

Chapter 1338 Jonah's New Plan

Revenge was a must, but it wasn't the right time yet.

Trevor calmed down after leaving the Sanderson family's castle. He simply continued to learn business skills from Tucker.

He wasn't particularly unfamiliar with running a company, so he dealt with everything in an orderly manner.

After some time, the employees got to know him more and more.

The orders that Trevor gave were smoothly executed in the company. Eventually, the situation became better.

Although Trevor was happy with the result, some of the employees were unhappy about it.

"Damn it. If it goes on like this, I won't be able to snag his position!" Jonah exclaimed in anger as he threw the cup on the floor.

The better Trevor performed, the less chance for Jonah to get promoted to the general manager.

Because of that, Jonah couldn't help but call Ronan again.

"Ronan, can you help me investigate Dragon? I want to know what kind of relationship he has with Terrance."

On the other end of the call, Ronan frowned and complained, "Fuck! That brat just saved Terrance once. Damn it! I can't believe it!"

Jonah instantly became jealous when he heard that, causing him to clench his jaw in anger. "He saved Terrance? What the hell is up with him? Why does he have so many connections?"

When Ronan recalled what happened in the club, his frown deepened. He was in a bad mood now. "Don't fucking bother me! Just thinking of that brat pisses me off!"

After Ronan hung up the call, Jonah felt even more annoyed.

He lost an ally now.

Ronan's hatred for Trevor was mostly because he felt insulted by Trevor.

But Jonah's situation was different. Only one person could take the general manager position.

Jonah couldn't give up the position.

He had to do something to ruin Trevor's reputation.

Suddenly, an idea flashed through his mind. Jonah remembered that Rolf mentioned raw chemical materials leaking in his report.

Although it was a false alarm, Jonah decided to make a fuss out of it.

After thinking for a while, Jonah took out his phone and called Rolf, asking him to come to his office.

Rolf cautiously glanced at the shattered fragments of the cup on the floor. He couldn't help but feel a little nervous.

"I have something for you to do," Jonah ordered. "I want you to do an anonymous report to the environment protection department and tell them that there's an environment problem with our new factory."

Rolf's eyes widened in shock. "What? Will it work?"

Rolf was terrified at the thought of the pressure brought by the new general manager's strategy.

Jonah snorted. "Why do you have to ask so many questions? Who's the leader here? You or me? I'm not going to frame Dragon this time. I'm going to show people how capable I can be when dealing with an emergency."

With that thought in mind, Jonah went silent for a while before he let out a sinister smile. "I have an old friend who just works in the environment protection department."

Rolf's eyes lit up. "That's awesome! You're indeed a man with a wide range of connections, Mr. Cruz! I'm sure the general manager position belongs to you."

"As long as you work for me, you'll get a promotion and a pay rise. When I become the general manager, the vice general manager position will be empty. That's where you come in, Rolf." Jonah laughed.

Rolf's eyes sparkled in admiration as he expressed his thanks. Hearing that made him overjoyed.

Now that he and Jonah had a common interest, he had no other choice but to fight against Trevor.

"The environment protection department? I'm going to report Dragon!" Rolf took out his phone.

Chapter 1339 Out Of Control

Two days later, sitting in his office, Trevor was busy studying company documents as usual.

Suddenly, his assistant came into the office. This morning, she wore black silk stockings that highlighted her slender legs. She walked over to Trevor's desk and said hastily, "Sir, the environment protection department sent us a notice to check the environment of our new cosmetics factory!"

A frown appeared on Trevor's face and he put down the document in his hand.

At that moment, the first thought that came to mind was if Jonah did something stupid again.

"Why does the environment protection department suddenly want to check our cosmetics factory? Our company always respects the rules and standards of environmental safety!"

Trevor was confused and decided to go talk with the members of the environment protection department.

At this moment, the vice general manager, Jonah, walked into the office with a serious look.

"Sir, did you hear about the matter with the environment protection department? If they find any problem, it will have a very bad impact on the company. Moreover, it will even lead to a huge loss for the company as the launch of new products will be delayed. Please let me handle this matter on behalf of the company.

I can't let that company's reputation be affected. That would be terrible."

Trevor looked at Jonah without saying a word.

Jonah was so cunning. He pretended to worry about the company and yet...

Trevor raised a brow and nodded in agreement.

"Okay, I'll leave it to you."

The only reason he agreed was because he wanted to see what Jonah was going to do.

Jonah was overjoyed and a complacent smile appeared on his face.

He felt like the whole company was his stage now.

He wanted to show his ability to manage the crisis and save the company. That way, he would be a hero.

Jonah left the company in his car. As he was driving, he excitedly called his former classmate.

This old classmate of his worked in the environment protection department, and Jonah was certain the man would help him deal with the matter easily.

Jonah was down to bitter disappointment as he was refused.

"Come on, Jonah! The new director here is very strict. I can't help you on this matter!" Jonah's former classmate said seriously. "Jonah, you want to ruin my career, right? The new director has just taken office recently. He is young and wants to accomplish great things. And he received a call for a report from your company. Humph! Severich is neither too big nor too small. It's just the right time for the new director to make an impact."

Jonah's face turned pale with fright. He didn't know this until now.

He was the one who asked Rolf to make an anonymous call to the environment protection department. But now, to Jonah's dismay, the situation was out of control.

"So... What will happen?" Jonah asked in a trembling voice. His face was deadly pale.

His classmate sneered, "What will happen? Well, the director has decided to shut down your company's factory for the time being. Severich should be informed of this very soon."

At the same time, an e-mail from the environment protection department was sent to all executives of Severich. The email officially announced that the factory was to be closed and an inspection would be carried out.

