

Chapter 1558 See Curtis Again

Trevor frowned. He was visibly annoyed and snorted coldly.

"How snobbish you are!"

Even in high-end luxury jewelry stores, they wouldn't drive customers away, even if the said customers didn't buy anything.

It was obvious that this saleswoman brought her negative emotions to work and was trying to drive away Trevor and Nasir out of sheer meanness.

Even Nasir was pissed off. He frowned and scolded, "It hasn't even been two minutes since we came here and you're already driving us away. Is this how your shop treats customers?"

The heated argument attracted the attention of other customers nearby.

The jewelry store wasn't really big, so everyone in the store noticed what was going on and turned to look.

The saleswoman became very nervous and her face turned as red as a tomato. She tried to find excuses to defend herself but was unable to do so.

She was the one who was wrong here.

Recently, a young man from a wealthy family in another town took a liking to her, and this changed her. She didn't work as hard as she used to, and she looked at all the customers with a hint of contempt.

That was why she was so disdainful and arrogant when she heard the discussion between Trevor and Nasir.

While the situation was at a standstill, a young man walked into the jewelry store.

When Trevor saw the man's face clearly, he was surprised.

The person who came in was Curtis, the very same person who had failed to win the tender through bribery.

"Curtis!"

The moment the saleswoman saw Curtis, she put on a pitiful expression as if she was about to cry. She quickly walked up to Curtis and held his arm, sobbing.

"Curtis, you come just in time. Guess what just happened... These two people are making trouble for me. They are both poor but they are hanging out here, preventing me from tending to the real customers. I kindly advised them to watch their expenses because our articles here are too expensive for them. But to my surprise, they started yelling at me. How could people be so mean?"

Curtis was that young man from a rich family who had recently taken a liking on the saleswoman.

Trevor almost burst into laughter when he heard what the saleswoman said.

How ridiculous! She dared to distort the truth right in front of him!

The saleswoman was not ashamed at all. Instead, she turned and glared at Trevor, as if to show that she had the support of a rich man and she could easily deal with Trevor and Nasir.

When Curtis saw Trevor's face clearly, he was stunned for a moment.

Ignoring Nasir, Curtis laughed coldly. "Dreles is really small! I never thought I would meet you again! Last time at the bidding, you had the support of an old rascal, right? This time, I'd like to see how you will deal with this matter!"

The Craig family specially tasked Curtis to come and attend the bidding in Dreles.

Trevor not only caused him to lose face, but also caused him to fail in his task.

These two reasons accounted for Curtis' deep and intense hatred for Trevor.

Trevor just glanced at Curtis indifferently, as if he was looking at a funny clown.

"We have the right to go any store as we please. It's none of your business!"

Curtis gritted his teeth and said angrily, "You bullied my girlfriend! How dare you say it's none of my business? You two can't even afford a simple piece of jewelry, yet you claim to be customers? Since you two can't buy anything, what's wrong with my girlfriend asking you to get out of here?"

Hearing that, Trevor sneered.

"Oh? What if I can afford the jewelry in the store? What would you do?"

The quarrel grew increasingly intense and the commotion caught the attention of the store manager who rushed outside and tried to defuse the situation.

"Everyone, please calm down..."

However, Curtis ignored the manager. Glaring at Trevor, he said arrogantly, "Well, if you can afford it, I will spend as much money as you here."

He lifted his chin and patted the salesgirl's round buttocks, looking frivolous and playful.

"At least that would help my girlfriend's sales record here," Curtis added with a smug smile.

The manager of the jewelry store shut up after hearing what Curtis said.

Of course he didn't want to miss the opportunity to make money.

Nasir was a little scared. He didn't know what grudge Curtis and Trevor had against each other, judging by the current situation, the problem wouldn't be solved easily.

Nasir secretly pulled Trevor's sleeve, hinting him not to do anything without thinking carefully.

However, Trevor ignored Nasir's warning.

Curtis, on the other hand, noticed Nasir's nervousness and immediately sneered.

"What's wrong? Are you scared? Weren't you very arrogant at the bidding at that time? Humph! You pauper! Get out of here if you don't have money! You'd better not make a fool of yourself here. Without the support of the company, you are good-for-nothing! You better leave now or I might just throw you out myself!"

