

Chapter 1469 Fire The Shareholder

Trevor and the HR manager walked towards Luisa's office, under the watchful eyes of the public.

In the CEO's office, Luisa had just concluded a brief meeting with several of the senior executives. The executives were yet to leave the office.

The new HR manager excitedly knocked on the door before entering the office.

"Luisa, I have something important to bring to your attention. Dragon, the director of the security department, has violated the company's work ethic. He came in late for work, which has set a bad precedent. I propose his employment be terminated! This would serve as a deterrent to others!"

The office went silent at this as the executives looked on.

Their eyes widened as though they couldn't believe what they were hearing.

Trevor's only response was a shrug.

The HR manager thought the executives were impressed by her excellent work ethics.

Attempting to show off, she continued, "Although Dragon is a director, he has to face the music for his actions. If this behavior is ignored, other employees will begin to imitate him by arriving late and leaving early, which would have a devastating effect on the company's management. His nonchalant attitude adds no value whatsoever to the growth of the company. He is simply a parasite to the company!"

Zoie had a weird look on her face as she said in a low voice,

"Our company is not that strict with its management policy. He was just late. It is not sufficient ground for his dismissal from his employment."

This seemed to annoy the HR manager, as she said, "Zoie, you don't seem to understand. In terms of personnel management, I'm a professional. I find a problem in a company's human resource management and deal with it promptly so as to prevent similar occurrences. I insist on Dragon being fired! Please give the order."

The executives in the offices were shocked.

Fire Trevor?

Was this a joke?

He was one of the major shareholders in the company! He had just helped the company land a major cooperation with Severich!

Did she think she could fire him just like that? Was she treating him as a mere security guard?

The senior executives knew that Trevor had a special reason for wanting to be the director of the security department.

The HR manager, however, stood with arms akimbo, believing her speech had been eloquent.

However, all she got was silence.

Luisa's face darkened in anger. She regretted appointing such a fool as the HR manager of the company.

She said loudly, "You are ignorant of one piece of information. Dragon is one of the major shareholders in our company!"

"What?" Disbelief evident on her face, the HR manager turned to look at Trevor, who had said nothing throughout the whole thing.

Trevor shrugged with a smile and said, "If it were someone else, this misunderstanding would be forgivable. However, according to your supposed standards, you, as the human resource manager, didn't read the company's equity structure carefully. Don't you think that's a dereliction of duty?"

The HR manager's face went pale at this.

She had accused Trevor of dereliction of duty and wanted him to be fired as a warning to others.

However, she hadn't paid attention to the equity structure of the company and thereby violated the personnel manager's job responsibilities.

Following her argument, she was the one to be fired.

The HR manager immediately broke out in a cold sweat and began to plead.

"Luisa, Dragon... I'm sorry, I was too impulsive! I just started working today, and I'm still lacking in experience. Please give me a second chance. I will try my very best to add value to the company."

Trevor chuckled but said nothing.

However, Luisa said emotionlessly, "Your apologies are not necessary. You are fired."

Luisa's order as the CEO of the company was unquestionable.

Zoie rubbed her temples and said to the HR manager, "You have set the record for the shortest period of employment with the company."

The HR manager took a step back, despair all over her face. She wanted to cry.

What was she to do now that she had pissed off the major shareholder in the company?

She only had herself to blame for being aggressive and mean.

Chapter 1470 Rumors

The new HR manager was suddenly fired.

The news soon spread like wildfire throughout the company, and almost everyone was aware of the secret reason behind it.

As a result of this, the event slowly escalated.

Many employees began to gossip about it after they had gotten wind of what had happened.

"Dragon is actually from a rich background!"

Initially, only the senior executives were aware that Trevor had invested in the company.

But now, even the employees were beginning to figure that he was from a rich family.

Trevor scratched his nose when he heard about the rumor.

Indeed, they were right to think like that anyway.

Trevor was the legal heir of the Sanderson family, one of the three super clans. Indeed, he was from a wealthy background.

But he used the money he had earned to become a major shareholder of Newmere Cosmetics.

Many people in the company surmised that Trevor was very rich, but they couldn't tell which family he belonged to, let alone how much he was truly worth. Those details were shrouded in mystery. But that didn't stop them from gossiping about it.

"Dragon, I know how tired you must be from working. So, I brought you this cup of coffee. I hope you like it."

One of the female employees from the marketing department placed a cup of ice coffee carefully on Trevor's table. She looked beautiful in her silk dress as she bent over slowly and twisted her waist sexily. After that, she winked at him and left his office.

Trevor shook his head, not knowing how to react to what had just happened.

Ever since that rumor began spreading throughout the company, many young and beautiful employees sent him gifts. He didn't know how to handle them.

Even though the atmosphere in the company was becoming more relaxing, Trevor didn't want to lose his guard for even a second.

The partnership between Severich and Newmere Cosmetics had been settled.

Even though Severich's representatives might have returned to Zayden, Trevor was sure that the two members of Mobius, Gunter and Rock, were still in Dreles.

Their mission was not to talk about the partnership but to control Luisa and force Trevor to make an appearance.

After the partnership had been settled, Trevor had not laid his eyes on Gunter ever since.

Gunter had left in anger during their last meeting.

Trevor didn't believe Gunter would allow such a humiliation slide, nor did he believe that a member of Mobius would give up a mission easily.

Just as Trevor was still thinking about Gunter, the latter coincidentally showed up at Newmere Cosmetics.

The man dressed in a white suit made his way into the company's lobby. However, he was not after Luisa this time.

"Hello, Dragon!"

