

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted by Eleven Jewell

Chapter 301-306

Chapter 301

After Marshall listened to what she said, he asked, "The first time we met at the hospital, were you visiting your mother?"

Stella nodded.

"How's she now?"

Stella shook her head, and her eyes looked gloomy. "She's still the same. She's barely living. We're not sure if she could ever wake up again."

Marshall gently comforted her. "She has pulled through all these years. There'll be a miracle." Stella bent the corners of her lower lip and said, "I think so too. She had some responses recently. The doctor said that it was a good sign."

Marshall's eyes were tender. "When I had my treatments overseas, I made friends with a few experienced, respected doctors. I can help you contact them if you want."

"Thank you. I'll contact you if I need it."

Stella paused for a moment. Then, she asked, "Mr. Moore, is there any update about the lawsuit?"

"I've drafted the lawyer's letter. Do you want to see it?"

Stella nodded.

Marshall then sent the lawyer's letter to Stella on her phone.

The content of the lawyer's letter was stylized. It was not so different from those that Stella saw online.

The main content was to warn those accounts that spread lies about Stella to delete their comments and to stop the infringement.

"Anyway." Marshall suddenly asked, "I remembered you mentioned before that psychiatrist, right?"

visited a

Stella nodded. She mentioned this to Marshall when she was providing him with the evidence back then. But, she did not tell him in detail at that time. "For some time last year, I don't know how those people got my email, but they sent me many unsightly things. My mental state was not that good at the time. But eventually, my friend noticed it in time and brought me to a psychiatrist."

The doctor said that she had a moderate depressive mood. During that period of time, she was absent-minded, and she would often wake up from nightmares. Maybe it was because she read the curses that the online users wrote too intently. At night, she would dream about those curses coming true. It repeatedly tormented her in her dream.

Sometimes when she went out during the day, she would feel paranoid when someone stared at her in the street. She thought that the person was judging her.

The psychiatrist said that if Felicity did not notice that there was something wrong with Stella in time and just allowed her to be on her own, Stella might have fallen into depression.

Marshall pursed his lips as he asked, "Doesn't Keegan know about this?"

Stella stopped moving. She wryly said, "He was too busy to care about what was going on with me."

Around that time, Albert used the Kane family's background to get a business deal. It was a huge deal, and his production could not handle it at that time. So, he found a co-packer to help him with some of the orders. The co-packer's fee was cheaper because the quality of the raw materials used was different from Albert's production line. Albert already knew that, yet he still took the chance. He thought that the appearance of the products looked similar and that the low-quality products were only one-third of the total order. So, he thought it would go unnoticed.

However, what happened was far worse than what he had imagined. Something went wrong very soon after the order was delivered.

Many users got injured when they were using the products. And, his partner company was indicted. When the other party found out that it was a product quality problem, they immediately went to Albert. They requested a chargeback and demanded compensation.

Of course, Albert was not willing to do that. He made a lot of money from that business deal, not to mention how much he had to compensate them. Such news about the users getting injured from using the low-quality products alone would damage the Jewell Group's reputation severely.

So, he refused to admit it. He even hired a lawyer at a high price to represent him in court.

Chapter 302

That company had a great relationship with the Kane family. They chose to cooperate with Albert at that time because they thought that he was an in-law of the Kane family, who always prioritized quality. It would not be that bad. However, the incident happened in the end, and they simply brought it up to the Vinci Rivera Group.

That was when Keegan was rivaling badly with his uncle in the Vinci Rivera Group. As soon as the incident happened, Chandler immediately used it as a counterattack. He charged Keegan with venality and clamped down on his momentum instantly.

Keegan was furious. So, he investigated the incident. As a result, he found out that Stella was involved too, and he had a terrible fight with her consequently.

Stella was wronged at that time, as she did not even know Albert talked about the collaboration with others on her behalf..

That day, Albert phoned Stella and said that they would have a meal together and visit Rainee at the hospital after that. At the time, Albert had not been to the hospital for a long time, and the doctor said that it would be helpful for Rainee to recover if someone she was familiar with was talking to her. So, Albert convinced her immediately by using this excuse.

