Chapter 358

Chapter 358

When he's done with all the tests, William said lightly, "Everything is fine, after a while, I will continue to come for the tests."

April nodded, stroking her belly, her face was full of the radiance of maternal love, William looked at this scene with a complicated expression on his face.

Suddenly, William turned his head to look at Jane, and said softly, "Jane, can I take a moment to talk?"

Jane nodded, "Okay, wait a moment, I'll take April back to the room first."

In the gazebo in the back garden, Jane was fiddling with the tea cups on the table. A few minutes later, a steaming cup of hot tea was placed in front of William.

"I didn't expect you to have known the art of making tea. This method of making tea isn't bad!"

William took a sip of hot tea and agreed with Jane to taste her tea.

"It's just a trick." Jane chuckled, she learned the skill of making tea because of Drake, but it seemed that the man himself had never drunk the tea made by her.

"By the way, what do you want to tell me?" Jane asked William what he wanted to talk about.

Hearing Jane's question, William put down the teacup and looked at Jane solemnly.

"I want to tell you about Mr. Carlton..."

Hearing Charles name, Jane's expression turned solemn.

"His condition has stabilized and he is awake now. He asked me to tell you that he wants to see you."

Because accidents happened all the year round. After Charles was stabbed by Annie that day, Jane also called the emergency number of William's private hospital and sent Charles to William's private hospital.

Jane actually didn't want to see Charles in her heart. In the past few days, she just deliberately ignored Charles affairs and avoid thinking about it, which made her control her urge of visiting him.

Leaning back, Jane looked indifferent, and her thin lips opened saying, "I don't want to see him, please convey it to him, I will settle his medical expenses for him."

In any case, he was injured by blocking the knife for her, and Jane would not really disregard human life, if she had been the one that was hurt, she would gladly bear it herself.

Hearing Jane's words, William was not surprised. Instead, he continued, "No one in his family has come to see him since his accident. If possible, I still suggest you go and see him."

Hearing the man's suggestion, Jane shook her head resolutely, "I have nothing to do with him. If it wasn't because he was injured because of me, I wouldn't even pay for the medical expenses."

"That's fine, I've already relayed the words, it's up to you whether you'll go or not."

After conveying the matter about Charles, William left without staying any longer. After William was gone, Jane felt a little complicated. Her thoughts are crumbling.

And with Drake's strange behavior for not coming home, Jane was so upset for a moment that she was very irritable.

Chapter 358

At night, Jane finally couldn't restrain herself and called Drake.

After the call was connected, both of them were silent for a moment, and then Drake's voice came over

“Jane!”

“Drake, why aren't you back?”

He didn't come back during the whole day's rest today, which is too unreasonable.

“Jane, I haven't dealt with the matter here. I'm sorry that I couldn't spend the weekend with you and the children.” On the phone, Drake's apologetic reply could be heard, which made Jane's heart sink even more.

“Okay then, pay attention to your health.”

Jane originally had a thousand words to say, but when she heard Drake's reasons, she finally said nothing, told him a few words, and hung up the phone.

Because she was not in a good mood, Jane went to the wine cellar of the villa, picked out a bottle of good wine, and prepared to drink it to relieve her fatigue

April came down from upstairs, as soon as she woke up. Seeing Jane drinking, her eyes lit up, and she trotted over immediately, with her eyes sparkling.

“Honey, give me a drink too!”

As she spoke, she even smelled the wine, with an expression of enjoyment on her face.

“What a good wine, why are you leisurely drinking it?”

Jane snatched back the wine glass in her hand, and looked at her solemnly, “You are pregnant now, so you cannot drink.”

Hearing this, April’s face instantly collapsed.

“It’s so unfair, I haven’t had a drink for a long time, ah...I want to drink.”

“You can’t drink even if you want to.” Jane solemnly refused. How can a pregnant person drink alcohol.

In the end, April could only watch pitifully from the sidelines and drink her milk, while Jane was drinking her wine.

After drinking for three rounds, April looked at Jane and asked.

“What’s wrong with you today? Why do you looked so frustrated?”

April you’re so useless, she can already see that she’s not happy, but why do you have to asked her directly why she was unhappy. She chided herself in her thoughts.

Jane was already feeling a little dizzy from drinking, and when she heard April’s words, she raised her eyes and glanced at her.

“Too many things have happened recently, I’m a little upset.” Jane said, and then continued to take a sip of wine.

“What is it, can you tell me?” April asked patiently.

Jane hesitated for a moment, but then felt that she should talk to her, and besides April was her bestfriend.

Then she told April what happened during this period.

After hearing what Jane said, April nodded slightly, “So you are angry now because Drake still cares about that unrequited love?”

“It’s not really angry, it’s just that he keeps saying he loves me, but he let Annie go just because of her few words, which makes me feel a little uncomfortable.”

“What kind of character does Annie have, he should know it by now, maybe Annie is just spouting lies to protect herself!” Jane added.

Jane thought a lot throughout the day, and thought of what Annie said before, maybe they were her lies again, and the purpose was to not make him dare touch her.

“I think what she said may be true.” April expressed her opinion.

“You told me before that Annie is a scheming person. Perhaps, as she said herself, she was just pretending to be the unrequited love of Drake all these years, just so she could stay by his side.”

“Then tell me, who is Drake’s unrequited love?” Jane asked the question she cared most about

“I don’t know about this, but I think your concern doesn’t lie with Annie, but the woman who hasn’t appeared yet, but occupied an important position in Drake’s heart.” April said directly.

Hearing this, Jane was startled, but she didn’t deny April’s words.

She really cared about that unrequited love whom Drake was looking for so hard. In the past, when Annie pretended to be Drake’s unrequited love, she had been bruised all over her body.

If the real one appeared, Jane couldn’t guarantee whether the relationship between her and Drake would continue.
