

Chapter 1561 Visit Sheri

Trevor walked to the door of the jewelry store with two bags of precious jewelry. When he saw Nasir just standing there, he called out, "Let's go."

Nasir snapped out of his shocked state. He rubbed his face, trying to dispel the disbelief in his eyes. Then he quickly caught up with Trevor.

When he was within hearing range, he stuttered, "Dragon... Are you really that rich?"

Nasir couldn't understand how a person who claimed to be from a secret law enforcement authority could spend about nearly five million dollars without hesitation.

A smile tilted up the corners of Trevor's lips as he put the two bags of gifts in the car. Then he turned around and helped Nasir fix his collar.

"There's no need to stress your brain about such meaningless things. What you should be focusing on is seeing your girlfriend as soon as possible."

Again, Nasir was left in a stupefied state. By the time he became aware of his surrounding again, Trevor was already behind the wheel.

He scratched his head and sighed.

"It's not that simple. I'm afraid that I won't be able to see her even if I go to her home."

Trevor had just started the car. Hearing Nasir's words, he stopped and asked, "Why?"

Nasir gave a sad smile and shrugged. "Sheri's father... Ian is very dissatisfied with me. The last time I went to their house, her father blocked my way. He made sure I left without seeing her."

Trevor inclined his head, a thoughtful expression appearing on his face. "So, if you want to make up with Sheri, you have to get into Ian's good graces first?"

Nasir nodded helplessly.

He was certain that Sheri would forgive him if she saw how sincere he was when he apologized, but that would only happen if he was able to see her.

If he couldn't get past Ian, then he would have nothing but his wishes.

Trevor thought for a while and grinned. "Don't worry. I have an idea. Since you are going to give her the gift, you have to show your sincerity. Actually, I think I should call someone to arrange a more special way to give her the gift."

Nasir rubbed his hands and asked anxiously, "Will it work?"

Trevor laughed, patted his chest and promised, "Trust me! Do you think I'll harm you?"

Nasir shook his head. Trevor always gone out of his way to help him.

After some arrangement, Trevor drove Nasir to the villa where Ian and Sheri lived.

The villa was still glamorous.

Trevor still remembered that when he first came here, Sheri Lively was watering flowers.

Nasir murmured, "Have you seen the two men in leather jackets at the gate? I asked them to drive me out last time."

But Trevor was not afraid at all. He parked the car, got out and strode to the villa. Reluctant, Nasir trailed behind him.

The two burly men reacted when they saw the men. They stood at attention.

They didn't recognize Trevor, but when they saw Nasir's face, their polite expression turned fierce.

"How dare you come here again? Aren't you afraid of getting your legs broken?"

The men shifted closer, blocking the entry into the villa.

Nasir blinked at them. He opened his mouth and shut it promptly when no words emerged.

But Trevor didn't seem to see the men in front of him and continued to stride forward.

"Hey! Stop! Otherwise, I will beat you!" One of them clenched his fists.

Trevor walked forward until he was close enough. Then he stretched his hands forward and pushed the two men away.

The men tried to regain their footings and resist the push.

But it quickly became apparent they were fighting a losing battle. The men stumbled and fell to either side.

Trevor didn't start a fight here. After all, he was here to solve a problem, not create another one.

After pushing the men out of the way, he raised his chin at

Nasir and said, "Don't just stand there. Let's go."

Nasir was stunned.

The two men were also gaping at him, lost for words. Each man weighed over 200 pounds.

Even so, they were still pushed away by the young man in front of them easily!

He must be deceptively strong!

Chapter 1562 Meet Ian Again

Trevor and Nasir entered the gate and walked in the garden.

The two strong men stared at each other for a moment. Then, one of them gave a meaningful nod to the other and hurried into the villa to report to Ian.

Nasir was quite nervous all this while. He swallowed hard and asked in a low voice, "Isn't what we're doing a little inappropriate?"

Trevor smiled gently and reassured him. "It's no big deal. These gangsters wouldn't quibble over such a small thing. Don't worry. I will handle it."

The two crossed the garden and saw Ian standing the front door with a long face.

Ian stared at Nasir for a few seconds and then said coldly, "Come in."

Nasir was pleasantly surprised when Ian invited him in and his face lit up. He thought that Ian must have decided to forget his prejudice against him.

Trevor, on the other hand, seemed more cautious as he felt something was off. Ian's invitation wasn't as simple as it seemed.

When they entered the living room, Ian's attitude was all but friendly. He sat down on the sofa with a cold face and lit a cigarette.

"Nasir, I have to admit that you are really something. Your friend here is good at fighting. But don't think you can force your way to see Sheri. Even if you decide to do like last time and call the police or get a bunch of armed maniacs, I still won't let you see her."

When Ian was done speaking, he glanced nervously at the door.

