

Chapter 23 She catch feeling for his kisses

Layla went to find George and asked him to help her call a cab.

But George rejected her request, "I can't let you leave, Doctor Layla."

"What now? Are you guys going to hold me captive here?" Layla asked coldly.

"No, Doctor Layla! But the last time you left here, Mr. Spencer was angry and frustrated for the whole day long. Maybe you can try to talk to Mr. Spencer?" George explained.

Layla looked at George and walked towards Blake Spencer.

He was sitting on the sofa humming some random song. He seemed happy.

Layla walked to his front and said, "Let me out."

Blake tilted his head up and looked at her, "I told you to kiss me and I will let you out,"

"I won't kiss you, Blake Spencer."

"Why wouldn't you just kiss me? Or you want to do something more than kiss?" Blake smirked.

Layla sighed and said, "Do you really need a woman so bad? I can find you one now."

He can have any woman he wants but not her.

"I want you and only you." Blake said stubbornly when he saw Layla turned around to walk to the front door.

Layla stopped in her tracks.

She turned around and looked at the childlike man. She walked back to him.

Blake looked up at her eyes.

Layla lowered her body and pecked his cheek after taking a deep breath. Layla looked like a teenager who was going to have her first kiss.

Blake quickly pulled her onto his lap.

She wanted to run away but his grip was very tight.

He lowered his head and kissed her deeply.

How can a woman's lips taste so sweet?

Layla froze in her spot when Blake kissed her. She wanted to push him away but his kisses were making her arms and knees weak.

This is the first time she has been kissed like this.

She caught feelings for his kisses and it was unforgettable. She couldn't even get the image out of her mind even after she arrived at Jones' mansion.

Layla doesn't even know why she would catch feelings for his kisses.

William Jones came into the living room when Layla was deep in her thoughts.

"You are late." Mrs. Jones said when she saw her son came in "The traffic was bad." William said and sat down far away from Layla.

He looked angry and he didn't greet Layla.

Layla doesn't ask for the incident in the hospital that day and William doesn't believe it at all.

After seeing William's cold face, Layla started to regret coming tonight.

Soon, the dinner was ready and Mrs. Jones went up to call Mr. Jones.

The four of them settled down after the dinner was served and Mr. Jones asked William, "I heard that you divorced Layla. What happened?"

Layla lowered her head because this question made her feel awkward. Everyone knew the news of their divorced.

William looked at Layla and said, "We are busy and we don't have much time for each other. So, we split."

The excuses he said were reasonable.

"But I heard that the reason why you divorced was because Nora....." Mrs. Jones said.

"Impossible, mom." William smiled and said. "This has nothing to do with Nora. I won't abandon my own wife for Nora."

William doesn't want his family to know that he was with Nora because he doesn't want his family to blame Nora.

Mrs. Jones looked at Layla and turned back to William, "How could you divorce so easily. Do you know that this will affect the image of Jones' family?"

"What do you want me to do then, Mom?" William asked.

"Remarry." Mrs. Jones said.
