

Chapter 1435 See Through The Trick

Kyson grinned hideously.

"You're the only person patrolling the hall, Dragon. The clock fell down when you passed by. Don't you dare make excuses now!"

Jack immediately backed up Kyson's accusations. "Yes, you did it! Pay for it if you don't want to spend your night behind bars."

Jack sneered and thought about the time he lost a large amount of money because of Trevor. Now was the time to make him pay.

Trevor shrugged his shoulders and said calmly, "I didn't break it. The clock fell on its own when I passed by."

Pointing to the surveillance camera, Trevor continued, "Check that CCTV. The surveillance video will prove that I have nothing to do with it."

Kyson and Jack exchanged glances and let out an amused laugh.

"Unfortunately, we can't do that since that camera is not working. It won't be repaired until noon," Jack said in a mocking tone.

Kyson sneered and murmured to himself, "Dragon is such an idiot. How could I leave such any evidence? He wants to check the video? Well, in his dreams!"

Kyson had worked very hard to frame Trevor. He didn't think Trevor would get away this time.

Jack chuckled and exclaimed, "Cut the nonsense, you must have knocked over the clock. Stop making your damn excuses and start thinking about how you can pay for the damages you caused!"

Chapter 1435 See Through The Trick

Trevor sneered and crossed his arms. "I told you the clock fell by itself."

Kyson burst into laughter and said, "Dragon, are you kidding me? Are you telling us that the clock suddenly came to life and hurt itself? If you don't pay right now, you'll find yourself behind bars later. And don't even think about getting saved by that security camera. There's nothing here that can prove your innocence."

Trevor looked at Kyson with pity.

He asked, "Since there is no footage to prove that I broke it, how could you say that I am the culprit? And why should I pay for it?"

Kyson was taken aback.

Jack was surprised as well.

They were speechless when they looked at each other.

They had made the mechanism on how to damage the clock and frame Trevor.

They also purposefully dismantled the surveillance camera.

The only thing they forgot to do was make sure Trevor couldn't get away from their accusations.

Kyson's face flushed when he noticed the amusement in Trevor's eyes. He kicked Jack and told him to figure something out.

Jack scratched his head, unable to come up with a good idea.

In his panic, he could only yell, "You're just a security guard. How dare you speak to Mr. Duffy that way! He said you broke the clock, and you did! Stop denying it. Cut the bullshit and just pay the damn bill! You said the desk clock fell on its own? Humph! Do you think the cops will believe you? How could the clock fall if you hadn't touched it?"

Trevor remained calm and smiled as he said, "You think the cops won't believe me?"

Pointing to the base of the telephone on the ground, he continued, "The base of the clock was crafted to be flat so as to avoid being easily knocked over. But the bottom of it has three grooves. If I'm not mistaken, the grooves were made to ensure that some kind of rope mechanism could exert force on the clock."

Chapter 1435 See Through The Trick

Trevor looked at Kyson with a faint smile and asked softly, "Am I right?"

Chapter 1436 Plan B

Trevor turned out to be right. Correct down to the last detail.

Kyson held his fist in a tight clench as his face seethed with rage.

Just as Trevor described, Kyson and Jack chiseled grooves on the base of the clock. They added a rope mechanism and a remote control receiver.

He ordered Jack to wait in the corner of the hall on the second floor. As soon as Trevor passed by the clock, he would start the gear and make the clock fall.

They thought this plan was foolproof.

Things initially went smoothly, but Trevor found out the truth.

They could easily find out what happened with Trevor's words even if the cops showed up.

Kyson held back his wrath as he saw the smug look on Trevor's face.

Fury bubbled up in his chest and he bellowed inwardly, "How is this possible? I spent hours designing this sophisticated trap! How can a common security guard figure this out! Fuck! Damn it to hell!"

Jack looked back and forth between the broken clock on the floor and Kyson.

He was at a loss for words.

Trevor was able to easily work out his thought process. He wouldn't be able to put the blame on Trevor.

Kyson quivered with fury.

Just as he was about to assert his influence to force Trevor to confess his crime, the entrance downstairs became bustling with life.

Chapter 1436 Plan B

Trevor looked out the window and saw Luisa accompanied by a group of company management. She was dressed in a sharp grey suit.

Kyron suppressed a laugh and said, "You're lucky Luisa came. I have more pressing issues to deal with than you. This isn't over!"

He gave Trevor one last glare and walked off in a huff.

This wasn't over?

Upon hearing that threat, Trevor sneered and went downstairs to welcome Luisa.

Kyson cursed as he recalled what happened with Trevor.

"Damn it! Plan A was a complete failure! I should get started with plan B. Fuck! Once the people I hired arrive, I'll have Luisa publicly fire Dragon for negligence of duty. I'll get back on him right away!"

He was already scheming how to make Trevor suffer with the influence of the Duffy family in Dreles after Luisa fired him.

Trevor noticed the ferocity in Kyson's eyes and snorted.

He knew Kyson wouldn't give up making things difficult for him. He wasn't feeling a bit perturbed by Kyson's wicked tendencies, but still, he made a mental note to be on guard.

Meanwhile, Luisa noticed as Kyson approached her. Her smile faded away.

Kyson calmed down and welcomed her with a boisterous laugh. "Luisa, the guests haven't arrived yet. You're far too early."

Luisa didn't want to talk to Kyson at all, but she borrowed the venue from him, so she didn't want to embarrass him. She held her contempt and said, "The guests are important to the company. I need to entertain them well."

Kyson took this chance to get close to her.

The reception hall was spectacular. Many onlookers were watching with curiosity outside the venue.

There were media outlets present to cover the event and boost

Chapter 1436 Plan B

Newmere Cosmetics. The place buzzed with life.

Trevor noticed something was off.

In the crowd, a man in sunglasses raised his hand and made an "OK" gesture.

It seemed that Kyson also noticed the man. He also made an "OK" gesture behind his back in the middle of his conversation with Luisa.

At first, he didn't want to execute plan B so soon.

Kyson wanted to wait until all the guests arrived to carry out plan B. That would be their best-case scenario.

That way, Luisa would be pressured to fire Trevor.

However, Kyson was too impatient to wait.

He couldn't wait to have his revenge on Trevor after the latter exposed his plan earlier.

Now was the time! Kyson gave the man the "go" signal.

Trevor looked skeptical when he saw Kyson made the signal.

They had another plan!