

Spoiled by Mr. Russell by Luminous Night Chapter 320-324

Chapter 320

'Is this woman really this child's mother? How does she not know her child has allergies?!' Lily looked at Lisa with puzzlement in her eyes, and Lisa just smiled back helplessly.

Coincidentally, the ambulance arrived, and the medical staff rushed over to inspect the child before loading him into the ambulance.

Lily heaved a sigh of relief when the medical staff took over. She cleaned her hands and was about to settle the bill and leave when Helen grabbed onto her clothes.

"You can't leave! You have to go to the hospital with me!"

"Helen!"

Lisa exclaimed, "You can't do this! Lilsy's my friend!"

"I'm sorry, Lisa," Helen said as she looked toward Lisa, "I need her to go to the hospital with me even if she is your friend. It's still uncertain whether Nick will be okay. Who knows if what she did to Nick earlier harmed him instead."

"No, I'm sure it didn't. I believe in Lilsy,"

Lisa swore as she trusted her friend. Helen smiled bitterly.

"It's pointless even if you believe in her. You know very well that I'll be unable to explain it to Mike if anything happens to Nick. I snuck Nick out today. If something happens to him, I..."

"I understand your difficult position, Helen, but Lilsy..."

"I'll go with her," Lily said lightly. She had instantly understood the duo's argument. Helen was worried Lily's actions earlier would cause harm to the child.

Lily had no choice but to do that, as severe food allergies could cause anaphylaxis.

Moreover, Nick was just a child. If she had not taken first aid measures in time and the worst happened, it would most likely be fatal. She could not just sit by and watch the child suffocate to death.

"Lilsy..."

Lisa looked at Lily apologetically.

Helen and Lily were her friends, but it was insulting and disrespectful for Helen to do this.

“It’s okay. I understand Helen’s concerns as she’s Nick’s mother,” Lily expressed her understanding and smiled.

Although she could understand Helen’s concerns and worries as a mother, she could not understand Helen’s ignorance of her own child.

It was okay if it was regarding small matters, but something as serious as an allergy that concerned the child’s life? How did Helen not know about this? Under Helen’s insistence, Lily followed her to the hospital.

Lisa was worried and followed them as well.

The medical staff sent the child to the emergency ward while the trio had to wait outside.

Helen was anxious and continuously paced back and forth.

Even Lisa’s comforting words did nothing to calm her.

Lily knew Helen was overthinking, judging from her anxious expression.

‘How could a mother not care about her child? Helen might’ve had an oversight, or that was the first time her son had an allergic reaction, and she just happened to be there.

Lily’s mind was running wild.

Raising a child was no simple task, after all. She thought that having children of her own one day would be nice.

However, that thought now completely vanished.

Sounds of rapid footsteps came from the other end of the corridor.

It sounded like leather shoes slapping against the hard, tiled floor.

Before Lily could turn and look at the source of the sound, she saw Helen freeze with a horrified expression on her face.

Chapter 321

Helen’s panic now wholly differed from the one she had shown earlier.

Panic and nervousness were written all over her pretty face.

Lily curiously turned around and saw several men walking toward them.

The one in the lead was wearing rimless glasses and a tailor- made suit.

The men behind him were his assistants and bodyguards.

The man's face was calm and exuded a gentleman's demeanor.

Judging by his looks, he seemed to be of Asian descent.

"Mike, you're here! Please listen to my explanation."

Although Helen was terrified, she still rushed over to Mike Cordon and tried to hug him with tears in her eyes.

However, the bodyguard beside him stopped her.

Mike looked at her and asked coldly, "Where's Nick?"

"He's still in the emergency room. I don't know how this happened. We had a great time today, and he was happy, but I don't know why he... I don't know... I honestly don't know... sob, sob," Helen incoherently said as she sobbed.

Lily cocked her eyebrows and was speechless.

'Are they a couple? But what couple acted this way toward each other?' It was a strange sight.

She turned around and looked at Lisa questioningly.

Lisa gave no answer and acted like this was how it was supposed to be.

"Helen, I've warned you not to meet Nick in private. It seems you've turned a deaf ear to my words," Mike said coldly, "If anything happens to Nick, I will end you."

His voice was calm and unwavering, but every word he said was ruthless.

Lily felt an icy grip close on her heart upon hearing those words. She turned to Helen and realized she had fallen to her knees and was quivering non-stop.

“No. You can’t treat me this way.”

Helen burst into tears.

“I’m his mother. You can’t do this to me!” ησνελεβσοκ.ζομMike looked at Helen, who was quivering on the ground, mockingly saying, “Do you deserve to be treated otherwise?” Lily was speechless.

‘Gosh. What a ruthless and cold-blooded man’

Helen, seated on the ground, cried for a bit longer.

Suddenly, she seemed to remember something. She turned, looked at Lily, and pointed her perfectly manicured purple fingernail at Lily.

“No, it wasn’t me. It was her!”

