Chapter 423

Sensing the movement behind her, Jane turned sideways, and Acica fell to the ground due to the force.

“Ah!“, Acica fell to the ground and screamed in pain.

Jane didn't care at all, and just took Sarah's hand and quickly left from the side.

Acica watched Jane leave helplessly, and wanted to hold her again, but because of the fall, she hurt her foot, so there's no way she could run after them again.

After leaving the Stanford Hotel, Jane looked at Sarah, who was still a little dazed, and asked softly.

“Where do you want to go, I will take you!”

“No, I'll just take a taxi and go back.” Sarah immediately waved her hand, indicating that there's no need to do so.

“It's okay, I'll go back after sending you off, and I want to ask you how did you fare all these years!”

In the private room before, there were so many people talking, so Jane didn't get the chance to talk about her, and know what did she do all these years.

Because of their friendship, Jane still wanted to help Sarah.

Hearing Jane's words, Sarah hesitated for a bit before agreeing to Jane's request to send her back.

But when she saw Jane's driver drove over, she look at the low-key but luxurious car, and felt even more inferior.

"Sarah, get in the car!" Jane had already opened the car door and invited Sarah with a smile.

Sarah twitched a bit, and finally got into the car cautiously, but after getting into the car, she just sat stiffly, not daring to move.

"Sarah, where do you live?" Jane asked her.

"Ah, just send me to Archbishop Street." Sarah came back to her senses and replied in a low voice.

Qiao smiled and nodded, letting Thea navigate the road send Sarah there.

After the car drove out of the Stanford Hotel, Jane asked Sarah about how she was doing for the past years.

Sarah hesitated for a while, thinking about her current situation, she still talked about her experiences over the years.

"You knew that I didn't fair well in the college entrance examination, and I went to a third-rate university. After I graduated from university, I got married."

"I married a senior at the same school. After getting married, I got pregnant soon, so I didn't go out to work. I became a full-time wife at home for seven years, and I just got divorced not long ago."

Lizq lowered her eyes and said, the loneliness in her eyes could not be concealed.

Hearing Sarah's brief account of her experiences over the years, Jane felt sad for her.

Having experienced the same emotional pain, she deeply understood how painful betrayal is.

"Is your husband from this city?" Jane asked.

“Yeah.” Sarah nodded, it was also because they lived in the same place back then that she thought they were suitable for marrying each other, as she was still close to home.

But how would she know that after getting married, life wasn’t as beautiful as she imagined, and after seven years of buffering, her marriage was slowly falling apart.

“Did you moved out with your children now?” Jane felt a little strange. Although Sarah didn’t say it clearly, she heard someone at the dinner table said that after Sarah’s divorce, she almost left the house.

“Well, in fact, he and I haven’t been able to go through the divorce procedure yet. We are still arguing about divorce. Because of the uneven division of property, I didn’t sign the divorce agreement yet. But because the trouble was relatively large, a lot of people knows about it.”

“And I couldn’t stay in that house any longer, so I moved out with my children.” Sarah said.

Hearing this, Jane felt that Sarah did it right, as long as she didn’t sign the divorce agreement, she could still work on the property division.

“You did a good job on that point. As long as you don’t sign it, you can still ask them for compensation of the loss of your youth for all these years.”

“Have you and your husband bought a house together?” Jane knew very well how difficult it would be to live with a child after the divorce without money.

If possible, she hopes that Sarah can get a certain amount of compensation, so that the life of her and her children can be guaranteed in the future.

“His family was rich and they’re the one who paid for the house back then. I paid for the renovation and decoration, and we repaid the mortgage later together, but he refused to give me the house because I haven’t worked all these years.” Sarah said helplessly with her head down.

If she doesn't have any children, she wouldn't want to fight for the house, but she had them so she has to think about them.

"Let me lend you my company's lawyer team, and you can file a lawsuit with him." Jane said angrily. She very annoyed at Sarah's husband's behavior.

Hearing Jane's words, Sarah was startled, and immediately said, "How could I bother you."

"What's there to be bothered about? We were so good when we were in school. Such a small matter is just something I can do." Jane said with a smile.

Feeling Jane's kindness, Sarah was deeply touched.

She was very grateful for Jane's help and thoughtfulness, but because of the envy and inferiority complex in her heart, she didn't want to accept her kindness.

But she didn't have the means to refuse

In the end, Sarah agreed to Jane's help.

When they arrived in Archbishop Street. The place was relatively remote and the roads weren't easy to walk. Jane's car couldn't get inside so they can only park outside.

"You don't need to send me in, the road inside is more crowded, I'll just go in by myself."

"Well, be careful then." Jane glanced at the living environment of Sarah, it can be said that it is the most barren place.

But as a full-time wife who has no job and has been supported by her husband, she must have no money. After moving out, she probably has no money to live in a good place.

Thinking of this, Jane transferred 20,000 dollars to Sarah's account.

Hearing the notification tone of her mobile phone, Sarah picked it up and looked at it, and saw the transfer from Jane. Her face turned even more flustered.

Before Sarah could speak, Jane had spoken first," Take the money and use it first, and return it to me when you'll have it later."

Sarah opened her mouth, wanting to say something, but in the end, her tears just fell.

Jane felt distressed, and gently hugged her, comforting her softly.

"Don't be sad, everything will be fine."

Sarah nodded gratefully, and Jane calmed her down before leaving.

Watching Jane's car disappear from the distance, Sarah finally came to her senses, and looked at the transferred money Jane gave her on the phone. She felt indescribably complicated.

After sending Sarah off, Jane didn't go home yet because it was still early, but she went to a flower shop to buy some flowers for her vases.

After choosing the flowers, just as she was about to pay and leave, a nice male voice spoke first.

"How much was hers? I will pay it together..."

Jane turned around and saw Max Crawford, whom she had just met not long ago, holding a bouquet of roses in his hand.

Seeing Jane's gaze, Max smiled gently.

"Today is my mother's birthday. I bought it for my father to give it to her." Hearing what the other party wanted to explain, Jane looked calmly, and just nodded slightly to show some politeness.

Afterwards, she looked back at the flower shop clerk and said, "No need, we each pay our own."