Chapter 1559 The Most Expensive Jewelry

Trevor felt Curtis was way too noisy.

With a fierce look, he glared at Curtis.

Curtis was stunned when he met Trevor's gaze and his whole body was covered with goose bumps. His mind went blank.

The mocking words got stuck in his throat.

Trevor snorted coldly and looked away.

Since Curtis was now silent, Trevor looked at Nasir and then pointed his chin toward the counter of the jewelry store.

"Go and choose a gift. Whatever you think is suitable for your girlfriend, take it."

Nasir hesitated for a while, then walked to the counter.

The other customers in the jewelry store whispered amongst themselves while looking forward to the result.

Nasir was hesitant about which item to choose.

The jewelry store was illuminated with a strong light which shone on the jewelry and made it look so exquisite.

After hesitating for a while, Nasir finally pointed at a necklace.

"Well... I think this crystal necklace will do just fine."

No sooner had he said it than the manager quickly took the crystal necklace from the counter and asked aloud, "Sir, are you sure about this? The necklace is made of pure crystal and it took advanced technological means to design it. See how it shines... It's not cheap. It's worth five hundred and fifty thousand."

After having met Trevor's cold gaze just now, Curtis didn't dare to be arrogant anymore. He muttered in a low voice, "If you don't have money, don't push yourself too hard. No one will laugh at you. It's true that ordinary people can't afford to spend five hundred and fifty thousand on a necklace."

However, Trevor's expression remained unchanged. He casually took out his bank card and threw it on the counter. "Use the card."

A look of doubt flashed through Curtis' eyes.

The saleswoman was also doubtful. She held Curtis's arm tightly and said in a low voice, "He must be just bluffing. I'm pretty sure there isn't enough money in his bank account to pay for the necklace."

At this time, everyone in the jewelry store focused their attention on the manager.

The manager felt a little nervous. He picked up the bank card with his trembling fingers and cautiously scratched it on the cash register.

A clear electronic voice soon came from the machine.

"Your purchase of five hundred and fifty thousand has been successful."

For a moment, the people in the jewelry store were stunned.

They began to whisper.

Five hundred and fifty thousand was not a small amount.

According to the deal Curtis had made with Trevor, it was Curtis' turn to make a purchase and he had to spend as much as Trevor just did, that was five hundred and fifty thousand.

Curtis felt very embarrassed and judging from the look on his face, he was a little unhappy.

He cursed, "Humph! I didn't expect you to have that much money. But I guess this is all you have, right? I'm a man of my word. I'll buy a piece of jewelry worth five hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The spending will go in the sales record of my girlfriend."

As he spoke, Curtis raised his chin with a disdainful expression.

Five hundred and fifty thousand was not serious money for Trevor, but it was the most Curtis could spend.

He just wanted to flaunt and scare Trevor from making any other purchase.

The saleswoman was so excited that she kissed Curtis' face over and over again.

Just as she was about to choose a piece of jewelry she liked, Trevor waved his hand and said with a smile, "Relax. Why the rush? I'm not just buying a necklace. My friend has picked out a gift for his girlfriend. I have to buy one for my girlfriend too."

Curtis was stunned and he stared at Trevor in disbelief.

He almost felt like his heart stopped beating for a second.

He doubted whether Trevor was just bluffing or not. No! He was surely bluffing.

Ignoring Curtis, Trevor stepped forward and glanced lazily at the jewelry at the counter. Then he asked the shop owner casually, "Since you have a jewelry store in the city center, I guess you have some nice jewelry here, right? I want to have the most expensive one. Take it out and let me have a look!"

Chapter 1560 Kick Him Out

Trevor wanted to see the most expensive piece of jewelry.

The shop owner froze in place as his eyes widened in surprise.

The crystal necklace, which was worth five hundred and fifty thousand dollars, was quite expensive. He began questioning if the young man in front of him had a lot of money.

Instead of putting his bank card away, Trevor put it on the counter and continued to urge the shop owner.

"So? Are you willing to take out the most expensive one?"

The saleswoman frowned and was irritated since she was going to pick a necklace for herself.

If Trevor hadn't requested to see the most expensive jewelry, she would've gotten a necklace.

She figured that since Curtis openly admitted she was his girlfriend, he would buy the necklace for her.

