the car, leaving Aurora stunned.

Aldor said, "My mom made some egg sandwiches for you. They might be a bit cold, though. If you don't want it, I can take you somewhere else for a meal."

"It's fine." Aurora took the lunch box, lowered her gaze, and softly said, "There's no need for that. This is good enough."

Aldor rolled down the window slightly and handed her a bottle of water. After that, he said, "Go ahead and eat, then.

I'll take you home after you finish them."

Aurora nodded and started munching on the egg sandwiches.

"Mrs. Hart is really good at making these. They're delicious."

Really? She just started learning how to make them not long ago. She said that she saw you eating a lot of egg sandwiches when we ate together, so she tried making them. So, when Mr. Kane wanted me to pick you up, she prepared some for you to try.”

Aurora was stunned. Then, she felt a lump in her throat and started crying again.

She was not even Aldor’s girlfriend, yet Sylvia was already willing to learn and make something she liked to eat. In contrast, her own mother just heartlessly framed her for her personal motives.

Aldor saw her crying again and asked with a frown, “Is it so bad that you’re crying?”

Aurora laughed upon hearing what Aldor said and continued crying again. “Shut up.”

Aldor chuckled. “That’s right. This is the disdainful look I was talking about.”

Aurora was speechless.

She held the lukewarm sandwiches in her hands, but her heart was filled with warmth.

In the end, no one came to bail out Dahlia. Blake was in the midst of a divorce, and all his money had been frozen by his wife. Although he wanted to help, there was nothing he could do.

As for others, Dahlia had already burned all her bridges, so no one was willing to help her.

After leaving the police station, Keegan went to Cordelia’s home and stayed there until 1 a.m. before returning to his house.

Stella could not stay awake and had fallen asleep long ago. However, she kept the bedroom light on for him.

Keegan walked over to the bed and removed the book resting on her stomach.

Then, he tucked her in and went to the bathroom.

After taking a hot shower, he came back to the bed.

Ever since he “lost” his memories, they had been using separate blankets on the same bed.

As he got into bed, he deftly removed Stella’s blanket and then covered them both with his own.

When Stella felt a source of heat getting closer to her, she instinctively snuggled into Keegan’s embrace and hugged his waist.

Keegan stroked her disheveled hair, leaned down to kiss her gently, and slowly closed his eyes.

The next morning, when Stella tried to move after waking up, she was startled by the person above her. She lifted her head, met Keegan's gaze, and realized she was clinging to him like a koala.

Keegan woke up from being half-asleep. He looked down at Stella's hand touching his chest and said, "Are you enjoying it?"

Stella quickly moved her hand away and said with a frown, "Why are you inside my blanket?"

Keegan sat up and was taken aback upon hearing what Stella said. "Take a good look at whose blanket this is."

Stella looked at the blanket and fell silent.

Then, she quietly rolled out of Keegan's blanket, grabbed her own, and covered herself again.

"I don't usually sleep like this." Stella tried to explain herself. "It's probably because of the pregnancy. The little one inside is acting up."

Keegan got out of bed and took off his pajamas. Then, he grabbed his shirt and said while buttoning up, "It's okay."

"Didn't you say that we should work on our physical connection? I understand."

He raised his gaze, as he spoke. "You can just ask to sleep under the same blanket next time. No need to beat around the bush."

His response left Stella utterly speechless.

'He needs to stop accusing me!' Stella said inwardly.

The past few days had been strange for Stella. Even though she had been sleeping in her own blanket every night, she would wake up in Keegan's every morning. However, it was still fine for Stella, as Keegan would always wake up before her, making the situation less awkward.

But, after waking up face-to-face with Keegan this morning, Stella figured that Keegan must have thought that she was trying to get closer to him in the middle of the night.

However, that was not the case at all.

Ever since she got pregnant, her sleep had improved significantly. Sometimes, she would feel like teasing Keegan in bed, but she would fall asleep before he even returned.

