

Chapter 1512 Raven's Leaked Information

Trevor didn't immediately accept Gunter's invitation to a bet, but he quickly analyzed the situation in his head.

He beat Gunter last time, but because they had hooligans to help, it made sense that Gunter did not want to give in.

However, being stubborn was one thing. Being overconfident was another.

It was suspicious how impatient this guy was to challenge him.

Trevor's eyes flashed as he picked up on a thread of thought.

Gunter would only be so confident if he thought he grasped Raven's weakness.

Trevor's eyes narrowed at the idea.

In Dreles, the one who could spill useful information on Raven could only be Ape.

It looked as if Ape had chosen to betray his partner.

Trevor sneered after coming to this revelation.

"Since you really want to get beaten up again, I'll carry out your wish. Let's settle this tomorrow at noon!"

Raven's information had been leaked, but what did that have to do with him, Dragon?

Trevor couldn't help laughing to himself.

Any information about Raven had nothing to do with what was going on in reality.

If Gunter expected to use Raven's weakness to beat him, he had something coming.

Trevor smirked as he said, "You want me to bet three million on this? All right."

This promise excited Gunter so much that he repeatedly told Trevor to come on time and then he said something vaguely threatening before hanging up.

Before noon the next day, Trevor made his way to a suburb in the southern part of the city and eventually found the abandoned warehouse.

Three cars were parked outside the building.

Besides Gunter, Ape and Rock were there.

Trevor smiled slightly and entered through the main door.

In the center of the warehouse, there was a big metal cage. The cage was spotless and looked so out of place.

When he saw that Trevor entered the building, Gunter smirked.

"Ha! There you are! I'm getting my revenge today, Dragon!"

Gunter had ordered someone to work all night to customize the metal cage so that it could restrict Raven.

There was nothing else in the cage so Raven, even though he could move as fast as a cheetah, had no place to hide and launch a surprise attack.

If it was a combat at point-blank range, Gunter had confidence that he could quickly close the distance so that Raven could not throw poker cards at him.

Trevor glanced at Gunter but ignored him.

Rock stood next to Gunter with his arms crossed, but he, too, said nothing.

Ape was leaning back against a pillar inside the warehouse, smoking. It seemed that he didn't want to talk either.

"Hey, Ape." Trevor greeted him with a smile and held out his hand.

Ape's expression froze for a moment, but he eventually chose to grant Trevor a high five.

At least on the surface, Ape and Raven were still partners.

However, Trevor immediately noticed that something wrong.

Ape kept sneakily exchanging meaningful looks with Gunter.

But Trevor didn't expose this treachery. He just lowered his gaze to hide the mocking look in his eyes.

Gunter sneered as he started to warm-up.

"Dragon! I admire your boldness. Since you dared to come here today, I'll give you a chance to surrender now. If you bow before me, admit defeat, and swear to avoid me when you see me from now on, I will let you leave here unscathed today. What do you think?"

Trevor glanced at the metal cage and asked in reply, "Is this why you're so confident?"

Gunter snarled, "Cut the crap! Since you clearly want to be beaten so badly, I won't stop you. Come on! Get in the cage so I can teach you a good lesson!"

Trevor sneered.

Now that Gunter had information on Raven which he thought he could use to deal with him, Trevor didn't mind taking advantage of this wonderful misunderstanding.

He couldn't wait for Gunter to find out that the information he got from Ape was wrong. There was clearly a misunderstanding here.

Trevor glanced at Ape once more and decided to teach him a lesson.
