

Chapter 1378 The Mastermind

Although unconscious, Terrance probably had some clues about Mobius.

Trevor must get ahold of these clues.

"Well, uh." Trevor cleared his throat and turned to Saniya. "I hope I won't come off as rude. But I'd like to thank Terrance in private. If it's okay, could you give us some time alone?"

Saniya was momentarily caught off guard. Returning to her senses, she nodded lightly and said, "Sure. I'll go to the restroom."

Trevor flashed an apologetic smile.

"Thank you so much. I'm just a little embarrassed to show my vulnerability in front of other people."

Saniya smiled in understanding and turned to leave.

As soon as the door closed, Trevor proceeded with his plan.

He checked every nook and cranny of the room for a hidden camera, and after making sure there wasn't one, he took out the acupuncture needles.

Inhaling deeply, he started to perform acupuncture on Terrance.

With utmost concentration, he pierced one needle at a time through Terrance's skin.

During the process, Terrance's closed eyelids began to twitch lightly. It was so faint that Trevor wouldn't have noticed if he hadn't kept a close eyes on Terrance's face.

After a few seconds, Terrance's eyes slowly opened.

It worked!

Trevor felt so relieved that he drew out a deep sigh.

Still a little hazy from waking up, Terrance looked around the room in confusion.

But his eyes suddenly dilated with horror when he tried to move and found himself unable to. He could only move his eyes and jerk his fingers slightly.

Trevor glanced at the door to make sure no one was coming in and said in a low voice, "It's me, Dragon. You're in a hospital right now. You were in a car accident and have fallen unconscious for a long time. If you want to get back on the people behind what happened to you, you need to cooperate with me."

Terrance looked at Trevor with panic and apprehension.

Seeing his reaction, Trevor sighed.

He knew Terrance wouldn't think he was being serious if he didn't show some sincerity.

Trevor relaxed his tone as he continued, "Last fall, someone attacked a villa in Dreles. Ronald, Elwood and I were there at that time. But Ronald and Elwood were kidnapped, and then..."

Trevor trailed off, knowing he didn't need to go into detail anymore.

Terrance might be a jerk, but he wasn't an idiot.

He should have realized who Trevor was after being reminded of that incident.

Sure enough, Terrance's eyes widened in horror as realization dawned on him.

After getting the reaction he wanted from Terrance, Trevor continued, "I'll be asking you some questions. If your answer is yes, blink twice. If it's a no, blink only once. Now, for the first question. Did someone cause the accident?"

Terrance blinked twice.

Trevor's face hardened. Then he continued, "Did you see someone in black with a mysterious tattoo on his wrist?"

Terrance hurriedly blinked twice.

So the accident was done by a member of Mobius!

Trevor continued to ask, "Is the man you saw the Shadow Guards' deputy leader?"

Anger instantly covered Terrance's eyes at the mention of the deputy. He blinked twice firmly.

He would have given his answer with gritted teeth if he could only speak.

However, the acupuncture treatment Trevor performed on him was only to stimulate his nerves and keep him awake for a short time.

Terrance's eyelids eventually felt heavy. With anger and panic in his eyes, he fell unconscious again.

Trevor put away the needles, his expression cold.

The Shadow Guards' deputy leader was the mastermind.

When he thought of that man, a cold figure resembling a snake appeared in his mind.

If the deputy leader was the mastermind, he wouldn't be easy to deal with.

After a while, Trevor walked to the door and opened it.

He was about to step out when someone blocked his way.

Trevor looked up to see who it was, and his heart raced.

It was the Shadow Guards' deputy leader!

How long was he outside and what was he doing here?

Could he have heard the conversation just now?

Chapter 1379 Trevor's Disguise

This man exuded an air of enigma.

His footsteps did even make a sound when he walked.

Despite Trevor's sharp senses, the deputy leader of the Shadow Guards managed to sneak up on him, catching him off guard as he materialized at the door to the ward.

"What do you want?"

Despite being filled with fear, Trevor kept his composure and did not reveal any signs of distress.

He could not tell if the questions he had posed to Terrance had been overheard by the deputy leader.

"Humph!" The deputy leader let out a snort and seized Trevor's shoulder.

Trevor felt as if his shoulder was about to be crushed under the weight of the deputy leader's grip.

"Ouch! Let me go!" Trevor feigned helplessness to ease the deputy leader's suspicions and lower his guard.

Convinced that the man was a member of Mobius, Trevor didn't dare to act rashly for the sake of his safety.

Trevor pretended to struggle against the man's grip and feigned pain as he lifted the man's wrist in an attempt to break free.

The deputy leader sneered, his voice rough and icy as he spoke. "I've warned you not to talk to Terrance again, but you didn't listen. Tell me, did you come here seeking your own demise?"

Trevor pretended to be weaker than his enemy. He struggled and was unable to break free from the man's grip.

At this moment, he glared at the man and muttered, "It's none of your business."

The deputy leader's eyes were shrouded in a cold, malevolent glow. He was determined to teach Trevor a lesson he would never forget.

Suddenly, a crisp, frigid voice of a woman echoed through the room.

"Stop! What are you doing?"

Saniya appeared, her countenance as cold as ice.