All the executives were stunned after reading the email.

"What the hell is this? Wasn't the vice general manager supposed to deal with this matter?"

"Isn't it a bit too much to close the factory while waiting for an inspection?"

"Damn it! If the factory stops running for a while, the consequences will be dangerous for our company."

While the employee of the company were stunned and anxious, Jonah shamefully came back from the environment protection department.

He wasn't alone as several people from the environment protection department came with him. He was so embarrassed.

Once they reached Severich, a young man in his twenties walked to the front of the group and shouted arrogantly, "Who is the general manager of this company? Come out now. We need to talk about environmental safety standards that you have violated."

Trevor couldn't help but notice how serious the members of the environment protection department were.

With a serious look, he turned to his assistant. "Prepare the meeting room. I'll talk to them."

His order was immediately carried out.

As the general manager, Trevor sat in the middle with his assistant to one side and Jonah to the other.

Rolf was also in the room. Feeling the severity of the situation, he sat stiffly for fear of being noticed.

The serious-looking man sitting opposite Trevor seemed to be in his early twenties.

He took the initiative to break the silence and introduced himself.

"I'm Lawson Ramos, the director of the environment protection department, and my team is here to investigate the report of chemical leakage done by your company."

He was the director in his twenties!

Trevor didn't respond right away.

Lawson continued, "Dragon, chemical leakage is a grave offense, especially here in Zayden. If you try to hide it or don't cooperate with the investigation, you will be punished accordingly."

Returning to his senses, Trevor regarded him confidently.

"I believe our company has made no offense in that respect.

"We don't have to worry about the inspection. It's our principle to be honest and trustworthy to ensure the safety of everyone."

Lawson sneered and pounded the table. He regarded Trevor sharply and snapped, "I only believe in hard evidence. According to the anonymous tip-off, only your employees know about the data. Unless proven otherwise, I have to suspect that you're lying."

Anonymous tip-off?

Trevor cast a hard look at Jonah and Rolf.

His gaze made the two more stiff and uneasy.

However, the top priority now was to deal with the current crisis. The conflict within the company could be handled later.

Trevor turned to Lawson. "I'd like to have a private talk with you. I need to tell you about something alone."

Lawson regarded him thoughtfully before nodding, which signaled the rest of his team to leave the meeting room.

He looked at Trevor and said sternly, "You know this won't change anything. Our people have already gone to the factory. We will get our hands on the investigative report soon."

Trevor nodded, not worried at all.

After a few seconds, the others walked out, leaving only Trevor and Lawson in the huge meeting room.

Lawson crossed his arms and smiled humorlessly.

"Are you thinking about bribing me? Don't sweat it! I don't take bribes!"

Trevor shook his head with an amused smile.

"No. I just need you to coordinate with me and don't cause any trouble for our company."

Lawson scoffed and burst into laughter.

"Coordinate with you? You're funny! It's a pity you didn't become a comedian! How dare you ask me that? Who do you think you are? My supervisor?"

Trevor smirked and fumbled in his pocket.

"Here. Do you recognize this?"

Trevor put his ID from Klein on the table indifferently.

Silence engulfed the huge meeting room.

Stunned, Lawson stared at the ID on the table.

Klein?

Was that a Klein identification card?

"Klein!"

Lawson jumped from his chair in surprise, looked at the identification incredibly, and then looked at Trevor.

As an official, he was aware of the mysterious organization, Klein.

Klein was a powerful organization. It could mobilize any relevant department as needed for its work. It could even mobilize the army.

A mere environment protection department was no exception.

"You are a member of Klein! Oh my God! I can't believe I'm standing before a member of Klein!"

Lawson was so excited that he wanted to shake Trevor's hand. He returned the identification card with both hands, not knowing what to say.

Trevor smiled and said, "This will be easy since you know Klein. I thought I needed to speak to your superior."

"Klein? Of course I know Klein." Lawson was as giddy as a kid meeting his idol. "General Nicolas Bowman, the founder of Klein, is my idol. Ah! If my father hadn't made me the director of the environment protection department, I would have joined the army and tried to join Klein. It has been my dream for as long as I can remember!"

Ramos excitedly tapped his thigh. He sounded so excited when speaking of Klein.

Trevor laughed and put away his identification card.

"I also am a fan of General Bowman. I've had the luck of meeting him."

Lawson appeared even more excited. "Really? You've met...
Wow! I, too, want to meet him!"

Trevor could tell that although this young man had appeared arrogant at the beginning, he was a good person deep down.

He was a nice young man.

Trevor gave him a friendly smile and said, "Joining Klein through the army isn't that easy. As far as I know, Klein only selects the very best from the army."

The atmosphere was relaxed as they spoke of Klein.

They talked about Klein's recruitment standards and responsibilities. Lawson seemed to be enjoying the conversation so much.

Trevor said, "You do have a chance to work with Klein in your current position. There is no need for you to join Klein officially.
The job as a member of Klein is a very dangerous one. We arrested a lot of criminals at Corden Port. However, many people don't know that my colleague was held hostage in that incident and almost died."

Lawson's eyes widened. "So it was Klein who carried out the operation on that incident. No wonder! So many international criminals were caught in one go!"

Trevor smiled helplessly. He had been trying to persuade the young man to give up the idea of joining Klein. However, he had not expected the young man to only focus on Klein's good achievements.

He changed the topic.

"You can check Severich's factory. I believe there is no problem with the factory."

Lawson immediately became serious. He nodded and replied,
"Of course! I have full faith in Klein! If you say there is no problem, then there is no problem."

Just then, the screen of his phone lit up.

Lawson was visibly excited. "Look! The test result of the factory is out!"