'Have I really been snuggling into him for the past few days?' Stella wondered to herself.

Keegan saw how confused Stella looked, and his mood lit up.

“Come on, go get ready. We’re going to the hospital.”

Stella rubbed her hair and responded in a daze, “Okay.”

When she went downstairs, there was a fresh bouquet of flowers on the table with dewdrops glistening on the petals.

As she approached it, she noticed a blue jewelry box next to the flowers.

Stella paused and turned to Keegan.

Keegan was tying his tie, and when he noticed her gaze, he explained, “Aldor prepared this for Valentine’s Day.”

“Oh.”

Stella did not touch the box. Then, she turned around and put on her jacket.

Keegan was taken aback. “Are you not going to open it?”

“Didn’t you say that Aldor prepared it for Aurora? Why would I open somebody else’s gift?”

Keegan was speechless.

His expression turned somewhat indescribable before he said in a low voice, “Aldor prepared it for me to give it to you. I didn’t give it to you last night because you fell asleep.”

“Oh…” Stella dragged her voice. After that, she said, “So, you bought me a Valentine’s Day gift?”

Keegan paused for a moment before he said, “Aldor did.”

Stella replied, “I’m glad that you told him to buy it. He knows exactly what I like.”

As she spoke, she opened the box and saw a platinum bracelet with intricate craftsmanship.

Suddenly, a bright smile appeared on her face. “I told you so. Aldor knows me all too well.”

Keegan was speechless.

‘I was the one who chose this!’ he exclaimed inwardly.

Keegan watched, as Stella lovingly held the platinum bracelet. He felt happy and frustrated at the same time.

“Aldor picked this flower too, right?” Stella touched the petals and said, “Aldor is so good with flowers. Look at how fresh they are.”

Keegan could not hold back anymore, and he exclaimed, “I bought the flowers!”

Stella looked at him. “Why did you buy them?”

“I—” Keegan looked away, as he said, “I saw a little girl selling flowers alone, so I bought all of her flowers out of pity.”

‘This scum! He just keeps on lying!’ Stella cursed inwardly.

Then, she scoffed, “No wonder they’re not fresh at all. They’re all leftovers, huh?”

Keegan was shocked.

‘When Aldor is the one buying them, they’re fresh. But, when I buy them, they’re not?’ Keegan glared at the bouquet, plucked a flower petal out of frustration, and got into the car without speaking to Stella.

Stella was amused. His acting skill could be considered convincing when he was around others, but when they were alone, he would display his true emotions all over. To Stella, his acting skills were simply terrible.

The hospital they went to for the prenatal checkup was affiliated with Fober University. Most of the people who went there for medical treatment were retired cadres and show folk, as the hospital provided good confidentiality.

Garett’s senior was in charge of Stella’s examination. Stella had been to this hospital before, so the doctor was very familiar with her condition.

Keegan accompanied her throughout the entire process. However, he was scrutinizing each of the test results.

Stella laughed and said, “You’re not even a doctor. Can you understand them?”

Keegan did not say anything in response. He was probably still angry with what happened in the morning.

Stella pouted and secretly cursed him for being petty.

During the ultrasound, the doctor looked at the screen and suddenly paused.

Then, she frowned and carefully observed the baby with a somewhat serious expression.

Stella felt nervous. She had always dreaded it whenever the doctor's expression suddenly changed during examinations.

She clutched her shirt tightly and asked in a low voice, "Is everything okay, doctor?"

The doctor chuckled, "They're twins."

Keegan froze.

Stella could not process what the doctor said at first. "What? ■ The doctor continued gently, "Your babies were only six weeks old during your last visit, so I couldn't see them clearly. But, I am sure of it this time."

She pointed to show Stella and added, "Look over here and here. There are two gestational sacs."

Stella stared at the doctor's fingers and carefully observed the screen. She could vaguely see two pea-sized things, and her heart pounded wildly.

"D-D-Doctor, are you sure? Are you sure they're twins?"

Stella was so excited that she stuttered.