Stella realized that it was not just the two of them after she reached the place. There were other people at the dinner table. Albert kept mentioning the Kane family when he introduced her to the others. Stella felt terrible about it at the time, so she left without staying for too long. She did not even know that her few minutes of appearance had promoted Albert's business.

Keegan missed a good opportunity to take over the Vinci Rivera Group from Chandler because of that incident. He was so furious that he refused to listen to her explanation at all. Whether Stella did it actively or passively, it started because of her in the end.

Keegan was very busy with the company's affairs. He had no time to care about her at all. Besides, both of them had quarreled about having a child before. So, Keegan simply moved out. of the master bedroom and slept in the study directly.

Stella was up all night when she suffered a lot from the hate comments on the internet. She took eight sleeping pills to fall asleep and slept at home for two days and one night.

When Stella woke up, she saw Keegan. But, she kept all her grievances to herself when he said, "You still have the mood to sleep?"

Stella had thought about telling Keegan about her suffering. However, his words blocked her desire to share. Maybe even if he knew it, he would only say that she was hokey. After all, she had always been a hokey person who was a coward when it came to pain, darkness, and loneliness in his view.

Marshall pursed his lips and said, "You should have told Keegan. He's careless when it comes to emotions."

Stella lifted the corners of her mouth. "Mr. Moore, have you ever been in a relationship? There's a big difference between you asking for concern and being cared for actively by others.

Marshall was silent for a moment and changed the topic. "Do you still have the record from your previous psychiatrist?"

Stella nodded. "I've kept it."

"Send it to me later. I'll be using it in the future. Besides, I'll find a suitable opportunity to publish the lawyer's letter and boost public sentiment on the internet. After I collect more evidence, I'll file a suit in court, and that's when the court summons will be issued."

Marshall probably wanted to use the matter regarding depression to boost public sentiment. Obviously, Stella had no objection. These people had to bear the consequences of what they had done now.

"Sorry to bother you." Marshall smiled and continued, "Rest early. I'll leave you to it."

Chapter 303

Stella was asleep when Keegan came back. Only a warm yellow lamp was left in the room. He took off his coat, threw it on the couch, walked to the bedside, and sat down.

Stella could feel Keegan's gaze, even though her back was facing him. She frowned and was a little irritable.

A faint smell of perfume wafted from Keegan's body. It was the same scent as Bella's. Stella recalled some unpleasant past memories because she had just chatted with Marshall just now. She was already irritable, but she became even more irritable when she smelled that scent on Keegan's body, 'Damn it. Why don't you wash up instead of just sitting on the bedside and staring at me? It's annoying! Stella cursed inwardly.

After an unknown time, Keegan threw off the quilt and held her wrist. When Stella was about to withdraw her hand, he gently applied a cool liquid on her wrist with his palm.

Stella was startled for a moment. Then, she withdrew her hand.

Keegan seemed to know that she was awake. When he saw that she withdrew her hand, he said, flatly, "Are you done pretending to be asleep?"

Stella gritted her teeth. "Why would I pretend? I can't sleep if you're roughing up here, can I?"

The corner of Keegan's mouth twitched. "I'm applying the medicine on you! You don't know chalk from cheese!"

Stella snorted. "My injury has already healed for a long time, even before your medicine is here."

Keegan was left speechless. Then, he saw an ointment on the bedside table, which was the same as the one in his hand. He frowned and asked, "Did you go to the doctor?"

"No." Stella wrapped herself in the quilt tightly. "Mr. Moore brought it here."

Keegan's eyes darkened. "Why did he give you the medicine?"

Those words made Stella laugh angrily. "Didn't you visit Ms. Young too? What's wrong? You can show your love and concern for others, but others can't show it to me?"

Keegan's face darkened even more. "Do you think you're right for pushing someone into the water?"

Stella paused and looked at him. "Bella told you that I pushed her?"

Keegan said nothing.

Bella had never said anything. However, not only Mrs. Chapman, but several people on the ship saw Stella kick Bella at that time.

