When Margaret spoke again, her tone was very serious.

"The attack happened in the arcade, but the surveillance camera there have been destroyed. Our team of analysts carried out an analysis of what must have happened there based on the surrounding surveillance videos and the live recording. The battle between the two sides was very fierce. Ape is probably dead."

Trevor quickly checked the video he received by e-mail.

The video showed Gunter and Rock rushing into the arcade, followed by a group of gangsters with guns in their hands.

After a short silence, Trevor asked, "Is there any more accurate information? Members of Mobius are not ordinary people. They are not only cruel and ruthless, but are also extremely skilled in fighting. They are much more powerful than simple soldiers. I think there are chances that Ape is still alive."

Margaret sighed and replied helplessly, "Klein's tactical team in Dreles has not yet arrived on the scene, so no one has confirmed Ape's death for sure. But keep in mind that even if they are endowed with extraordinary combat skills and are exceptionally strong, they are not indestructible."

Trevor quickly understood what Margaret meant.

The video showed an explosion in the arcade. In a split second, the arcade was transformed into a gigantic ember with thick smoke rising from it and flames sweeping everything in their path.

It didn't matter how powerful and physical Ape was in this situation. He couldn't survive an explosion.

Ape was probably dead. He had certainly perished in the flames.

Trevor's eyes turned cold.

As he suspected, the messages he had just received were in fact traps.

Gunter and Rock disregarded the internal rules of Mobius and killed Ape.

And to prevent the news from spreading, they planned to kill Raven to silence him.

They were the ones who had texted Trevor on Ape's phone to lure Raven to the rented house and kill him.

Staring at the burning arcade in the video, Trevor couldn't help cursing, "These guys are crazy!"

No wonder Trevor only got eighty million dollars after he asked Ape for more money.

Gunter had to spend a lot of money to pretend to be a rich man and Trevor even doubted that the eighty million all came solely from Gunter's pocket. Maybe Rock had contributed to it too.

Thinking of that, Trevor sneered and murmured to himself, "Wow, they have gone to great lengths just to deceive me."

If it was the real Raven who received the message, he would have probably fallen into the trap.

But Gunter and Rock didn't know that there was a powerful intelligence agency that backed Trevor up.

They knew about the attack of the arcade as well as the murder of Ape.

Trevor suddenly came up with an idea and squinted slightly.

He had promised to rescue Ape before, and that definitely had nothing to do with the money.

If Ape, Gunter and Rock died during the mission, it was very likely that other members of Mobius would be sent to continue the mission.

Trevor came to the conclusion that it was better to let the three members of Mobius he knew too well to continue their activities than have some strangers show up at this point.

However, the situation now was different.

Gunter and Rock had broken the rules of Mobius by killing Ape. For Trevor, it was a rare chance, a chance to help Luisa get rid of the threat from Mobius.

With a confident smile, Trevor started the engine.

"It's risky to walk into their trap without any backup, but this is a chance to defeat them all. It's definitely worth it!"

The engine roared as he turned the ignition.

"Luisa, wait for me. We will meet soon."