She said to the shop owner, "Sir, do as he says. He thinks he's a big shot."

The saleswoman agreed with Curtis. She also felt that Trevor didn't have any more money left to spare after spending five hundred and fifty thousand.

She figured that Trevor must be bluffing and that he was trying to scare Curtis away.

The look in her eyes was full of disdain and disgust as she looked at Trevor from head to toe.

"Five hundred fifty thousand dollars? That must be all your savings. You're so stupid if you think I'll fall for that little scheme of yours. Do you think you can beat Curtis? Huh! In your dreams!"

At that moment, the shop owner went back to the storage room and took out the jewelry.

It was a diamond ring placed in a transparent box. It looked dazzling in the bright light.

The customers inside the jewelry store were also shocked when they saw the diamond ring.

After the shop owner put the jewelry box on the counter, he said, "This is our shop's best jewelry. The diamond is around 15.1 carats. It has a total of 60 little diamonds decorated around it. Rest assured, all of them are high-quality diamonds. The price is approximately four million and two thousand dollars."

As Trevor stared at the diamond ring, he rubbed his chin and muttered, "Fifteen carats? That's a little too big. It's beautiful, though."

Since Luisa's fingers were quite slender, he figured that having her wear a fifteen-carat diamond was a little too much.

Curtis, however, took Trevor's hesitation as a sign of him getting cold feet.

"You don't have to keep pretending you're rich. If you can't afford it, then don't buy it. I'm sure it's already a huge honor just to be able to look at it."

Trevor turned around and glared at him.

Then, he pushed the bank card on the counter and said nonchalantly, "I'll buy it."

The shop owner's hands began trembling when he took the bank card. "Are you sure about this, sir?"

Trevor nodded.

Four million dollars was nothing to him.

All he wanted to do was to make Luisa happy. It didn't matter to him if she wouldn't like it either. He could easily buy other gifts to make her happy.

The shop owner's heart drummed inside his chest as he grabbed the bank card and swiped it.

As expected, they heard the electronic voice, saying, "The transaction of four million and two hundred thousand has been successfully completed."

What?

He did have that much money!

The saleswoman's face went pale. Suddenly, she slumped to her knees.

At that moment, it was obvious that he wasn't someone that a mere shop assistant like her could provoke.

She could only pray for Curtis to protect her.

"Curtis..." The saleswoman looked at Curtis.

Curtis' face also went sickly pale. He looked utterly frightened, almost as if he had just seen a ghost.

She panicked. Curtis was no match for this man either!

The saleswoman's mind instantly went blank at that moment, and she slowly became engulfed by despair.

She couldn't believe this happened.

Now that the payment was successful, Trevor put his bank card away.

Even Nasir was shocked when he witnessed that. He didn't expect him to be so rich.

The shop owner's hands were trembling as he carefully helped Trevor pack the diamond ring and the crystal necklace.

Trevor shifted his gaze at Curtis and smirked.

"Hey, Curtis? It's time for you to spend the same amount of money."

Curtis tried to force a smile, but he couldn't say another word.

He could spend five hundred and fifty thousand dollars. But not four million.

When the customers inside the jewelry store noticed Curtis, they immediately burst into laughter.

Just a while ago, Curtis had his head held high when he went inside the store. Everyone thought he was rich.

But then it turned out that he couldn't actually afford it.

None of them expected that.

Trevor sneered.

"Since you can't afford it, I'll just kick you out of the store."

Curtis' eyes widened in fear. He remembered saying that before, but he didn't expect that he would be the one to be driven out.

He held both of his hands in the air and tried to stand up. "Don't come over here! What are you doing?"

Trevor ignored Curtis' pleas and picked him up by his collar before dragging him out of the door.

After Curtis fell to the ground in front of the shop, he looked extremely mad and embarrassed. He began to roar like a madman, which attracted the attention of passers-by.

Trevor turned a blind eye and went back inside the jewelry store. Then, he picked up the jewelry that the shop owner packaged for him.

The shop owner glanced at the saleswoman for a moment before he turned to Trevor. "Sir..."

Trevor waved his hand. "This is your shop's business. Deal with it yourself."

"She has nothing to do with us. She has already been fired the moment she offended you."

The saleswoman was utterly stunned. She sat on the floor and burst into tears.