Seeing that he remained silent, Stella twitched the corners of her mouth with a smirk. "Turns out, you came back to vent her anger on me. You're right. I pushed her. Oh, technically, I kicked her."

Keegan frowned. "Why did you do that?"

“No reason. I want to make her sick. I hate her. Are these reasons good enough?”

“What kind of attitude is that?” Keegan then said furiously, “Do you know you have to face a lawsuit if someone on the ship blows your cover just now!”

Stella sneered. “Are you saying you went to Bella and asked her not to sue me? Should I be thankful to you all?”

“Stella!”

“Stop preaching to me. It’s none of your business. I don’t want to accept your favor either. Let Bella sue me if she has the ability. If I chicken out, I’ll change my surname to hers!”

Keegan was furious. He gritted his teeth and said, “You! I should have left. you alone!” ‘What the hell am I doing? I asked someone to edit out the footage and thought about her injury. I purposely asked someone for the medicine for her. In the end, she didn’t even think of my good deed and kept saying things to make me angry, Keegan thought.

Stella rolled up the quilt. “No one asked you to care for me. If you want to vent her anger on me, kick me into the water. If not, stop disturbing my sleep.” She put on the blindfold while she spoke and stopped looking at him.

Keegan was filled with anger. He slammed the door and left.

Stella did not care where he went to sleep. She did not even care if he went to Bella and slept together. Stella thought she could not sleep at night as she slept a lot during the day. However, she dozed off soon after Keegan had left. ‘Keegan is really a bane in my existence. Even my sleep quality improved without him,’ Stella thought.

However, the peace lasted for only two hours. Suddenly, they encountered a storm at night. There were thunderstorms outside, and the waves made the cruise ship sway.

Stella was awake from the sway.

The things in the room moved around with the swaying of the cruise ship. The items on the table were shaken and fell to the ground. There was a reminder on the broadcast. It asked everyone to close the doors and windows, put on the life jackets, stay in the safety seats, and fasten their seat belts.

Stella was worried about her great-grandpa. So, she put on her coat and wanted to go out to have a look.

Before reaching the door, the power suddenly went off. The room was plunged into total darkness.

Stella took her phone out for light. However, the ship swayed abruptly. She staggered, and her knee hit the table. She felt a terrible pain and loosened her grip. The phone fell to the ground, turned on protection mode, and shut down immediately.

The room was plunged into total darkness again.

Stella had yet to find the safety seat. She was like duckweed. No matter where the water swayed, she followed. Finally, she caught the leg of the safety seat when she fell for the last time without knowing how many times she had bumped into things repeatedly. She knelt on the ground and held it tightly.

The rain whipped the glass and made a dense noise. There were a few sounds like the roar of some creature from time to time, which seemed terrifying in the dark room.

Stella's palms were full of cold sweat, and her face was pale.

The cabin door was pushed open at that moment, and a lightning bolt split the night sky.

Stella looked up and saw a figure appearing at the door. Her nose twitched, and she shouted hoarsely, "Keegan."

Chapter 304

Keegan held a flashlight and lit up the room. At a glance, he saw Stella kneeling on the ground in a mess and calling him with reddened eyes. With a tremor in his heart, he closed the cabin door and strode up to Stella. He held her hand and wanted to pull her into the safety seat. But, Stella sat on the ground without moving.

Keegan said furiously, "Do you know what's happening right now? Can't you stop acting out?" Stella said aggrievedly, "Who's acting out? My leg hurts, and I can't move."

With the flashlight, Keegan saw that Stella's legs were bruised. There were marks on her legs from the impact. 'No wonder she grabbed the seat but did not sit on it. She was in so much pain that she couldn't stand up,' thought Keegan.

"Hold it." Keegan handed Stella the flashlight. She lost her strength to argue at that moment and held the flashlight obediently.

Originally, Keegan wanted to be mean to Stella. However, he held back his words when he saw her pitiful appearance. He squatted on the ground, put one hand below her legs, and the other through her armpit, and picked her up.

Stella was stunned for a second as soon as she hugged his neck. 'His back is completely soaked.'

