Chapter 431

Hearing Michael's explanation, the woman sighed helplessly and then said, "Find her as soon as.. possible. Don't come to me during this time, lest someone tell her of the matter between us."

Hearing the woman's words, Michael was a little unhappy, but then he thought that if Sarah could not be found and there was no way to settle the divorce, he might have to go to court.

Indeed, it was better to keep some distance from this woman.

"Okay, then I'll go back first. You have to think of a way for me. Once you think of a way, call me." After the two of them discussed it, they left the cafe one after another. Little did they know that their every move had been photographed long ago. Soon, these photos were placed in front of Jane.

Jane's face was gloomy looking at the two people in the photo. Immediately, Daniel reported the woman's situation to her.

"We also sent someone to check the woman's information. She is an employee of a branch of the Warner Group, and her reputation in the company is not very good. I heard that she had hooked up with her manager the last time."

Hearing this, Jane's face became even gloomier. Then, she tapped the table lightly.

"Since her reputation is like this, then there is no need for her to continue to stay in the company." "Although it's only a branch of the Warner Group, we still need to pay attention to our company's image. You can go and arrange this matter."

Hearing Jane's order, the corner of Daniel's mouth pursed.

In the beginning, when Drake handed over the company to Jane and asked Daniel to assist her, he was still a little skeptical.

But over time, seeing that Jane's decisions and judgments were similar to those of Drake, Daniel became more and more convinced of her.

"Understood, Miss Bentley!"

Daniel nodded without hesitation. It was not an easy matter to fire an employee.

After Daniel went out, Jane took out her phone. On the screen of her phone, there was a happy family photo of five.

It had been almost a month since Drake left, but there was still no news from him. Jane really wanted to call him, but when she thought of where he was going, even if she called, she probably could not get through.

Immediately, she could only send a lot of messages in the chat box between the two of them, hoping that when Drake opened his phone, he could see them at once.

In her messages, she was narrating what happened during this period of time, as well as the situation of the three children.

She did not say a word about how she missed him, but between the lines, it was all about her longing for him.

After sending the messages, Jane put down her phone. She thought that this time, she would also get no reply, but just as she was about to put down her phone completely, she heard the phone ring.

For some reason, Jane subconsciously thought that it must be a message from Drake, so she took out her phone at random.

Sure enough, in the chat box, Drake sent her a message.

“My wife is getting better and better!”

Looking at Drake’s ridicule, Jane could not help but cover her mouth and laugh out loud, but her eyes flashed with tears.

“It’s the 30th day that I missed my wife. Does my wife miss me too?”

Before Jane could reply to him, in the chat box, he sent another message.

Knowing Drake’s thoughts, Jane replied in her heart that she also missed him too.

“I miss you too...”

After editing this message, when Jane was about to send it out, she felt that it was too clingy and desperate.

The message was then deleted and another message was created.

“The children miss you very much. How long until you come back?”

After the message was sent, she did not receive a reply from Drake again. Jane could not help but feel lost.

If she knew it earlier, she would have sent him those words just now.

Just when Jane was sad, her phone rang again. She immediately looked at it, but it was not a message from Drake, but a friend request.

Jane opened it and realized that it was not someone she knew, so she ignored it.

She had never added strangers, not to mention, the other party’s identity was not clearly stated, so there was no need to add them.

Just as she was about to put down her phone, the friend request came again. This time, the other party introduced his name, Max Crawford.

Jane did not expect that it was Max’s own addition. She almost did not hesitate and chose to ignore it again.

Ignoring Max, Jane sent Sarah a message and asked her about her situation today. The two of them chatted for a while and then said goodbye, and she resumed her work

At the moment, there was a lot of discussion in the branch company under the Warner Group. When Alison received the news of her dismissal, she was stunned. She rushed into the manager's office and asked why she was dismissed.

The manager had already had an affair with her. Naturally, he would not fire her for no reason. When he saw Alison come in, he could only helplessly say,

“This is a message from the head office. Have you offended someone from above? I can’t protect you from their request.”

When she heard the manager say that it was a request from above, Alison’s heart skipped a beat.

Could it be that Jane knew about her affair with Michael and took revenge on Sarah’s behalf, so she had been expelled?

One had to say that Alison had hit the jackpot straight-on. This was exactly what happened.

“I don’t care, Sir.. You have to find a way for me. I’ve been with you for so many years, I can’t just be fired for no reason.”

Originally, Michael was supposed to coax Sarah, so she could meet Jane through her and could cozy up to Jane so that she could get a promotion and a raise.

Now that the promotion and salary increase was gone, and she was still facing dismissal, Alison was obviously unwilling.

The manager also did not want such a beautiful woman to leave, but he was just a small manager, and the message was sent by his superior directly. If he dared to beg them, his job would also be affected.

“It’s not that I don’t want to help you, but I really can’t help. If you offend someone in the company, I can think of a way for you, but this is a request from the head office, so is there anything I can do about it?” The manager looked helpless.

“I don’t care. I’ve been with you for so long anyway. You have to find a way for me. Otherwise, I’ll expose you for misappropriating company funds.”

Since the two of them were having an affair, Alison naturally knew that the manager had a lot of shameful secrets. In order to continue to stay in the company, she immediately threatened him with those.

Hearing Alison’s threat, the manager’s expression immediately changed. However, this was the company, so he could not do anything to her.

“Don’t be impulsive, baby. It won’t do you any good if you expose this.”

“I’ll try to figure out a way for you. So, can you not tell anyone about those?”
