

Mr. Warner Your Ex-Wife is Brilliant by Paula Chapter 364

Chapter 364

“Being influenced by someone else, I believe he is not an unruly child. Rest assured, hand her over to me, and I will make sure to educate her properly.” Marina also spoke up at the right moment, pretending to look like a pure and innocent woman.

Unable to bear such a disgusting act, Jane immediately called for the housekeeper and had the estate guards escort the two of them out.

Upon hearing Jane’s instructions, Courtney’s expression turned extremely ugly.

“Jane, how dare you? This is my son’s home. What right do you have to drive me away?”

Seeing that there was no reason left to talk to Courtney, Jane didn’t want to waste any more words. She didn’t care if the three children witnessed it and directly issued another command.

“The estate is under my name, and this is my home. Although I have been respectful to you despite my dissatisfaction, after what happened with Zane, I thought if you behave yourself, we can coexist peacefully. However, you keep doing disgusting things, so don’t blame me for not being polite to you.” Jane’s attitude was firm, but Marina was stunned when she heard Jane say that the estate was under her name.

Why was this woman able to get everything she wanted so easily, while she, who was not worse than her, couldn’t get what she wanted and had to be at the mercy of others?

“Take action!” Sensing the jealousy and resentment in Marina’s gaze, Jane didn’t waste any more time and ordered the guards to drive them away.

Courtney was a person with some dignity and naturally wouldn’t allow the guards to push her away. Instead, she glared at Jane fiercely before turning to leave.

Marina felt resentful, but she could only follow Courtney closely.

After the two left, Jane's expression didn't ease much. Zachary noticed Jane's displeasure and comforted her, "Mommy, Grandma wasn't like this before. She must have been influenced by a bad woman. Don't be angry. I'll talk to Grandma when I have the chance and ask her not to bother you anymore."

Jane didn't care about Courtney's opinion of her, but she had raised Zachary after all and treated him well. She was somewhat distressed and didn't know how to handle Courtney's situation.

Thinking of Marina's distorted expression when leaving, Jane felt that she needed to start with Marina.

This woman was a troublemaker!

"Zachary, Mommy is fine. Let's not talk about unhappy things. Today, Mommy will stay with you all day. Where do you want to go to play? Just tell Mommy." Jane rubbed Zachary's fluffy head, and her expression softened.

Seeing Jane's expression calming down, the three little ones became excited. They were looking forward to spending the whole day with Jane.

"Mommy, there's a horse ranch not far from the estate. Can we go learn horseback riding?" Zachary said eagerly.

Hearing this, Jane agreed without hesitation. She looked at Zoe and Zane, who seemed to be looking forward to it as well.

Jane let the three little ones go upstairs and change into appropriate clothes for horseback riding. She also changed her clothes and asked April if she wanted to join them.

Knowing that Jane wanted to go to the horse ranch, April hesitated for a moment but agreed. She was four months pregnant now, and her morning sickness had almost subsided. Although her face was still pale, it wasn't as bad as before.

Since Jane had time, she wanted to take a breath with her.

After they were ready, they left together.

The horse ranch was not far from the estate. Due to the large number of people going, they took the most luxurious extended version of the Warner Crest Estate's car. The comfortable carriage was spacious and equipped with various snacks and beverages. The temperature could be adjusted at any time, and it even had projection capabilities. It was a bit too eye-catching, but everyone enjoyed it.

When they arrived at the horse ranch, Thea parked the car, and the three of them followed the reception staff into the ranch for registration and horse selection.

April was pregnant and only came to watch. Jane didn't know how to ride a horse either and didn't plan to learn today. She needed to focus on taking care of the children, so she let the three little ones pick their favorite horses under the guidance of the instructors and then put on their horse riding equipment. They were each assigned an instructor to learn with.

The three little ones were very excited about their first encounter with horseback riding.

"Mommy, the big horse is so tall!" Zoe whispered to Jane.

Seeing Zoe's sweet face, Jane smiled and said, "Zoe, are you scared? If you are scared, just watch your big brothers ride for now."

"I'm not scared. I want to learn horseback riding too!" Zoe immediately puffed up her chest, showing great courage.

"Okay, you're amazing, Zoe." Jane patiently coaxed the child.

Under the guidance of the instructor, the three little ones rode into the arena on horseback. There weren't many people riding horses at the ranch, and they rode in groups of two or three, accompanied by coaches.

Since it was their first time learning to ride a horse, the three little ones just learned the basics and safety precautions under the coach's guidance. After mastering the basics, the coach held the reins and slowly led the horses around the arena.

Jane accompanied the three little ones all the way, listening carefully to the instructions on horseback riding. She thought that since she had the time, she might as well learn the skill as well. Mastering multiple skills would be beneficial.

After spending some time, the three little ones were already proficient in sitting on the horse and moving with the horse's rhythm. Jane praised them repeatedly for their sense of achievement.

As it was getting too sunny, the three little ones were guided by the coach while Jane walked to a spot on the outskirts of the horse ranch to sit with April for a while.

However, just as Jane was about to reach the edge of the horse ranch, a horse charged straight at