The doctor responded with a smile. "Actually, during your last visit, I wasn't sure because it wasn't very clear at that time. I was afraid of making the wrong judgment and causing unnecessary excitement for you, so I didn't bring it up- "But, I am certain this time. They're fraternal twins. It'd be wonderful if they were a boy and a girl."

Stella grabbed Keegan and shook him excitedly. "Keegan Kane, did you hear that? Twins! They're twins! I'm going to give birth to two babies, yet I only have to suffer through pregnancy once! How lucky is that?"

Keegan snapped out of his daze and regained his senses after being shaken by Stella.

He held Stella's hand tightly and asked, "Doctor, can her body handle a twin pregnancy? I just looked at the test result, and a few indicators are showing more fluctuations than before. Is there any risk with a twin pregnancy? If there is, can we consider selective reduction?"

Keegan's words instantly brought Stella back from her excitement.

"You're pretty attentive for remembering the readings from previous reports.

Also, you're the first person I've met who'd ask about the wife's condition upon hearing news like this," the doctor said.

Then, she raised her head and added, "It's still too soon to think about that.

Currently, your wife's condition looks fine, and there's no need for a reduction.

"As long as you come for checkups regularly, we'll provide you with scientific advice based on the mother's health condition during different stages of pregnancy.

"Generally, nothing will go wrong. But, of course, if any problems arise later on, we'll certainly opt for a reduction to ensure the mother's safety. You can rest assured about that."

Stella heaved a sigh of relief and realized that her palm was wet. She looked down and saw Keegan's hand covered in sweat.

It turned out that he was more worried than her.

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1968 [Eleven Jewell]

Stella quickly moved her hand away and said with a frown, "Why are you inside my blanket?"

Keegan sat up and was taken aback upon hearing what Stella said. "Take a good look at whose blanket this is."

Stella looked at the blanket and fell silent.

Then, she quietly rolled out of Keegan's blanket, grabbed her own, and covered herself again.

"I don't usually sleep like this." Stella tried to explain herself. "It's probably because of the pregnancy. The little one inside is acting up."

Keegan got out of bed and took off his pajamas. Then, he grabbed his shirt and said while buttoning up, "It's okay.

Didn't you say that we should work on our physical connection? I understand."

He raised his gaze, as he spoke. "You can just ask to sleep under the same blanket next time. No need to beat around the bush."

His response left Stella utterly speechless.

'He needs to stop accusing me!' Stella said inwardly.

The past few days had been strange for Stella. Even though she had been sleeping in her own blanket every night, she would wake up in Keegan's every morning. However, it was still fine for Stella, as Keegan would always wake up before her, making the situation less awkward.

But, after waking up face-to-face with Keegan this morning, Stella figured that Keegan must have thought that she was trying to get closer to him in the middle of the night.

However, that was not the case at all.

Ever since she got pregnant, her sleep had improved significantly. Sometimes, she would feel like teasing Keegan in bed, but she would fall asleep before he even returned.

'Have I really been snuggling into him for the past few days?' Stella wondered to herself.

Keegan saw how confused Stella looked, and his mood lit up.

"Come on, go get ready. We're going to the hospital."

Stella rubbed her hair and responded in a daze, "Okay."

When she went downstairs, there was a fresh bouquet of flowers on the table with dewdrops glistening on the petals.

As she approached it, she noticed a blue jewelry box next to the flowers.

Stella paused and turned to Keegan.

Keegan was tying his tie, and when he noticed her gaze, he explained, "Aldor prepared this for Valentine's Day."

"Oh."

Stella did not touch the box. Then, she turned around and put on her jacket.

Keegan was taken aback. "Are you not going to open it?"

"Didn't you say that Aldor prepared it for Aurora? Why would I open somebody else's gift?"

Keegan was speechless.

His expression turned somewhat indescribable before he said in a low voice, "Aldor prepared it for me to give it to you. I didn't give it to you last night because you fell asleep."

