

Chapter 1271 Found The Culprits

At a cafe on the terrace across from the cinema, Aldwin watched the commotion at the exit with wide eyes. Cold sweats trickled down his back, almost wetting his clothes.

It was warm with the sun shining brightly in the sky, but Aldwin felt chilly all over his body.

The commotion he was seeing was too much.

Aldwin looked at Richard, who was sipping his coffee calmly across from him, and he looked away out of fear.

The extent of his cousin's ruthlessness was something Aldwin had never expected.

To sabotage Trevor's movie, Richard caused a disturbance that could cost human lives.

Once a riot erupted in such a narrow space as a cinema, it could lead to a very dangerous stampede.

Even to someone like him, this was hostile and unimaginable!

"Do you see that? That's how you crush your enemy down," Richard said, putting down his coffee.

His tone was relaxed and calm, but his words were dripping with hostility.

Aldwin almost thought he saw blood in Richard's cup instead of coffee when the latter shook it.

"I... Yes! I get it now," Aldwin answered stiffly.

If he hadn't put his hand on the railing, he would have stepped back, trying to avoid Richard's chilly gaze.

Across the street, the cinema's exit was already crowded.

The people wanting to get out were screaming and crying for help.

Jaime fell to the ground with Dervon on top of him.

He was almost out of breath, shouting loudly at Dervon.

"You idiot! Stand up! Get off me!"

The people were still pushing each other in panic. Dervon was stepped on so many times that he couldn't answer or stand up because of the pain.

From where he was pinned down, Jaime saw the group that caused the riot.

They were the suspicious-looking group he saw near the toilet.

Jaime gritted his teeth. If he had reported them earlier, this commotion wouldn't have happened.

Just when Jaime was almost losing his breath, Trevor appeared.

Trevor climbed onto the base of the statue near the exit and reached down to grab Dervon and Jaime, who were almost unconscious.

With all his strength, Trevor dragged the two to the base with him.

After that, he also pulled several others around him to safety.

"Thank... Thank you," Jaime said in between coughs, with his lips almost turning purple.

He held the edge of the statue tightly out of fear of falling to the ground again.

Trevor didn't answer. He stood there to observe the whole scene.

Fortunately, he had left Bess inside the cinema, so she should be safe now.

He knew something was off, but he just didn't know who was behind it.

Suddenly, Jaime pointed at something beside him and shouted, "Over there! Those are the culprits! I saw them with my own eyes! You should not let them go!"

Trevor was stunned.

As he expected, someone caused this trouble to sabotage his movie premier.

Trevor followed the direction Jaime was pointing and he did find several furtive men hiding in the crowd.

Wasting no time, Trevor climbed to the top of the statue. From there, he could see more clearly what was going on.

It was these sneaky people who shouted in the crowd like mad people.

Some of them wore scary masks and brandished knives while shouting, which caused great panic in the crowd.

Not only was the exit quite crowded, but these men still forced people back inside the theater, which caused chaos at the passageway.

Trevor was furious. It was clear that these men who were trying to cause a riot here didn't care about human life at all.

A deep frown appeared on Trevor's face.

The situation was rather tricky.

The only way for him to stop the chaos was to catch those troublemakers.

But...

Trevor looked down.

The crowd below was in a panic, jostling and swearing. It was total chaos. Even Trevor couldn't push his way through the crowd to catch these men.

"Damn it!"

Trevor felt the anger in him grow again. He quickly held a man who was going to be trampled by the crowd and pulled him to safety at the bottom of the statue.

Standing on the terrace of the cafe opposite the theater, Richard was watching the whole scene.

A wicked grin appeared on his face.

Seeing Trevor's desperate efforts to save people, Richard sneered and said disdainfully, "Aldwin, do you see that? No matter how hard that idiot tries, he can't save everyone. After all, he is just a man and his strength is limited. He can't do much. He would be powerless even if someone were to die in front of him."

Richard paused and looked at the scene in the theatre closely again. With a smug smile, he added, "Such a tragedy occurred on the first day of the film's release. Tut, tut, that movie must be banned. Ha-ha."

Aldwin was so nervous that he could only nod repeatedly like a stooge.

He, too, didn't think that Trevor could stop the chaos.

The crowd had gone absolutely mad. Aldwin couldn't help but think that if he was in the middle of that crowd, he would be trampled.

Trevor could most likely pull through, but there was no way they would save everyone or even prevent the looming tragedy.

"You're right. The movie must be banned!" Aldwin said at last.

Meanwhile, standing on the statue, Trevor was thinking hard about how to resolve this situation.

