

Chapter 1308 Delgado's Threat

---

The martial arts left behind by the Murray family's ancestors were incomparably mysterious.

Trevor and Pearce studied the book in the room. They were impressed with the depth of martial arts.

They were so absorbed in it they forgot the time.

Delgado, who waited outside the door, grew extremely anxious. He impatiently stubbed the cigarette he was smoking.

"Damn it! It's been so long since they're in the room. Did he kidnap Gladys and escape from the window?"

Gladys' aunt asked, "No way! Didn't Dr. Scott guarantee that his medical skills were astounding?"

Delgado sneered. "Dr. Scott only guaranteed his medical skills, not his morality. Gladys is so beautiful that any man can fall in love with her! Don't forget! We know nothing about him. He's a complete stranger to us. When a man and a woman stay in one room, no one can say what could happen!"

After some discussion, they decided to break into the room.

The house was weak and shabbily made. Delgado could easily break down the flimsy door.

However, they were stunned by the scene that greeted them.

Trevor and Pearce sat together and read a book with great interest.

Gladys sat next to them and made tea.

The atmosphere in the room looked congenial and harmonious.

As soon as the door broke open, they all looked up at the same time.

"Delgado? What do you want?" There was disgust in her eyes as Gladys scolded Delgado. "You broke the door!"

Delgado was shocked. He ignored her outburst and pointed at the energetic Pearce, who sat on the bed.

"Impossible! How can he recover so soon?"

Pearce sneered, "What do you mean? Are you unhappy that I recovered? You seem to be."

Panicked, Delgado shook his head and denied, "No, no. I didn't mean that. Of course, I'm happy that you recovered. I... I'm just surprised. That's all."

Delgado had planned to use Pearce's illness as a bargaining chip to force Gladys into marrying him. He had not expected Pearce to recover so soon.

His plan failed.

Gladys' uncle smiled awkwardly. "Dad, how do you feel? It's great to see you looking well. My brother is still trying to raise funds. He'll be happy to know that you're awake."

Pearce looked at him. Gladys' uncle was his youngest son.

However, Pearce didn't like this son. He just nodded, put down the book, and said calmly, "Phillip, thank you for taking care of me when I was in a coma."

Trevor looked at Delgado and smiled faintly.

"You were so reckless to break in. What if the treatment was not over? You would have interrupted it. Did someone say something that you felt the need to break in?"

When Delgado saw Trevor's faint smile, he was annoyed.

He gritted his teeth and said, "The situation of the Martinez family has not been that great. Pearce, you're not aware that when you were in a coma, Gladys not only spent all the savings but also racked up huge debts. What will you do now?"

Delgado showed as if he was thinking. Then he put on a sincere expression and looked straight into Gladys' eyes.

"Gladys, I love you. I hope to marry you. I'll make you the happiest woman in the entire world. Also, don't worry about your debts. As long as you marry me, I'll be willing to help you pay off the debts!"

Pearce's eyebrows knitted.

Huge debts?

"How much?" Pearce asked in a gloomy tone.

Phillip answered in a low voice, "The doctor said your illness had something to do with your cerebral vessels, which was a very complicated case. The fees for your treatment back then were costly. The debts went up to a total of seven hundred thousand dollars."

Phillip glanced at Delgado before continuing, "Dad, I think Delgado is a good man. He has done a lot of things for you recently. In my opinion, it's a good thing to marry Gladys off to him."

The truth, however, was Phillip secretly received money from Delgado.

Delgado only had one request in exchange for the money, which was to help him marry Gladys.

Pearce grimaced and remained silent. He turned to look at Gladys.

Gladys' eyes were full of disgust and anger as she eyed Delgado.

But no matter how enraged she was, she could only keep her mouth shut because they had nothing else to pay off the debts.

With his old and wrinkly hand, Pearce squeezed his granddaughter's hand to tell her not to worry.

He could tell Delgado was only taking advantage of his illness to drive Gladys into a corner. Why would he entrust his granddaughter to someone like Delgado?

Trevor smirked as he stood up and fixed his wrinkled sleeves.

Caught off guard, Delgado backed away half a step.

He felt bitter in his mouth and eyed Trevor in disbelief as a thought suddenly came to him.

Was Trevor going to pay off the debts? No, it couldn't be. Trevor was only a poor man who used to do chores in the martial arts school. He couldn't possibly have the money. Martial arts, medical skills, and wealth. How could one person possess all three? Impossible!

Delgado's expression changed dramatically.

On the other hand, Trevor looked relaxed as he shattered Delgado's daydream with just a few words.

Trevor bowed to Pearce.

"Master, I was lucky enough to be taken under your wing and become your disciple when I thought it was already the end of me. Thank you for taking me in and teaching me the skills I now possess. I feel ashamed at not having anything worthy to repay you until now. Master, I could pay the debts for you if you would allow it."

For Trevor, seven hundred thousand dollars was just a small sum of money.

Apart from being a Sanderson, Trevor was also the owner of Sky Film and Television Company. The success of the first movie kept bringing money into the company. Handing over seven hundred thousand dollars was nothing.

Without saying anything more, Trevor transferred the money to Gladys' account with his phone.

Looking at the amount in her account, Gladys widened her eyes in shock and thought it was a dream.

Trevor didn't even have a salary at the martial arts school. How could he give her seven thousand dollars like it wasn't a big deal?

Pearce smiled and nodded at Trevor.

Trevor didn't fail to impress him.

Since he knew Trevor's identity, he wasn't surprised by what he did.

Trevor looked at Delgado with a sneer.

He walked toward Delgado, patted him on the shoulder, and said coldly, "Kicking a person when he's already down or forcing a girl into marrying you are dirty tricks. Stop doing them from now on. Do you understand?"

Delgado shuddered under Trevor's cold gaze, and his face turned ashen.

His lips moved as he tried to retort, but words evaded him.

He clenched his fists in rage but couldn't dare to fight because he knew Trevor's fighting abilities.

At this point, Delgado was too ashamed to stay here.

With gritted teeth, he slammed the door open and stormed out.