"Oh..." Stella dragged her voice. After that, she said, "So, you bought me a Valentine's Day gift?"

Keegan paused for a moment before he said, "Aldor did."

Stella replied, "I'm glad that you told him to buy it. He knows exactly what I like."

As she spoke, she opened the box and saw a platinum bracelet with intricate craftsmanship.

Suddenly, a bright smile appeared on her face. "I told you so. Aldor knows me all too well."

Keegan was speechless.

'I was the one who chose this!' he exclaimed inwardly.

Keegan watched, as Stella lovingly held the platinum bracelet. He felt happy and frustrated at the same time.

"Aldor picked this flower too, right?" Stella touched the petals and said, "Aldor is so good with flowers. Look at how fresh they are."

Keegan could not hold back anymore, and he exclaimed, "I bought the flowers!"

Stella looked at him. "Why did you buy them?"

"I—" Keegan looked away, as he said, "I saw a little girl selling flowers alone, so I bought all of her flowers out of pity."

'This scum! He just keeps on lying!' Stella cursed inwardly.

Then, she scoffed, “No wonder they’re not fresh at all. They’re all leftovers, huh?”

Keegan was shocked.

‘When Aldor is the one buying them, they’re fresh. But, when I buy them, they’re not?’ Keegan glared at the bouquet, plucked a flower petal out of frustration, and got into the car without speaking to Stella.

Stella was amused. His acting skill could be considered convincing when he was around others, but when they were alone, he would display his true emotions all over. To Stella, his acting skills were simply terrible.

The hospital they went to for the prenatal checkup was affiliated with Fober University. Most of the people who went there for medical treatment were retired cadres and show folk, as the hospital provided good confidentiality.

Garett’s senior was in charge of Stella’s examination. Stella had been to this hospital before, so the doctor was very familiar with her condition.

Keegan accompanied her throughout the entire process. However, he was scrutinizing each of the test results.

Stella laughed and said, “You’re not even a doctor. Can you understand them?”

Keegan did not say anything in response. He was probably still angry with what happened in the morning.

Stella pouted and secretly cursed him for being petty.

During the ultrasound, the doctor looked at the screen and suddenly paused.

Then, she frowned and carefully observed the baby with a somewhat serious expression.

Stella felt nervous. She had always dreaded it whenever the doctor’s expression suddenly changed during examinations.

She clutched her shirt tightly and asked in a low voice, “Is everything okay, doctor?”

The doctor chuckled, “They’re twins.”

Keegan froze.

Stella could not process what the doctor said at first. “What? ■ The doctor continued gently, “Your babies were only six weeks old during your last visit, so I couldn’t see them clearly. But, I am sure of it this time.”

She pointed to show Stella and added, “Look over here and here. There are two gestational sacs.”

Stella stared at the doctor’s fingers and carefully observed the screen. She could vaguely see two pea-sized things, and her heart pounded wildly.

“D-D-Doctor, are you sure? Are you sure they’re twins?”

Stella was so excited that she stuttered.

The doctor responded with a smile. “Actually, during your last visit, I wasn’t sure because it wasn’t very clear at that time. I was afraid of making the wrong judgment and causing unnecessary excitement for you, so I didn’t bring it up- “But, I am certain this time. They’re fraternal twins. It’d be wonderful if they were a boy and a girl.”

Stella grabbed Keegan and shook him excitedly. “Keegan Kane, did you hear that? Twins! They’re twins! I’m going to give birth to two babies, yet I only have to suffer through pregnancy once! How lucky is that?”

Keegan snapped out of his daze and regained his senses after being shaken by Stella.

He held Stella’s hand tightly and asked, “Doctor, can her body handle a twin pregnancy? I just looked at the test result, and a few indicators are showing more fluctuations than before. Is there any risk with a twin pregnancy? If there is, can we consider selective reduction?”

Keegan’s words instantly brought Stella back from her excitement.

“You’re pretty attentive for remembering the readings from previous reports.