“Huh?”

Lily was puzzled.

“She did a lot of strange things to Nick just now. If anything happens to Nick, it must’ve been her fault! It was her!”

Lily retracted the earlier sympathy she felt for Helen. This woman deserved what she got.

Sure enough, one treated so pitifully must have done something to be hated.

Lily was baffled that Helen was blaming her for this. It was still unknown whether or not the child was okay since the results had yet to come out.

Should the worst happen, the reason would only be because of severe food allergies and not her first aid, so how could Helen blame her for anything? That woman should be called “Evil” instead of Helen.

Mike cast a deep and scrutinizing look at Lily. She looked him straight in the eye and did not bat an eyelash as she had a clear conscience.

There was no reason for her to be afraid.

Chapter 322

“You can’t blame Lilsy, Mike. She saved Nick, and I can testify to that!”

Lisa seemed to know this man and spoke up for Lily because she did not expect Helen to be that way.

“Lisa.”

He nodded at her and seemed well-mannered, “Is this your friend?”

“Yes, she’s my friend! Lilsy saved Nick and didn’t hurt him.I can guarantee this!”

Helen, standing by, rebutted, “Is she a doctor, Lisa? How can you guarantee that she didn’t hurt Nick? Maybe Nick was fine initially, but her actions had made it worse.She even put her dirty hand into my son’s mouth...”

When Mike heard this, a light flashed behind his glasses.

“What have you done to him?”

“She put her hand into Nick’s mouth and unbuttoned his shirt.It’s not me...It’s not me, Mike! How could I harm my own son...”

Helen tried hard to explain.

“Why didn’t you say so if you were against it at that time?! Lilsy was obviously trying to save Nick.How could you slander her?”

Lisa, who was friends with both of them, could not contain her rage.

Lisa was infuriated because she had regarded Helen as a friend and sympathized with her.She did not expect Helen to blame others like this.

There was no doubt that Lily was saving the kid.

At that time, everyone was clueless and unsure of what to do.

Lily was the only one who stood up to help.

Regardless of the result, her intention was for good.

However, Helen insisted that she was harming the child! How could she do this? “T-I was too anxious at that time...”

s!

Helen murmured her reply in a much lower tone.

Mike ignored her and fixed his eyes on Lily, “Tell me.What did you do to my son?”

His expression conveyed neither joy nor anger. His emotions were well hidden, and he carried himself with great composure.

“The child’s condition indicated a food allergy. Since it was an emergency, I couldn’t identify the allergen. It was necessary to administer first aid to keep the child from deteriorating before the ambulance arrived. That’s why I made him throw up what he ate to reduce the allergen in his body. Then I got him some water. I unbuttoned his shirt because severe allergies can cause breathing difficulties. This would make him more comfortable.”

Lily stated her motives for doing these things upfront, “That’s all. It is up to you whether you believe it or not, Mr. Corden.”

Mike did not immediately answer after she explained. His eyes were as deep as the ocean.

Although he did not say anything, the surrounding atmosphere was becoming suffocating and depressing.

Time seemed to stop for a moment.

This man was quite similar to Alexander in some ways. He had a demeanor that made others feel intimidated without needing to say anything.

Just by silently looking at you, you would unconsciously sit upright.

Someone like him was born to be a leader. It was no wonder that Helen was so afraid.

However, there was no reason for Lily to be treated as a scapegoat, regardless of the cause.

After a while, Mike said, “Thank you.”

Lisa heaved a sigh of relief.

Lily remained calm, “You’re welcome.”

Helen, who was at the side, was stunned for a moment before shouting hysterically, “Why don’t you believe me, Mike?! You’d rather believe the words of someone you just met instead of me. I’m Nick’s mom!”

“I’ve said before, you don’t deserve to be,” he said uncaringly.

At this moment, the emergency room’s door opened, and a doctor walked out, “Who are the child’s family members?”

Chapter 323

Mike stepped forward, “I’m his father, Mike Corden.”

“Your son has a severe allergy. You should remember this and monitor his diet closely so that he does not accidentally ingest something he is allergic to. Please, try your best to pay close attention to what he eats,” The doctor repeatedly warned Nick’s father to exercise caution.

Lily was right about the child's symptoms.

Though she was not a doctor, she had experience dealing with severe allergy symptoms.

When Lily had confirmed that the boy was all right and moved to a regular ward, she turned to leave.

"Since he's fine now, I'll go."

"Wait," Mike called out and stepped in front of her, "You saved my son. Name your price."

Lily was taken aback.

"Um...that's okay. I was just trying to help. Besides, I didn't do much. You should thank the doctor instead."

She pointed in the doctor's direction, not caring to ask about the reward he offered.

"Are you sure you're not interested?"

He was surprised and asked again, "Money or something you need to be done? Tell me what you want, and I can help you with it."

"Lily, Mike Corden is well-known in Bryxton City. You could always ask him for help in the future,"

Lisa tugged Lily's sleeve gently and whispered.

