Chapter 419

Sarah was indeed a classmate from high school with whom Jane used to be quite close. The two of them had a good relationship during their time in high school, but after graduation, they attended different universities, causing their relationship to drift apart. Although they occasionally kept in touch over the years, Jane was unaware of Sarah's circumstances.

"Look, someone's here!" The people in the room finally noticed that the door had opened, and they turned their gaze toward it. The staff member also understood why Jane had come to this room. It was indeed to participate in the reunion with her old classmates. Hearing the conversation inside the room, the staff member looked at Jane, then bowed their head without saying anything more.

Seeing that everyone in the room had noticed her standing at the door, Jane decided to step inside. As her figure entered the room, the people started to exclaim in admiration.

"Wow!" Regular expressions of admiration came from the guys, all due to Jane's appearance, which captivated them with her stunning looks and elegance.

People were mesmerized for a while, and then, suddenly, a voice broke the silence.

"Jane!" A surprised exclamation came from a woman. She was dressed in flashy clothes, heavy makeup, and had a slightly plump figure, giving off an impression of being less approachable.

Jane looked at her, unable to recognize who among her high school classmates she was. As she called out, the people in the room also began to wake up.

Sarah stood up, showing excitement. She took a step towards Jane, moving gently.

“Jane, it’s really you, you’ve changed so much!”

After speaking, she shook her head as if to calm her emotions.

“Changed, and even more beautiful and elegant...”

Finally, Jane paid attention to Sarah. She was wearing a pale pink vest, the color slightly faded. Her natural face lacked any makeup, with only some jewelry adorning her, and even her hair was tied back neatly, giving her a simple and unadorned appearance.

Jane remembered during high school, Sarah always had her hair tied up high, she was lively and radiant, like a sunflower facing the sun. But now, her eyes seemed to have lost that optimism.

“Sarah, it’s been so long since we met!”

Jane couldn’t exactly recall the last time they had met; it seemed it was before she got married to Drake. Much time had passed since then, enough for her to go through marriage, childbirth, and divorce.

“Jane, it’s been a while...” Sarah chuckled, especially when looking at the current Jane, a bright cherry blossom, which couldn’t help but make her feel inferior.

As the two were attempting to reconnect, a harsh voice suddenly interrupted from the dining table