Also, you’re the first person I’ve met who’d ask about the wife’s condition upon hearing news like this,” the doctor said.

Then, she raised her head and added, “It’s still too soon to think about that.

Currently, your wife's condition looks fine, and there's no need for a reduction.

"As long as you come for checkups regularly, we'll provide you with scientific advice based on the mother's health condition during different stages of pregnancy.

"Generally, nothing will go wrong. But, of course, if any problems arise later on, we'll certainly opt for a reduction to ensure the mother's safety. You can rest assured about that."

Stella heaved a sigh of relief and realized that her palm was wet. She looked down and saw Keegan's hand covered in sweat.

It turned out that he was more worried than her.

The doctor gave Stella a new diet plan and reminded her to control her sugar intake.

With the increased risk of carrying twins, it was important to strictly control the rate of fetal growth. Smaller and healthier fetuses would lead to a smoother delivery process, and a quicker recovery for the mother afterward.

Keegan took out his phone and diligently noted down all the doctor's instructions.

Stella was listening to the doctor carefully too. But, when she went to get some water, she saw Keegan's serious demeanor while typing on his phone and found it somewhat amusing.

His stern expression made him look exactly like a secretary jotting down meeting notes. No one would have thought that he was writing down notes of the doctor's instructions.

Keegan was still holding Stella's hand when they came out of the doctor's office.

However, Stella just let him do it without mocking him for acting as if he had regained his memories.

She could feel the mixed emotions of excitement and concern emanating from Keegan through their intertwined fingers.

In fact, she was feeling the exact same way.

Being pregnant was already a blessing to her, but having twins was beyond her wildest imagination.

Now that she thought about it, it seemed like there were some signs.

She recalled the jellyfish dream she had before, where the beautiful bubble split into two. 'Could that be one of the signs?' she wondered to herself.

And, her appetite had changed drastically. She could eat more than other pregnant women who were at the same stage, and she felt hungry very often.

'Well, I do have two babies inside of me. It's only normal that I can eat more, right?' Stella thought to herself.

'Twins... It would be great if they were a boy and a girl like the doctor claimed.

'Of course, it would be great too if they're both girls or both boys. I don't really mind,' Stella said inwardly.

While she was lost in her thoughts, Stella did not pay attention to the path ahead and accidentally bumped into a man, knocking the medicine out of his hand.

Stella was stunned. Then, she immediately bent down to pick up the medicine.

However, the man was furious and angrily shoved Stella away. "Are you blind?"

he shouted.

Stella almost fell to the ground, but fortunately, Keegan reacted quick enough and caught her.

After helping Stella regain her balance, Keegan abruptly grabbed the man by his collar and said with a cold face,

"What department are you from?"

The man was startled by Keegan's demeanor. He stuttered, as he said, "H- Hey, wh-what are you doing?"

Keegan tightened his grip and said, "I asked you a question. What department are you from!?"

"Obstetrics and Gynecology."

The man quickly realized his mistake and immediately apologized to Stella. "I'm sorry. Please, forgive me. I didn't mean to do that. The medicine was very expensive, and I was in a hurry..."

Stella pulled Keegan away and whispered, "Forget it. I wasn't paying attention either, and I didn't fall anyway."

With a tense face, Keegan released the man and walked Stella to the elevator.

However, he became more careful this time. He wrapped his arm around Stella's shoulders, preventing others from touching her.

Stella's heart melted, as she reached out to encircle Keegan's waist. Then, she whispered, "Keegan Kane, I'm happy. I'm so happy."

Keegan remained silent. He raised his hand and tucked her head against his chest. In the crowded elevator, Stella could clearly hear his heartbeat.

After coming out of the building and walking to the parking lot side-by-side, Keegan suddenly halted his steps.

Stella was taken aback and turned to him.

Then, she heard Keegan say in a soft voice, "Why don't we... get our marriage certificate first?"

Stella's heart skipped a beat.

'Is he finally going to stop pretending?' she wondered to herself.