While she was in a daze, Keegan put her on the safety seat, pulled the safety belt, and fastened it on her. The ship swayed abruptly again as soon as all that was done. Keegan fell out. Stella only heard a dull noise accompanied by Keegan's restraining groan.

She felt anxious and shouted, "Keegan!"

"Stay there!" Keegan gasped for breath and whispered, "I'm fine. Stay where you are and don't cause trouble for me."

With the flashlight, Stella saw that Keegan had fallen to the foot of the bed. His posture was a little awkward, but he looked fine.

"Sit on the chair quickly," she said anxiously.

The ship swayed again when Keegan propped himself on the floor and was about to stand up. He quickly leaned over and grabbed the armrest at the foot of the bed to avoid being thrown out again.

The ship kept bumping, and they were being shaken badly. Stella felt dizzy sitting on the safety seat, let alone Keegan. With a distance of only a few meters, he could not get up and walk over. In the end, Keegan pulled off the sheet and tied himself to the armrest beside the bed. At least he would not dangle around with the bumps of the ship.

The rain outside the window was getting heavier, and the wind was strong too. The raindrops whipped the glass obliquely with the wind. The ding-dong sound was as dense as drumbeats. However, Stella was not afraid because there was another person in the room.

Thinking of the situation just now, Stella felt an indescribable softness in her heart when Keegan ran back unexpectedly. She asked in a low voice, "Why are you here at this hour?"

"This is the room I booked. Do I need to tell you whenever I come back?" Keegan glanced at her impatiently. "Don't shine the flashlight on my face."

Stella was speechless, "Bastard! None of the words from his mouth are what I like to hear."

Stella turned the flashlight angrily, shut her mouth, and stopped talking.

She was too quiet. Keegan could not help but say, "Why aren't you talking?"

Stella immediately looked for a chance to attack. "You booked the room. Do I dare to speak without your permission?"

Chapter 305

Keegan was left speechless. He felt angry but also funny at the same time. After a long time, he said, "You really hate to lose. Why do you think I came back at this hour? You would be bumping around until you turn stupid if I didn't come back. By then, I don't want to take a fool home after spending so much money."

After he finished, he thought about it and said, "Actually, you're already stupid enough, even without the bumps. Normal people would have already stayed in the safety seat obediently." Stella was speechless. She gritted her teeth and said, "I want to go out and see how my great-grandfather is doing. Who knew the ship would suddenly shake so badly?"

"He's more conscious than you. He put on the life jacket immediately and sat in the safety seat quietly."

"How did you know?"

Keegan said flatly, "That's where I came from."

Stella was surprised. "You went to great-grandpa?"

Her tone sounded like that was weird. Keegan frowned and said, "Where else can I go?"

Stella curled her lips and thought in her heart, 'Based on your personality, shouldn't you go to your unforgettable woman?'

Thinking of that, she glanced at Keegan. "It's raining so heavily. I wonder how Ms. Young is doing?"

Keegan looked at her oddly and calmly said, "I don't think she will be as stupid as you."

Stella was left speechless.

It seemed that Keegan had never gone to see Bella. More confusion was in Stella's mind. 'What exactly is Bella to Keegan? I really can't understand him. I kicked Bella into the water today. And, Bella was injured even more than last time at the charity event. Keegan hugged her and left last time. Why does he seem indifferent this time? Besides, shouldn't the lovers be wayward? Why does Bella always look in awe every time she sees Keegan? At least I dare to point at Keegan and scold him.'

At that moment, Keegan's phone rang. He freed one hand, took out his phone, and answered the call. On the other end of the line was Vermont, accompanied by the sound of the storm. Keegan, are you and Stella okay?"

"We're fine. What about you?"

"I'm fine. I'm with Marshall. He came to give me a life jacket. Do you two have enough life jackets? Marshall said he didn't notice any life jackets in your room when he got the medicine for you guys. There are extra life jackets here. If you don't have it, I'll get it for you."

Keegan frowned. "It's okay. We have it."

"Alright. Let's get in touch again."

After hanging up, Stella asked, "How are Mr. Moore and Mr. Snyder?"

