

Mr. President's Sweet Wife Novel

Chapter 12 I don't want you to misunderstand

"I want to stay by her side now. Please." William Jones said.

He was so sure that Layla wouldn't say no to his request.

Layla stood there for a while after William left her there. All of the pain just started to appear again after last night.

Why would he ask her to do this?

He knew that Layla didn't like Nora.

Has he forgotten that she was his wife before?

The Chinese restaurant is where the three of them used to go every time.

Layla will always follow Nora everywhere she goes because she knows that she will be able to see William there. She liked William so much that she wouldn't let go of any chance to see him.

William will always bring Layla to the Chinese restaurant after Nora left. There are a lot of memories and it was an unforgettable place.

William never thought of her feelings.

Layla didn't go there but she ordered a delivery.

She didn't know why she always did what he told her to. Maybe she was just too used to listening to what he said.

She brought the food to Nora's ward and told herself the reason she does this was just because she didn't want other people being suspicious about William and Nora's relationship. She wanted to keep her image and not be the talk of everyone.

After taking a deep breath, Layla turned the door knob and walked in.

Nora was sitting up on the bed while William sat beside the bed cutting fruit for her.

When Nora saw Layla walking in, she tilted her head up wanting to say something but she didn't and she quickly lowered her head.

Nora acted like Layla bullied her.

"The Chinese food you want." Layla said.

William then sat on the bed and laced his arm around Nora's waist, "You said that you want to eat this, so I told Layla to buy it."

"I don't want to eat it now. I know she hates me, so how would I dare to eat the food she bought." Nora said while she laid her head on William's shoulder.

After hearing what Nora said, Layla then realised why William would thought that she was the one who caused Nora to miscarriage, "What do you mean?"

Nora then tilted her head up and she looked upset. "You said that I am the third wheeler. You said that I am the reason why William divorced you. So why did you do this? Quit acting like a kind person. We all know what kind of person you are." She said.

"Nora Alexander!" Layla was very angry because of her acting, she balled her hands into fists and said, "Tell me then! What kind of person am I? What have I done to you? Tell me!"

"I rushed to the hospital the second I knew you were in the hospital and helped you. Now, you tell me what kind of person I am? What have I done to you that made you do all of these?" Layla asked.

William looked up at Layla and said, "Put the food down and go back to work, Layla. You shouldn't be talking too loud in a ward."

"Work? Do you think I have the mood to work right now? She was talking nonsense!"

Why don't he give her the opportunity to explain herself?

William passed a slice of apple to Nora and tilted his head to look at Layla coldly, "What do you want then?"

Layla felt like her already broken heart broke into more pieces.

It seems like he still thought that Layla was the reason Nora miscarriage.

"I didn't do anything yesterday! I have nothing to do with her miscarriage." Layla couldn't stop herself from explaining herself to William.

She didn't want William to think that she is a cruel woman.

She will never hurt Nora because she knows that William will hate her if she does so. The last thing she wanted was for William to hate her.

Layla looked at William sadly and said, "We have been married three years, you know I wouldn't do this kind of thing."

What Layla just said made William skip a heartbeat.

He started to think that he had misunderstood her.

Nora examined William's facial expression secretly and quickly said, "Acting like a kind woman won't change the fact that you made me miscarriage."

William's facial expression quickly turned into a cold one after hearing what Nora said.

Just when Layla was about to say something back, William said, "Get out of here, Layla! Nora doesn't want to see you now."

He loved Nora and he will always believe everything Nora said. But Layla was his wife and he doesn't want to hurt her.

Layla stood there while looking at the man she loved. William will believe everything Layla said before Nora was back, and now he didn't believe her. It made her look like a clown.

William Jones didn't believe her.

She doesn't like it when people misunderstand her.

"I really didn't say anything hurtful to her that cause her miscarriage. Please believe me, William."

"Oh yeah, she didn't say anything. I blame her for nothing." Nora said sarcastically.

Layla looked at Nora coldly. The more Nora talked;
the more William won't believe in what Layla said.

It has always been like this.

Comments

Gift