Keegan explained, "Didn't you say that we have to work on our physical connection? Once we get the certificate, we can do whatever a legitimate couple can do without worrying about others gossiping."

Stella was left speechless.

'Only he could come up with such a terrible excuse!

'Is he the kind of person who'd be afraid of gossip?

'I can't believe that the proposal I've been dreaming about for so long turns out this way!' Stella thought to herself.

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1969 [Eleven Jewell]

"Aldor picked this flower too, right?" Stella touched the petals and said, "Aldor is so good with flowers. Look at how fresh they are."

Keegan could not hold back anymore, and he exclaimed, "I bought the flowers!"

Stella looked at him. "Why did you buy them?"

"I—" Keegan looked away, as he said, "I saw a little girl selling flowers alone, so I bought all of her flowers out of pity."

'This scum! He just keeps on lying!' Stella cursed inwardly.

Then, she scoffed, "No wonder they're not fresh at all. They're all leftovers, huh?"

Keegan was shocked.

'When Aldor is the one buying them, they're fresh. But, when I buy them, they're not?' Keegan glared at the bouquet, plucked a flower petal out of frustration, and got into the car without speaking to Stella.

Stella was amused. His acting skill could be considered convincing when he was around others, but when they were alone, he would display his true emotions all over. To Stella, his acting skills were simply terrible.

The hospital they went to for the prenatal checkup was affiliated with Fober University. Most of the people who went there for medical treatment were retired cadres and show folk, as the hospital provided good confidentiality.

Garett's senior was in charge of Stella's examination. Stella had been to this hospital before, so the doctor was very familiar with her condition.

Keegan accompanied her throughout the entire process. However, he was scrutinizing each of the test results.

Stella laughed and said, "You're not even a doctor. Can you understand them?"

Keegan did not say anything in response. He was probably still angry with what happened in the morning.

Stella pouted and secretly cursed him for being petty.

During the ultrasound, the doctor looked at the screen and suddenly paused.

Then, she frowned and carefully observed the baby with a somewhat serious expression.

Stella felt nervous. She had always dreaded it whenever the doctor's expression suddenly changed during examinations.

She clutched her shirt tightly and asked in a low voice, "Is everything okay, doctor?"

The doctor chuckled, "They're twins."

Keegan froze.

Stella could not process what the doctor said at first. "What? ■ The doctor continued gently, "Your babies were only six weeks old during your last visit, so I couldn't see them clearly. But, I am sure of it this time."

She pointed to show Stella and added, "Look over here and here. There are two gestational sacs."

Stella stared at the doctor's fingers and carefully observed the screen. She could vaguely see two pea-sized things, and her heart pounded wildly.

"D-D-Doctor, are you sure? Are you sure they're twins?"

Stella was so excited that she stuttered.

The doctor responded with a smile. "Actually, during your last visit, I wasn't sure because it wasn't very clear at that time. I was afraid of making the wrong judgment and causing unnecessary excitement for you, so I didn't bring it up- “But, I am certain this time. They’re fraternal twins. It’d be wonderful if they were a boy and a girl.”

Stella grabbed Keegan and shook him excitedly. “Keegan Kane, did you hear that? Twins! They’re twins! I’m going to give birth to two babies, yet I only have to suffer through pregnancy once! How lucky is that?”

Keegan snapped out of his daze and regained his senses after being shaken by Stella.

He held Stella’s hand tightly and asked, “Doctor, can her body handle a twin pregnancy? I just looked at the test result, and a few indicators are showing more fluctuations than before. Is there any risk with a twin pregnancy? If there is, can we consider selective reduction?”

Keegan’s words instantly brought Stella back from her excitement.

“You’re pretty attentive for remembering the readings from previous reports.

Also, you’re the first person I’ve met who’d ask about the wife’s condition upon hearing news like this,” the doctor said.

Then, she raised her head and added, “It’s still too soon to think about that.