Lily could already guess before Lisa told her.

Mike had a different demeanor, plus when he asked her to name her price, she knew that he was someone with both wealth and power.

However, she did not need any help from him.

Seeing his smug expression, Lily felt like making things difficult for him.

"Mr. Corden, since you're so fixed on repaying me... ιονελεβσοκ.ζομ Have you ever heard of the perfume 'Blossom'? I'm not interested in money or anything else, just this particular perfume. Do you think you could get me one?" Lily asked, smiling slyly.

"Blossom?"

Mike clarified, worried that he might have misheard her.

“Yeah,” Lily nodded.

“Since it’s getting late, I’ll be leaving. Goodbye.”

She gave him a polite nod and left.

Lisa came up behind her, “Lily, wait up! I’m coming with you too!”

It was pointless for Lisa to continue staying.

She followed Lily into the elevator, feeling slightly unhappy, “I didn’t expect Helen to be like that! I empathized with her, thinking she was acting that way out of concern for her son, and I always thought she was just a very unlucky person. It looks like that was not the case, and Mike left her for another reason.”

“They’re divorced?” Lily asked, raising an eyebrow.

She may not be interested in other people’s affairs, but she could tell when she had observed them talking.

“To be exact, they broke up. They were never married in the first place, but Helen was still hanging onto the relationship and trying to get him back. Initially, I was even planning to help her. Now, I think that Mike has made a wise choice!”

Lisa looked angry as she spoke.

Lily did not voice her opinion on this issue as she did not know them well. She had only met them once, and this was an issue only concerning the couple.

Chapter 324

“Right, the perfume you’d asked for, is it a new product? I’ve never heard of it,” Wesley Parker is a world-renowned perfumer, but his daughter knew nothing about perfumes.

In Lisa’s own words, she had no talent at it, nor was she interested.

Lily smiled, “Nope, it’s not a new product but an old one. It’s so old that it’s extinct now.”

“Huh? Then, isn’t that a task for Goliath?”

Lisa was shocked at Lily’s request.

“Hmm...it’s not that difficult if he tried hard enough, but...” Lily smiled mysteriously.

This fragrance was the first ever perfume Roseroot had invented a hundred years ago, which meant a lot to the country.

It was even placed in a very exquisite bottle.

This perfume was no longer available anywhere in the market.

The only two remaining bottles were displayed at a museum in Roseroot.

It was considered a priceless antique that was impossible to obtain even when you were insanely rich.

It was true that Lily was interested in it and did want to own it.

However, she was also well aware that Mike would never be able to obtain that specific perfume.

The reason why she did this was just to teach him a lesson that money could not solve everything.

She had never once thought that she would be able to obtain Blossom.

After listening to her explanation, Lisa exclaimed in awe, "Lily, you surprise me every day.

Do you know what Mike's existence is like in Bryxton City? No one would ever dare to make a fool out of him."

"Why would I be making a fool out of him? He was the one who offered to thank me with a reward, so I told him what I wanted. It depends on his abilities. I didn't force him to do it."

Lily shrugged nonchalantly. She was not playing him at all. $\mu\sigma\nu\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\nu\sigma\kappa.\zeta\sigma\mu$

'Fine, maybe a little, but I didn't force him to do it!' Lily thought to herself.

Lisa shook her head, "You may not have forced him to do it, but judging from Mike's character, he'll get that perfume since he'd promised you. If he cannot fulfill his promise, he'll only end up as a laughingstock."

"It's that bad?" Lily asked hesitantly.

"Of course! Men are prideful, especially people like Mike. Their pride is everything!"

Lisa emphasized.

"Gosh... It's my bad for not considering that. The next time I see him, I'll make sure to let him know that I've changed my mind,"

Lily could only do it the next time they meet. It would be awkward if she went to him now and said, "Hi, I was only joking about that perfume. Why don't you give me a few million in cash instead."

Lisa only laughed in astonishment and patted Lily's shoulder, "Why have I not known that you were this funny?"

"Maybe it's because I've hidden it well? It's such a shame that you've caught on now," Lily teased her jokingly.

When they exited the elevator, Lily felt her phone vibrate through her bag. She took it out and glanced at the caller ID. It was Giselle.

Lily immediately felt a headache forming.

The moment she answered the call, Giselle bombarded her with a series of questions, "Ms. Christian, it's getting late. Where are you? I've been waiting for you. I tried calling and texting, but there wasn't any reply. Did you know that I was worried sick? Could you please tell me when you're planning to go the next time? Where are you now?"

Lily looked at the watch, and it was pretty late already, "I'm still out, but I'll be back in a few minutes."

"All right, please make sure you return as soon as possible. It's not safe for a woman to wander around at night. I'll be waiting at the hotel,"

Giselle could finally sigh in relief as she had managed to contact Lily.

She was determined to wait for her as the competition was just around the corner, and they needed to discuss the details.