It wasn't until he was certain there were no police or thugs armed with machine guns that he breathed a sigh of relief and took a puff of his cigarette.

Trevor noticed Ian was trying to hide his nervousness, and he couldn't help smiling.

Apparently, the people Trevor had taken with him last time left a deep impression on Ian.

Ian seemed to have been traumatized.

Nasir trembled a little and said sincerely, "I want to see Sheri. For the past few days, I've been thinking about my mistakes and I wish to have the chance to personally apologize."

Ian tapped the end of his cigarette, letting the ash fall into the ashtray. Then he sneered, "Nasir, you know what you've done to Sheri, right? She came home in tears that day. She was sad and devastated. Now you have the nerve to come here and say that you want to see her! Do you think you can see her as you like? Humph! Why would I let you see her?"

Trevor couldn't stay quiet any longer.

"If I say I'm a senior member of a top secret law enforcement agency, would that be enough?"

A top secret law enforcement agency?

And he was a senior member?

Ian's face suddenly froze as Trevor's words kept echoing in his mind. He didn't even have the heart to smoke his cigarette again.

He looked at Trevor in disbelief, wondering whether Trevor was just making fun of him.

If it was someone else who said that, Ian would definitely have slapped him hard before laughing in the person's face for being such a loudmouth.

But this young man who came with Nasir had left a deep impression on him last time. Ian felt there was a chance Nasir really had powerful connections.

Perhaps Nasir's friend was really as powerful as he claimed to be and Nasir brought him here to deal with this matter.

As a gang leader, Ian leader knew a thing or two about law enforcement agencies.

He knew that some law enforcement agencies did not operate in the open and were top secret. The more powerful the agencies were, the higher their level of confidentiality.

Now, this young man just said the agency he worked for was of the highest level of confidentiality. As the leader of a small gang, Ian couldn't compete with such an agency at all.

At the thought of this, Ian felt his blood freeze.

Chapter 1563 The Cause Of The Conflict

The living room fell silent.

Droplets of sweat began welling up on Ian's forehead as his hands trembled.

A senior member of the law enforcement agency that was on the highest level of secrecy just suddenly came to a gang leader's house. He knew that wasn't a good thing.

Ian shuddered as he thought about what his gang had done.

Trevor smirked as he noticed the change in Ian's expression.

Nasir felt like the atmosphere was getting a bit tense, so he coughed.

Changing the subject, Trevor said, "I'm here as Nasir's friend, though. I don't want to do anything irrelevant."

Ian knew what Trevor was trying to imply.

Trevor wasn't here to make things difficult for him today.

Ian breathed a sigh of relief after hearing that. His right hand was still trembling, but he managed to take a drag before coughing. "Well... In that case, I'll tell you the truth. Please go back. You're not welcome here. Nasir, you should know that she's my only daughter. I cherish her very much. I didn't agree when you asked her to be your girlfriend. Sheri came home crying a few days ago and told me that you hurt her. Did you even know how heartbroken

I was when I heard that?"

Nasir rubbed his face as he explained, "I admit that I've been busy with work these past few days so I could provide our partner with the product improvement plan before the deadline. I spent a lot of time on it, and that caused me to ignore Sheri's feelings and neglect her. This is all my fault, and I'm truly sorry."

Trevor's eyes widened as he turned to look at Nasir.

He didn't know their conflict had something to do with Newmere Cosmetics.

Since that was the case, Trevor felt like he was partly responsible to help deal with the problem. He was the one who helped Newmere Cosmetics get a partnership with the Central Hospital, after all.

Just when Trevor was about to speak, Ian glared at Nasir and shouted, "How dare you have the nerve to say that? Sheri told me that your hospital has partnered up with a cosmetic company. The CEO of that company is gorgeous, right? Tell me, Nasir. Were you planning on two-timing Sheri? Why else would you be so devoted to the partnership?"

Trevor and Nasir were speechless for a moment. They definitely didn't expect Ian to say that.

Nasir's face instantly turned red. He wanted to explain himself, but he didn't know where to start.

Trevor, on the other hand, burst into laughter.

"This is all a misunderstanding. To tell you the truth, I'm on a mission in Dreles. I'm currently an employee of that cosmetics company. I'm familiar with the female CEO. I can't tell you more because this matter is confidential, but I assure you she's a very conservative woman. Not to Nasir looked at Trevor and gave him a grateful smile. That was the first time someone had questioned his character so bluntly. He was glad that Trevor got him out of trouble.

Ian's eyes widened as he looked at Trevor in surprise.

He didn't say anything else. He just stubbed out his cigarette and frowned.

He didn't really want to separate Nasir and his daughter.

Nasir wasn't only a decent doctor; he was also a young, promising director of the hospital. He had a bright future ahead of him, and he was undoubtedly the best person he could entrust his daughter's life to.