Keegan paused. "Shouldn't you care about your husband first? You can't get the one billion so easily, right?"

Stella glanced at him and muttered, "Aren't you still alive and well?"

Keegan stared at her furiously, and Stella shut up. She said after a while, "Darling, can I discuss something with you?"

Keegan knew that it would not be a good thing as soon as he heard Stella calling him 'Darling.' However, he was still curious about what Stella was going to say. So, he said flatly, "What?" "Can you give me the house we currently live in after we divorce?"

Keegan's face darkened in an instant. However, the light from the flashlight was dim, and Stella did not notice it. So, she said to herself, "To be honest, I'm used to living in that house. Besides, I've planted so many flowers and plants in the yard and upstairs. It'll be difficult to move them away.

"I've thought about it for a long time. So, I think you should move out after the divorce, but not me. How much is this house worth? Can you deduct it from the one billion when the time comes? You often go on business trips and rarely come back and stay. Moreover, it's a big villa. It's boring for you to stay alone there. Didn't your grandma always ask you to go back and live with her? You can move back to your grandma's house after the divorce. You can spend more time with your grandma too. That would be so wonderful."

Chapter 306

"I checked the house purchase contract before. You spent over 40 million when you bought it. The premium of the house over the years should be worth 60 million. While the decoration and other expenses should cost about 3 million, right? In that case, you can deduct 70 million from my one billion when you transfer the ownership of the house to me. The extra payment will be the mutual affection between husband and wife over the years. I definitely won't take advantage of you," said Stella.

Keegan was angry, but he could not do anything at the same time. 'Damn! She really surprises me unexpectedly every time. She plans to drive me out of the marital house even though we haven't divorced!

'70 million? How dare she tell me that? I did spend over 40 million when I bought the house. But, that was the price eight years ago. The house price in the area that I bought these years has skyrocketed. The value of that house alone has already reached 130 million. She cut the price in half when she started talking. She acts like she didn't take advantage of me, but she was!

Stella was really planning about it. On one hand, just like she had said, she was used to living in that house. Besides, she liked the house layout a lot because she remodeled the house at second time according to her preferences after getting married.

Keegan was busy with work and disliked taking care of these things. He allowed Stella to do whatever she liked, so the current style of the house was what she liked.

Stella felt tired when she was looking for a house a while ago. They were either the layout or the lighting was bad. It was not as comfortable as the current one, no matter how she tried to find it.

The main point was that the house was close to Rotona Pinnacle Hospital. It took only 20 minutes to drive there. It was the second reason she considered it.

The house had a winter garden on the first floor and a fitness room on the second floor, which was suitable for the elderly. Stella would turn the fitness room into a rehabilitation room when Raine's health improved. So, she could do her rehabilitation training there, which was perfect.

There were a lot of properties under Keegan's name. Besides, it would be the same for him even if he got one more or lost one house. So, she had been thinking about how she should tell Keegan about it lately.

Stella saw that Keegan remained silent for a long time after she finished. She asked tentatively, "What do you think?"

"What a terrible idea!" Keegan gritted his teeth. "Stella, when did I give you the impression that I'm an idiot? 70 million? Do you think I'm a beggar?"

Stella was at a loss for words. "We can negotiate the price."

"It's not for sale!" Keegan said furiously, "I reserved this house as a marital house. If you want it, you either be Mrs. Kane for the rest of your life or inherit it after I die. There's no other way."

Stella was left speechless. She was silent for a while before she asked, "Have you made a will?"

If not, it might not be mine."

Keegan's face darkened. "Do you really want me to die?"

The ship jolted again as soon as he finished. Keegan did not hold the armrest tight and was thrown on his back. His head hit the floor, and Stella was startled by a thump.

"Are you okay?"

Keegan's expression twisted by the pain. He became even angrier when he heard her voice." I'm still alive. Sorry to disappoint you!"

Stella also felt that what she had said was a little overboard. She whispered, "I was just asking. Why are you so angry?"

"I'll pull you over. I don't know how long the shake will last. It's too dangerous for you to be there."

Keegan was still angry and coldly said, "It's none of your business!"