Currently, your wife’s condition looks fine, and there’s no need for a reduction.

“As long as you come for checkups regularly, we’ll provide you with scientific advice based on the mother’s health condition during different stages of pregnancy.

“Generally, nothing will go wrong. But, of course, if any problems arise later on, we’ll certainly opt for a reduction to ensure the mother’s safety. You can rest assured about that.”

Stella heaved a sigh of relief and realized that her palm was wet. She looked down and saw Keegan’s hand covered in sweat.

It turned out that he was more worried than her.

The doctor gave Stella a new diet plan and reminded her to control her sugar intake.

With the increased risk of carrying twins, it was important to strictly control the rate of fetal growth. Smaller and healthier fetuses would lead to a smoother delivery process, and a quicker recovery for the mother afterward.

Keegan took out his phone and diligently noted down all the doctor's instructions.

Stella was listening to the doctor carefully too. But, when she went to get some water, she saw Keegan's serious demeanor while typing on his phone and found it somewhat amusing.

His stern expression made him look exactly like a secretary jotting down meeting notes. No one would have thought that he was writing down notes of the doctor's instructions.

Keegan was still holding Stella's hand when they came out of the doctor's office.

However, Stella just let him do it without mocking him for acting as if he had regained his memories.

She could feel the mixed emotions of excitement and concern emanating from Keegan through their intertwined fingers.

In fact, she was feeling the exact same way.

Being pregnant was already a blessing to her, but having twins was beyond her wildest imagination.

Now that she thought about it, it seemed like there were some signs.

She recalled the jellyfish dream she had before, where the beautiful bubble split into two. 'Could that be one of the signs?' she wondered to herself.

And, her appetite had changed drastically. She could eat more than other pregnant women who were at the same stage, and she felt hungry very often.

'Well, I do have two babies inside of me. It's only normal that I can eat more, right?' Stella thought to herself.

'Twins... It would be great if they were a boy and a girl like the doctor claimed.'

'Of course, it would be great too if they're both girls or both boys. I don't really mind,' Stella said inwardly.

While she was lost in her thoughts, Stella did not pay attention to the path ahead and accidentally bumped into a man, knocking the medicine out of his hand.

Stella was stunned. Then, she immediately bent down to pick up the medicine.

However, the man was furious and angrily shoved Stella away. "Are you blind?"

he shouted.

Stella almost fell to the ground, but fortunately, Keegan reacted quick enough and caught her.

After helping Stella regain her balance, Keegan abruptly grabbed the man by his collar and said with a cold face,

"What department are you from?"

The man was startled by Keegan's demeanor. He stuttered, as he said, "H- Hey, wh-what are you doing?"

Keegan tightened his grip and said, "I asked you a question. What department are you from!?"

"Obstetrics and Gynecology."

The man quickly realized his mistake and immediately apologized to Stella. "I'm sorry. Please, forgive me. I didn't mean to do that. The medicine was very expensive, and I was in a hurry..."

Stella pulled Keegan away and whispered, "Forget it. I wasn't paying attention either, and I didn't fall anyway."

With a tense face, Keegan released the man and walked Stella to the elevator.

However, he became more careful this time. He wrapped his arm around Stella's shoulders, preventing others from touching her.

Stella's heart melted, as she reached out to encircle Keegan's waist. Then, she whispered, "Keegan Kane, I'm happy. I'm so happy."

Keegan remained silent. He raised his hand and tucked her head against his chest. In the crowded elevator, Stella could clearly hear his heartbeat.

After coming out of the building and walking to the parking lot side-by-side, Keegan suddenly halted his steps.

Stella was taken aback and turned to him.

Then, she heard Keegan say in a soft voice, "Why don't we... get our marriage certificate first?"

Stella's heart skipped a beat.

'Is he finally going to stop pretending?' she wondered to herself.

Keegan explained, "Didn't you say that we have to work on our physical connection? Once we get the certificate, we can do whatever a legitimate couple can do without worrying about others gossiping."