Ian made things difficult for Nasir because he wanted to test Nasir—just in case Nasir might hurt Sheri again in the near future.

Noticing that the atmosphere was tense again, Trevor looked at Ian and said, "Why don't you let your daughter come out to meet him? This is just a small misunderstanding, after all. If Nasir apologizes to her in person, she might forgive him. What do you think?"

Ian scoffed.

"Apologize? He doesn't even seem sincere at all."

Chapter 1564 The Gift

Nasir didn't look sincere?

Trevor and Nasir looked at each other and couldn't help but smile.

Of course, they had prepared an apology gift for Sheri. It was a very expensive crystal necklace.

However, they didn't bring it with them, as they thought of another way to send it to her.

Trevor glanced at his phone screen. "Given what time it is, Nasir's proof of sincerity should be delivered soon."

No sooner had Trevor finished his words than a hearty peal of laughter came from the door of the villa.

"Ian, I am here!"

The next moment, a fat man with a big smile appeared in the living room.

He was none other than Clifton, the former leader of the hooligans on the street of Dreles.

Ian looked at Clifton in surprise.

"Clifton? Why are you here?"

It had been a long time since Clifton had stopped his illicit activities. Now he was focusing all his energy on running a delivery business.

Clifton chuckled and said, "I run a delivery business now, and I am here to send you a gift today."

After saying that, he opened the delicate packing box in his big hand, revealing a crystal necklace that shone brightly.

The crystal necklace was very exquisite and even someone like Ian who knew nothing about luxury things could tell that this necklace cost a real fortune.

With a broad smile, Clifton said happily, "Congratulations, Ian. This is definitely a big gift. Whoever sent this gift has the most sincere intentions. By the way, I heard that your daughter was in bad terms with her boyfriend recently. My guess is that it's her boyfriend who sent her this gift."

Hearing this, Ian glanced at Nasir.

Before Ian could say anything, Clifton persuaded him, "Ian, can I give you a piece of advice? I've been in a thug in the streets for several years and as such, I've learned a lot about life. It's never a good idea to meddle into other people's business especially when none of those concerned asked you to. Young people have their own way of viewing life and you'd better let them solve their own problems."

Frowning, Ian touched his beard thoughtfully but said nothing.

Clifton chuckled and continued, "Come on, Ian. We have been friends for many years. I won't harm you. Besides, you should keep in mind that Sheri is an adult and she can make her own decisions. You can't decide her life for her!"

Clifton then rested his fat hand on Ian's shoulder and gave him a wink before adding in a low voice, "You must invite me to Sheri's wedding."

Ian finally relaxed his eyebrows and seemed to be in a better mood.

Nasir was surprised to see the change in expression on Ian's face. However, he didn't let it show. He turned to look at Trevor, only to find that the latter was smiling. It seemed that Trevor had expected this turn of events.

Nasir asked in a low voice, "Dragon, were you aware that they know each other?"

Trevor smiled.

Of course, he knew that Clifton and Ian had a good relationship. Last time when Nasir took Trevor to Ian's house, Clifton was there too.

Trevor didn't feel like explain anything now and he just said with a mysterious smile, "Don't forget that I'm from a top secret law enforcement agency. Such insignificant information is very easy for me to find out."

Meanwhile, Clifton was very eloquent by nature, and at the moment, he was acting as a lobbyist.

Ian looked more and more uncertain as to what to do at this point. He pulled out another cigarette and then said impatiently, "All right. Nasir, I now know you are sincere. But don't rejoice too soon. It's up to Sheri whether she will forgive you or not."

After saying that, Ian stood up and stubbed out the cigarette. He then walked upstairs and said without turning back, "Wait here. I'll go ask Sheri to come see you."

Nasir stood up from the sofa excitedly.

After a while, the noise of rushing footsteps came from the stairs.

A faint smile appeared on Trevor's face. He was about to say something to Nasir, but it seemed that Nasir had Nasir knew what he had to do. He quickly took the crystal necklace from Clifton and walked up to Sheri.

"Sheri, I'm here for you. I was so busy with work that I ignored your feelings. I promise, I only love you!"

He raised the crystal necklace and added sincerely, "Sheri, would you let me put this necklace around your neck?"

Sheri had argued with Nasir on a whim. Seeing that Nasir had come to apologize sincerely, she felt that her anger dissipated.

Tears welled up in her eyes and she nodded earnestly, allowing Nasir to put the crystal necklace around her neck.

Watching this, Clifton laughed and applauded.

With a smile, Trevor also clapped and congratulated the couple on their reconciliation.

The atmosphere in the hall was romantic. However, Trevor couldn't help but sigh inwardly.

He hoped that when he finally faced Luisa with his real identity, she would be just as happy.
