

Mr. Warner Your Ex-Wife is Brilliant by Paula Chapter 428

Chapter 428

Chapter 428

Jane handed the delicious food shared by Zoe to Sarah's daughter's waiting hand. She took it and gobbled it without saying her thanks.

Sarah was a little embarrassed by her daughter's behavior. She ate it like she hadn't eaten for days.

Jane did not mind it, though. "There's a KFC over there, let's sit down for a while."

Sarah was supposed to refuse Jane's offer, she did not want to trouble Jane anymore. However, her daughter spoke up.

"Mom, I want to eat KFC, I want to eat KFC..."

Sarah was helpless and could only softly coax, "Okay, Mommy will take you there."

"I'm sorry, Jane, my daughter was really spoiled by her grandma. Although I teach her manners, she always listened to her grandma." Sarah apologized and explained to Jane.

Jane could see Sarah's helpless face, she was also a mother, so she understands what Sarah was going through.

"It's all right, Charl. It's all right for a kid to be self-willed once in a while. You can teach her well in the future." Jane shook her head, indicating that she didn't mind.

Afterward, she brought them to KFC not far away. Because they had eaten all the way, the three kids did not order much.

On the contrary, Sarah's daughter ordered a lot of food, too much for a little girl like her, but Jane did not mind.

After the waiter brought the order, Sarah's daughter unceremoniously started eating it.

Jane and Sarah chatted about the past.

"I promised you that the company's legal team would help you with the divorce lawsuit. Because I've been busy recently, I forgot. Why didn't you take the initiative to contact me?"

Hearing this, Sarah was stunned for a while, then she finally sighed helplessly and said, "My kid's father has come to look for me. He told me to stay."

Hearing this, Jane was shocked and immediately asked, "What do you mean? Do you still want to continue living with him?"

Sarah was hesitant, she couldn't give Jean the right answer.

Sarah's silence gave Jean the answer she was looking for. When a woman was completely disappointed in a marriage, she would choose to leave without hesitation.

But due to Sarah's hesitation, Jane knew that she still wanted to give her marriage another chance.

"I'm just afraid that if I get divorced, my daughter will go with me and live a hard life," Sarah said helplessly.

Sarah knew how hard life could be without money, she realized it when she left home. She could not subject her child to such hardship.

If it wasn't for the fact that Jane had transferred money to her the last time they met, she would probably have gone hungry with the child.

09 30

Chapter 428

But even if Jane's money could've helped her get through that crisis temporarily, she wouldn't have accepted it for long, she would've stopped bothering her again.

Fortunately, at the right moment, Alice's father came over and said that he would not divorce. Sarah was relieved and worried.

She was afraid that she would not be able to get divorced, and that she would not be able to live a good life with her children.

Jane asked her the question that's been bugging her.

"I didn't ask you before, but why did you want to divorce?"

"Well.." Sarah hesitated again, a look of embarrassment on her face.

In the next second, her explanation was just as Jane had expected.

"Because he did something wrong to me."

The urge to comfort Sarah instantly disappeared.

What's the point of keeping a cheating man?

"Sarah, I hope you will seriously consider divorcing this marriage. Remember, once a cheater, always a cheater. He will betray you again and again if you keep on forgiving him. If you're worried about your child. I will do my best to help you through this."

Jane

knew how hard it is to live with a child without any means of income, she understands Sarah's hesitation and she was not lying when she said that she would help.

She was very grateful to the people who helped her when she was in trouble. And now that she's capable of helping, she would do her best to help the people around her who need it.

Hearing

Jane's words, Sarah's tears fell. A girl who was once so lively and cheerful was forced to look like she was in a miserable state.

"Jane, I'm like not you. I have nothing. If I get divorced, I will be left with nothing."

"You know, my father doesn't care about me at all, and my mother is gone. I have no one to rely on and I have a child, I'm afraid I won't be able to find a suitable job if I get divorced. I'm afraid I couldn't take care of her."

In the end, it was all because of the child, Jane's suspicion was confirmed.

“Your daughter should be going to elementary school soon and you can send her to school and find a 9–to–5 job. You can have a job without her sacrificing her education.” Jane advised.

“Jane, for you it would be easy. I got married right after I graduated. I have never worked, and I don’t have any work experience. Where can I find a kind of job with a salary that can support me and Alice’s education?” She shook her head helplessly.

What Jane said, she had naturally thought about it, but the more she thought about it, the more difficult it became to live.

“I can arrange a job for you. As long as you work hard, I believe you can live well.” Jane immediately said.

It’s not like she was happy with the divorce, she just doesn’t want her friend to continue living with the man who already cheated.

09 30

Wamer

Chapter 428

The reason why she and Drake were able to get back together, and she was able to give him a chance, was entirely because Drake told her later that apart from her, he had never touched any other woman.

Not even Annie Carlton, whom he had spent a few years with. Only then did Jane completely forgive Drake and reconcile with him.

Sarah’s eyes widened with shock when she heard what Jane said.

Then she remembered Jean’s current status. She was married to one of the most sought–after bachelors in the country, the wealthiest too. Yes, she could easily give her a job.

Realizing the difference between them made Sarah uncomfortable.

She has no right to refuse the offer, but she did not want to be a charity case. For a moment, she kept quiet.

She was not in a hurry so she patiently waited for Sarah to figure it out.

“Jane, thank you for offering your help but please, don’t bother. Alice can’t live without her father, anyway.”

In the end, Sarah totally rejected Jane’s good intentions, which made Jane feel somewhat disappointed, but she did not say anything.

Everyone has the right to choose. No matter what choice they make, others should not point fingers at them. Instead, they should respect each other’s choices.

“Okay, then if you need anything in the future, you can contact me at any time. I’ll do my best to help you.” Jane patted Sarah’s hand.

Seeing that it was getting late, they said their goodbyes, and Jane brought the kids home.

♡ (1)