Gunter pushed the door of the security department and stepped inside.

Trevor raised his head and asked calmly, "Gunter? I thought you have returned back to Zayden."

Gunter glanced at Trevor and shoved his hands into his pockets. There was a sneer of his face.

"You're good at keeping up pretenses. As someone from a wealthy family background, you pretended to be a security guard, so you could get close to Luisa. What a cunning man!"

Gunter had been keeping an eye on Newmere Cosmetics, so he had easily gotten wind of the recent rumors.

He had a strong feeling that he had finally figured out the truth.

No wonder Trevor had foiled his plans repeatedly. It turned out he was born with a silver spoon in his mouth and was after Luisa.

Gunter felt a sense of superiority as these thoughts reeled through his mind.

He thought Trevor was just a rich guy. There was no need to take him seriously as a member of Mobius.

There were so many ways that he could exploit to defeat Trevor.

Trevor smiled and remained silent. Since Gunter misunderstood him, it was better for him to think so. That way, it would be easy for him to hide his true identity.

Gunter chuckled hard and said, "Since you are a rich guy too, I'll give you a fair chance to compete with me. I wonder if you dare to accept the challenge or not."

Gunter was a member of Mobius, but he always disguised himself as a gentleman to protect his cover.

It was only logical for him to propose to use a civil method to compete with Trevor.

Trevor nodded slowly.

"Okay. What do you have in mind regarding the competition?"

In the end, Gunter would carry out his mission. If Gunter wanted to compete with him, Trevor was not scared at all.

However, if he resorted to doing it secretly, it would put Trevor at risk.

In order to ensure the safety of Luisa, Trevor agreed without thinking.

Gunter smiled after Trevor had agreed.

"I'll be waiting for you at the wharf by noon tomorrow. We will have three rounds. The one winning two rounds will be the winner. I also invited the richest young man in Dreles to serve as witness."

Witness?

Trevor was not surprised. Such a competition required a witness with a strong background to preside over the competition and not be biased.

He asked calmly, "So, who is the witness?"

Gunter smiled. "Henrik Wright."

Trevor was stunned.

What a coincidence!

Chapter 1471 Gunter's Weakness

Trevor arrived at the wharf at noon of the following day.

There was a luxury yacht already waiting there.

Trevor squinted and could make out the faces of familiar men and women dancing to music and having a merry time on the yacht.

Kyson, who had once been part of the supercar club, took Trevor along to meet these rich young men.

"Dragon, don't just stand there! Get on the yacht!"

Henrik waved at Trevor as soon as he recognized him from a distance.

The expression on his face was a bit strange.

The last time they met, Trevor was a security guard that Kyson brought along. Henrik didn't expect Trevor to turn out to be a mysterious rich guy from a wealthy family.

Gunter was dressed in beach shorts and a floral shirt. His face was tight and he remained silent.

There were many young men gathered around him. The identity of a rich man from Zayden made him quite popular.

Trevor made his way onto the yacht and was greeted by many young men.

After all, they had met Trevor before. They already had a good impression of him.

Henrik secretly winked at Trevor.

Trevor smiled and felt more relaxed.

At that moment, Gunter placed his glass on the table and rose to his feet.

He held the guardrail of the yacht with one hand and smoothed his hair with the other, keeping his gaze fixed on Trevor.

"Well, how daring of you to come here, Dragon. I must commend your braveness and fearlessness. I admire it. But I must warn you beforehand that you can't hope to win against me. I'm giving you one last chance to admit defeat. If you're willing to surrender to me, I'll take you and everyone here out to the sea where we can have fun and forget that you ever came here to challenge. How does that sound?"

Trevor sneered, "Can you cut the crap? I'm here now. Why would I be afraid of you?"

Gunter snorted and shook his head with disdain. "So, you're going ahead with the challenge? How do you hope to win me? If you lose, don't ever get in my way again! You must also resign from Newmere Cosmetics."

Trevor chuckled again and remained silent. He reached for a bottle of whiskey and poured himself half a glass. Then he tossed it down his throat in one gulp.

He had been quick to make a very good observation at that moment.

Ever since Gunter had risen to his feet, his fingers had been tightly wrapped around the guardrail of the yacht and he had no intention of leaving it yet.

As Trevor made that observation, he couldn't help keeping his eyes fixed on Gunter, closely observing his body language.

Such details could help reveal a person's true thoughts and state of mind. It could mean that Gunter was afraid of the yacht.

Perhaps it was not Gunter's idea to set the venue of this competition on the yacht, but Henrik's.

Trevor narrowed his eyes and examined the yacht carefully.

He recognized that it was the same yacht that Henrik had used to entertain him when he was in Dreles last time.

A smile appeared on Trevor's face as he thought of this.

Then he had an idea. He glanced at Gunter and said, "Since everyone is present at the moment, why don't we just start the competition? Also, since Henrik is the witness, how about we leave the content of the first round to him to decide?"

Trevor knew Henrik very well. He was a lover of confrontational sports. Otherwise, he wouldn't have set up a supercar club.

If it was Henrik who decided the content of the competition, it was very likely that the competition would be about driving a motorboat, which was similar to a regular car race.

Henrik always loved that.

If Trevor was right that Gunter was afraid of ships, there was a big chance that he was going to lose.

Moreover, Henrik was the most powerful and richest young man in Dreles, and was invited to serve as witness by Gunter.

As long as Henrik was the one to decide the content of the competition, there was no way Gunter could refuse in order to maintain the momentum.

Therefore, Trevor made up his mind to leave the decision of the first round of the competition to Henrik.
