Chapter 389

“How could I do that? April is pregnant and Matthew forcefully just took her a way. What if she hurts her baby?” Jane said worriedly.

Drake disagreed. “You’re overthinking. Matt would never hurt them.”

Drake knew that Matt really cares for April, so much that he escaped from his own marriage and chose to face the wrath of his family than marry another woman. He could never possibly hurt the pregnant woman.

“You’re not really sure about that. Matthew was stark raving mad. Who knows what kind of perverted things he will do?”

Drake remembers his friend’s attitude towards April, his being over-protective and paranoid when it comes to the woman. And he decides that he was not worried at all.

*Jane please, Matt is not a monster. Stop worrying and stressing over nothing” he comforted softly.

“He’s your friend. Of course, you will say that! You will always choose to side with him. By now, I can’t imagine what he’s doing with my friend!” Jane fired back.

“It’s your fault? If you hadn’t revealed our location to him then April and William were probably together now” she added said angrily.

Drake helplessly agreed just to shut his wife up.

“Okay, I’ll find a way for you!”

Jane calmly nodded and watched her husband call Matthew.

Unfortunately, Matt’s phone just kept on ringing, he never answered his call.

Jane is now mad, “See, he probably knows that you’ll be looking for April so he did not answer the phone.”

She was furious, she could never let Matthew take April away.

“Okay, just stop worrying, he would never harm April, trust me.” Drake consoled his wife again.

“You better be telling the truth, otherwise, if something happened to April, you shall be punished too.” She fiercely told her husband.

Drake, innocent as he is, just watched his wife getting all riled up.

He could not get hold of Matt, his wife couldn’t contact April either, and the company’s affairs also made them sleepy.

Today, Jane made an appointment to renew the contract and discuss cooperation, at a high-end restaurant.

To express her importance, she specially reserved a room and brought two assistants with her.

Upon arriving, Jane saw an acquaintance, Adolf Schmidt.

The moment she saw him, she quickly turned around, ready to leave, but was blocked by the two bodyguards in the room.

She looked at her business partner who was sitting with Adolf Schmidt in the room. Her words were

Jane looked at the glass of wine like it was a snake, ready to strike at any time. “Do you want to get me drunk?”

“Are you kidding me? You are a good drinker; how could I get you drunk?”

“All right, but we are going to talk about business after this?” Jane said coldly.

“Of course.” Adol Schmidt answered, raising his eyes.

After a few moments of hesitation, Jane took the glass and emptied it again.

Her

two assistants on either side of her immediately whispered worriedly, “Boss, are you all right?”

Jane nodded and his eyes fell on Adolf Schmidt’s face.

“Can we talk about business now?”

“Okay, then let’s get to work” Mr. Schmidt fulfilled his promise and really talked about business from then on.

Jane opened her folder and continued where she left off, while Mr. Schmidt just stared at her from the other side of the table.

That’s when she realized that something was wrong. A wave of nausea swept through her body, shaking her. Her visions were slowly dimming, dark spots are starting to swarm around, her leaving her in confusion. What was happening to her?

Her body swayed, she tried her best to stay alert, leaning herself against the table but she just couldn’t take the dizziness anymore.

“Boss!” Both assistants Marie and Mariz were shocked.
