

Chapter 1510 Ape's Betrayal

The man with an ear stud watched with gritted teeth as Trevor, Emmeline, and the students left. Then he looked at Ape in apprehension.

"Boss..."

Ape snorted coldly.

"You can't even deal with something so simple! Fuck off! Don't embarrass me!"

Ape strode back to the arcade in a foul mood.

Every time his mind wandered to how Trevor embarrassed him in front of his men, he fumed.

"Damn it! Raven is such a big snoop! After cooperating with him last time, this is what I get? How dare he threaten me using our superior? I just wanted to have that girl, but he had the nerve to get in my way! He's too stuck-up!"

Ape shook the joystick vehemently, venting his rage.

He couldn't concentrate on the game and lost it, which only drove him up the wall.

"Fuck!" Ape's expression gloomed.

His eyes narrowed as he touched his stubble.

"Raven, you bastard! You'll pay for humiliating me like that!"

Ape took out his phone and dialed Gunter's number.

He got Gunter's contact information after he interrogated

When Gunter heard Ape's voice on the other end of the line, he immediately thought of hanging up.

But before Gunter could end the call, Ape said something that made him pause.

"Do you want to take revenge on Raven?"

Gunter was about to press the end call button but paused. His expression darkened as he asked coldly, "What do you mean? Quit stalling and get to the point."

Ape scowled but suppressed his rage and said stiffly, "My partner's code name is Raven. As far as I know, he moves as fast as a cheetah and carries poker cards as his weapon. They are sharp when thrown and could slash anything in contact."

Ape had heard of all this information from someone in Mobius. He didn't know Raven before, but the latter left a deep impression on him after he heard Raven used poker cards as his weapon.

Gunter's expression hardened.

He didn't expect Ape would call and tell him the information about his partner.

Were the two in a conflict?

Gunter touched his chin and considered Ape's words.

It was common for mission partners to get on each other's nerves at times. Gunter and Rock also had misunderstandings and fights from time to time.

Waiting for Gunter's decision, Ape said impatiently, "I've already given you the information about Raven. It's up to you what you'll do with it."

Gunter smacked his lips and finally said, "Okay. You didn't call me today."

Ape grinned and nodded. "Very well. Bye."

After all, Ape had received an order from the superior to come to Dreles and work with Raven.

Ape was satisfied that Gunter would keep their conversation just now a secret because it would be a great trouble if the superior learned about Ape's betrayal.

After the call ended, Gunter sneered. "Dragon and Raven. Fast as a cheetah. Uses poker cards as a weapon."

Gunter's sneer deepened, and his gaze became ominous.

After getting the information about Trevor's skills, Gunter devised a perfect plan.

"Just wait and see, Dragon. I'll return the humiliation you gave me last time!"

Chapter 1511 Gunter's Provocation

Trevor had already guessed that Ape harbored a grudge against him. But he didn't know that Ape had betrayed him and given Raven's information to Gunter.

He and Tasha sent Emmeline and the students back to the university.

As they were getting closer to the university, Trevor felt a little emotional while looking at the gate. He sighed in his head. He was also a student here back then.

At this moment, Emmeline had not yet recovered from the shock. Her face was still deathly pale.

But when they arrived at the university gate, she managed to calm down.

"Thank you for today. You have helped me a lot. If it weren't for you, I didn't know what to do."

The students were also discussing with each other, looking at Trevor with admiration from time to time.

Trevor, who was a stranger to them, was about the same age as them. However, he effortlessly dealt with those vicious people.

One of the students said, "Sir, please come to our university again in a few days. We want to prepare a gift for you to thank you for helping us today."

Trevor smiled and wanted to refuse.

But Tasha suddenly chimed in, "Yes, Dragon. If you are free, why don't you come over? You were a great help to us this time. Of course, we all want to thank you."

What else could Trevor do in front of this enthusiastic crowd? He touched his nose, nodded, and said, "Okay. You can contact me by then."

After saying this, he left to return to his apartment in the north of the city.

On his way home, his phone rang.

He immediately answered it and heard a familiar voice.

"Hey, Dragon!"

Trevor couldn't help raising his eyebrows when he recognized Gunter's voice.

"Why are you calling me now? Haven't you learned a lesson last time?"

Trevor's question reminded Gunter of that day Trevor beat him up. His face turned cold, and he snorted.

"Humph! Dragon, I'm not calling to fight with you. Listen. Two groups came to Dreles to carry out the same mission. According to the rule, no matter how fierce the internal strife is, no one can kill the others before the task is completed. But there is another rule that the internal conflicts among the members of Mobius can be solved by gambling."

Trevor raised his eyebrows. He hadn't heard of this rule. But he pretended to be calm and said, "Go on."

Gunter didn't suspect anything. He thought Trevor was only bluffing, so he sneered.

"According to the rule, you decide the time, and I decide the place. Then we will both place a big bet. This bet is the end. After this, we can't make trouble for each other in the future."

Trevor was confused. "Do you think you can win against me?"

Gunter replied through clenched teeth, "Don't be so confident. Last time, you just relied on the number of people. This time, we will fight one-on-one. You are definitely no match for me."

He sounded confident.

Ape had provided him with Raven's information, so Gunter was very confident that he would win.

Trevor could feel Gunter's unusual confidence on the other end of the line. He rubbed his chin, thinking of something.

He had just beaten Gunter a few days ago, but Gunter dared to provoke him today.

Gunter must have felt he had grasped some advantages. Did it have anything to do with what happened today?

Trevor just had a little conflict with Ape, but Gunter came to provoke him. This was too coincidental.

While Trevor was lost in thought, Gunter shouted on the other end of the line, "Hey, are you still there? I will bet three million dollars. No, five million dollars. You bet three million, but I'll bet five million. What do you think about it? Let's meet at the abandoned warehouse in the southern suburb of the city. It's spacious there. Do you agree?"

Gunter decided on the venue after careful consideration. The abandoned warehouse was rarely found, and it was

In his mind, Raven had no cover, and his so-called short-distance and fast-moving skill would be restricted.