He looked up at the celebratory banner hanging above the statue and suddenly had an idea.

The banner was held in the air by a steel wire.

The steel wire passed over the statue, and the other end was just connected to the open space near where the troublemakers were.

Gritting his teeth, Trevor made up his mind. "It's worth a try!" he murmured.

However, there was a problem. The steel wire was very strong but also very thin. If he grabbed it with his bare hands, he would most likely cut his hands.

"Hey, take off your coat and give it to me. I need it to save the people," Trevor shouted to Jaime.

Jaime didn't know what Trevor had in mind, but he obediently took off his coat and handed it to Trevor.

Trevor quickly wrapped his hands in Jaime's coat, then jumped up and grabbed the steel wire above the statue.

Trevor seemed to reenact the scene from the movie where he played a soldier who saved hostages using a ropeway.

He grabbed the wire and slid down.

Seeing what Trevor was doing, the noisy crowd suddenly stopped and watched in amazement.

This moment of respite allowed many to breathe a sigh of relief.

As he slid down the steel wire, Trevor could clearly see where those troublemakers were. When the time was right, he suddenly let go of the wire.

"Stop!" Trevor shouted as he landed right in front of the group of hooligans.

Chapter 1273 Warning From Richard

The troublemakers were stunned to see Trevor land in front of them.

Some even dropped their knives before hastily picking them up.

"Damn it! Who the hell are you? Do you have a death wish or something?" one of the men shouted madly at Trevor while taking off his mask.

This man was obviously disturbed. His eyeballs were shaking from left to right, and his limbs twitched from time to time, which looked very strange.

Squinting at the men, Trevor quickly guessed that they must be drug addicts and had probably just taken drugs.

They were far too dumb to have been able to plan this by themselves. There must be someone lurking in the shadows who planned it all and those idiots were just his puppets.

"How dare you stop us? Go to hell!"

These men were drugged out so they attacked Trevor without hesitation.

Glaring coldly at the men, Trevor muttered gloomily, "You are the ones courting death!"

How could a gang of drug addicts with no combat skills be any match against Trevor?

The first man who rushed in front of Trevor got the tattered yellow coat in the face. Before he could figure out what was going on, Trevor snatched the knife from his hand.

Trevor wasn't going to show any mercy to these hooligans.

With a fierce gaze, Trevor thrust the knife into the hand of the hooligan from whom he had just snatched it.

"Ah!"

The extreme pain snapped the hooligan out of his drugged state. Holding his injured hand, he staggered backwards and fell, screaming miserably. His whole body was shaking with pain and fear.

Blood flowed profusely from his wound.

Trevor easily caught the other hooligans one after another and he beat them up. He then piled them up as if they were garbage.

In no time, Trevor subdued all the troublemakers and they all lay piled up like a stack of clothes.

Trevor wanted them to taste the pain of being squeezed until they suffocated.

"Security! Security! Come and help evacuate everyone," Trevor shouted at the top of his lungs after dealing with the hooligans.

At this moment, both Coen and Lloyd rushed over. They tried as best they could to maintain order to prevent the chaos from earlier from setting in again, as it could have tragic consequences.

Seeing that, Trevor grabbed Lloyd and said with a smile,

"Don't go there. You are a big star. Your mere presence there could cause another chaos. By the way, where are Bess and Nyomi?"

Lloyd stopped in his tracks. He felt Trevor was right and he was too impulsive.

"They are fine. They are still in the cinema."

Hearing that, Trevor was relieved. He nodded and muttered, "It's good that they are fine."

Lloyd scratched his hair irritably, trying to understand what just happened. He thought of something and said seriously, "I think there must be someone who doesn't want our movie to be released in theaters. Maybe it is someone in showbiz who tried to sabotage our movie. Whoever it is, they've gone too far! That person has total disregard for human life!"

Trevor just patted on Lloyd's shoulder and said nothing.

When he turned around, he happened to see the cafe across the cinema.

Two familiar people were standing there!

Trevor's gaze turned cold and fierce when he saw those two people.

They were Richard and Aldwin!

Trevor couldn't see the hateful look Richard was giving him, but he could feel it.

These two bastards were probably the ones behind the chaos today.

Trevor felt he had guessed right. He stood still for a while, glaring at Richard.

The two men looked at each other for a few seconds.

Suddenly, Richard raised his neck and made a cruel gesture of cutting his throat, indicating that this matter was not over. Then he turned and left with a cold face.

Afraid of infuriating Richard, Aldwin dared not say anything and followed his cousin obediently.