Stella was left speechless.

'Only he could come up with such a terrible excuse!

'Is he the kind of person who'd be afraid of gossip?

'I can't believe that the proposal I've been dreaming about for so long turns out this way!' Stella thought to herself.

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 1970 [Eleven Jewell]

The doctor gave Stella a new diet plan and reminded her to control her sugar intake.

With the increased risk of carrying twins, it was important to strictly control the rate of fetal growth. Smaller and healthier fetuses would lead to a smoother delivery process, and a quicker recovery for the mother afterward.

Keegan took out his phone and diligently noted down all the doctor's instructions.

Stella was listening to the doctor carefully too. But, when she went to get some water, she saw Keegan's serious demeanor while typing on his phone and found it somewhat amusing.

His stern expression made him look exactly like a secretary jotting down meeting notes. No one would have thought that he was writing down notes of the doctor's instructions.

Keegan was still holding Stella's hand when they came out of the doctor's office.

However, Stella just let him do it without mocking him for acting as if he had regained his memories.

She could feel the mixed emotions of excitement and concern emanating from Keegan through their intertwined fingers.

In fact, she was feeling the exact same way.

Being pregnant was already a blessing to her, but having twins was beyond her wildest imagination.

Now that she thought about it, it seemed like there were some signs.

She recalled the jellyfish dream she had before, where the beautiful bubble split into two. 'Could that be one of the signs?' she wondered to herself.

And, her appetite had changed drastically. She could eat more than other pregnant women who were at the same stage, and she felt hungry very often.

'Well, I do have two babies inside of me. It's only normal that I can eat more, right?' Stella thought to herself.

'Twins... It would be great if they were a boy and a girl like the doctor claimed.

'Of course, it would be great too if they're both girls or both boys. I don't really mind,' Stella said inwardly.

While she was lost in her thoughts, Stella did not pay attention to the path ahead and accidentally bumped into a man, knocking the medicine out of his hand.

Stella was stunned. Then, she immediately bent down to pick up the medicine.

However, the man was furious and angrily shoved Stella away. "Are you blind?"

he shouted.

Stella almost fell to the ground, but fortunately, Keegan reacted quick enough and caught her.

After helping Stella regain her balance, Keegan abruptly grabbed the man by his collar and said with a cold face,"

What department are you from?"

The man was startled by Keegan's demeanor. He stuttered, as he said, "H- Hey, wh-what are you doing?"

Keegan tightened his grip and said, "I asked you a question. What department are you from!?"

"Obstetrics and Gynecology."

The man quickly realized his mistake and immediately apologized to Stella. "I'm sorry. Please, forgive me. I didn't mean to do that. The medicine was very expensive, and I was in a hurry..."

Stella pulled Keegan away and whispered, "Forget it. I wasn't paying attention either, and I didn't fall anyway."

With a tense face, Keegan released the man and walked Stella to the elevator.

However, he became more careful this time. He wrapped his arm around Stella's shoulders, preventing others from touching her.

Stella's heart melted, as she reached out to encircle Keegan's waist. Then, she whispered, "Keegan Kane, I'm happy. I'm so happy."

Keegan remained silent. He raised his hand and tucked her head against his chest. In the crowded elevator, Stella could clearly hear his heartbeat.

After coming out of the building and walking to the parking lot side-by-side, Keegan suddenly halted his steps.

Stella was taken aback and turned to him.

Then, she heard Keegan say in a soft voice, "Why don't we... get our marriage certificate first?"

Stella's heart skipped a beat.

'Is he finally going to stop pretending?' she wondered to herself.

Keegan explained, "Didn't you say that we have to work on our physical connection? Once we get the certificate, we can do whatever a legitimate couple can do without worrying about others gossiping."

Stella was left speechless.

'Only he could come up with such a terrible excuse!

'Is he the kind of person who'd be afraid of gossip?

'I can't believe that the proposal I've been dreaming about for so long turns out this way!' Stella thought to herself.