The deputy leader paused for a moment. Then, he snorted discontentedly and slowly released his grip.

"I'm here to protect Terrance," he replied, not a hint of expression on his face.

"Humph!" Saniya curled her lips in disdain and turned to Trevor. "Dragon, come with me."

Trevor nodded and then turned his gaze back to the deputy leader. The latter's eyes were as menacing as a serpent's, yet he did not move as Trevor backed away.

Saniya led him to the parking lot.

Trevor breathed a sigh of relief and said, "Thank you. That guy was so scary."

Of course, he considered putting up a fight against the deputy leader, but he doubted he would win.

The man claimed he was there for Terrance's protection, so Trevor figured that the man might have a gun.

Challenging an adversary without knowledge of their capabilities was dangerous.

Saniya shook her head and said, "You're welcome. You're Terrance's friend. I couldn't just sit by and do nothing. Besides, I don't like that guy. Since something happened, the Sanderson family could barely control Stephenson."

It turned out that the name of that terrifying dude was Stephenson.

Trevor nodded but said nothing.

Stephenson's arrogance was growing with each passing day, which convinced Trevor that the former was a member of Mobius.

Perhaps a conspiracy against the Sanderson family was brewing.

Trevor lifted the collar of his white shirt to inspect his shoulder for any injuries.

"Damn. That guy's so strong!"

There was a noticeable red mark on his shoulder, and the outline of Stephenson's hand was visible. The area was also slightly swollen, indicating signs of internal bruising.

Trevor moved his shoulder and felt a dull aching pain.

Suddenly, his eyes grew cold. Since Stephenson had let him go easily, he must not have heard the conversation between him and Terrance.

Despite this, Trevor could not shake off the feelings of hatred and resentment.

And now, he swore to himself he would make Stephenson feel the same pain he had suffered today.

Chapter 1380 An Accident In The Pharmacy

Sitting in the car, Trevor was deeply lost in thought.

When Rudolph and Isaias launched a rebellion at the Sanderson family's gathering, Rudolph claimed that the Sanderson family was going to be over.

He didn't finish what he was saying because he was cut off by a punch from one of the Shadow Guards.

Most likely, Stephenson was the one who beat him. At that point, it only meant that Mobius had already gotten inside the Sanderson family

Trevor couldn't help but feel unsettled at the thought of this.

As shown by his attitude, Rudolph didn't work with Mobius.

The Sanderson family would have already fallen apart if Rudolph had chosen to side with Mobius.

Trevor recalled the night when his villa in Dreles was attacked, the Shadow Guards did nothing to protect them, and the satellite phone stopped working.

Perhaps the internal strife of the Shadow Guards led by Stephenson was what led to the attack in Dreles.

Trevor was furious at the thought of this and wanted to murder Stephenson right away.

He took two deep breaths to control his rage and impulse.

Now was not the time for him to make rash decisions.

Although Mobius was a terrible organization, Trevor felt confident that he could overthrow it with Klein's help as long as he handled it carefully.

Trevor dialed Margaret again.

"Jasmine, listen up."

Margaret initially assumed it was a private call when she saw the caller ID, but when she heard her code name, she knew it was a serious call.

"Yes, go ahead."

Trevor said, "I've come into contact with a very suspicious individual, and I'm almost positive he's a Mobius member.

He's Stephenson, the deputy leader of the Sanderson family's personal bodyguards.

His fingerprint should be on the shoulder of my shirt. I don't know if we can get it out, but I think it's worth a try."

Margaret responded reassuringly, "No issue and don't you dare downplay our skills! When it comes to Mobius, Klein is the most competent."

When they finally met, Trevor gave Margaret his shirt before donning a green T-shirt.

Trevor was almost certain that Stephenson knew all the details of the attack in Dreles, he wouldn't let him go this time.

Whether Klein was successful or not in obtaining clues, it was still worthwhile to try.

Following the identification of Stephenson, Klein could use the hints to locate more Mobius members.

Since the Sanderson family's Shadow Guards had been infiltrated, Trevor had grounds to think that there were more members of Mobius in Zayden.

After taking a deep breath, he turned around and headed to the pharmacy to buy some medicine.

The bruise on his shoulder needed to be treated to make sure it wouldn't get worse.

Trevor went into the pharmacy and grabbed the ointment he needed.

As he prepared to pay, he noticed a man in a black mask slipping the medication from the shelf into his bag covertly.

A burglar?

Trevor furrowed his brow. He was surprised to see that happening right in front of him.

Now that he was a part of Klein, he had a job that was somewhat akin to a police officer. Trevor wasn't sure if he should intervene to stop the man from stealing.

The man's eyes were cloudy, and his face appeared somewhat lifeless. He could be a drug addict.

He appeared disoriented and distracted and he didn't seem to be particularly skilled at stealing.

"Hey! What are you doing?"

The shop assistant also noticed what happened, and he shouted at the man.

The man was stunned for a while. Then, with a frazzled expression, he pushed the shelf down.

"Ah!"

The items on the shelves fell and slammed into the shop assistant.

The man in the black mask was extremely quick as he hurried to the door.

"Hey! Stop! Stay right there!"

Stuck from the overturned shelf, the shop assistant couldn't help but shout frantically.

"Help! Bring him in!"
