

Chapter 1624 Prescott's Punishment

---

Trevor's heart drummed inside his chest. He was about to read more details, but that was when he heard footsteps coming closer.

His eyes widened. He didn't expect those guards to come back so soon.

It would be difficult for him to escape if they were to come back to their posts.

Not to mention, if they found out that someone had sneaked into the room, the consequences would be dire.

Trevor clenched his jaw. His heart was pounding and his palms were sweating.

He immediately put down the document and hid under the cabinet, trying his best to hold his breath.

As the footsteps went closer and closer, Trevor sensed that something was wrong.

It didn't sound like the footsteps of two people. But rather, three.

Eventually, he heard a familiar voice. It was Prescott.

"Damn it! I can't believe the patrol team can be so aggressive! They even asked us to clean the building for a whole month!" Prescott cursed.

Trevor's eyes widened in surprise. Then, he took a deep breath and stood up from under the cabinet.

They weren't guards, so Trevor didn't have to worry about them. He just carefully listened to their conversation.

At that point, Trevor was ready to leave the room after Prescott and the other two men left.

The guards were about to return, after all.

"God fucking damn it!" Prescott continued cursing. "We're full members of Mobius. How dare that bastard do this to us?"

"Stop whining," one of his men said helplessly. "If you didn't have a good relationship with Midnight, the punishment would've been much harsher than this."

Another one of his men nodded in agreement. "We're only going to clean the building for a month. How bad can that be?"

Prescott clenched his jaw and scoffed. "It's just weird. Why did the patrol team go there? If they came a little later, I would have beaten Raven to death!"

The other two gave him an awkward smile.

Prescott truly thought he had knocked down Raven with his last blow. The more he thought about it, the angrier he became.

Trevor heard everything they said from inside the room.

After a few moments, Prescott looked at his men. "Let's go to the bathroom. Just leave the cleaning tools here. We have to clean here later."

With that, the three of them went away.

After making sure that no one was around, Trevor carefully opened the door and left the room.

When he turned around, he saw the bucket, duster cloth, and other cleaning tools that Prescott left. The bucket was filled with water.

Trevor looked back at the cabinet. He then shifted his gaze to the door of the room before turning to the bucket beside the door.

He grinned.

He had been quite nervous a few moments ago, and it caused his hands to sweat uncontrollably. He figured that might leave some clues.

But when he saw the bucket of water outside the room, he thought he could make good use of it to eliminate the possible traces of fingerprints.

Should he wipe the doorknob with a duster cloth?

Of course, not. Trevor wouldn't want to waste any time.

Prescott and his men—as well as the two guards—could return at any time.

Eventually, Trevor came up with a solution, causing him to smile from ear to ear.

Chapter 1625 The Secret Of The Headquarters

Upon returning from the bathroom, Prescott was outraged to find a chaotic scene and couldn't resist letting out a string of curses.

"Damn it! Who knocked over the bucket! Shit! Water's flooding into the room! Who did this? Did one of you accidentally kick it?"

As he approached the room, he noticed a fallen bucket and water spilled all over the floor. A significant amount of water had seeped into the room.

Naturally, the other two wouldn't admit to any wrongdoing. It wasn't their fault.

The three of them were in a foul mood and quickly started arguing.

Finally, Prescott clenched his teeth and declared, "Alright. Regardless of who's responsible, we've been assigned to clean this building. If we don't handle this mess, we'll definitely face consequences."

Left with no choice, the three reluctantly began to clean up the water on the floor.

After drying the room's damp floor, they left swiftly, filled with resentment.

Trevor stood at the corner of the corridor, smiling as he watched the entire process unfold.

It was Trevor who had spilled the bucket.

To thoroughly erase any traces he might have left in the room, he deliberately caused the spill, leaving the three of them to deal with the aftermath.

As expected, Prescott wouldn't take the blame. Despite his anger, he cleaned the mess, inadvertently helping Trevor cover his tracks.

Now, even if someone discovered something amiss and investigated further, they would only find Prescott and likely attribute it to an accident.

With his hands in his pockets, Trevor prepared to exit the building.

As he walked to the first floor of the building, he caught a glimpse of a person exuding a menacing presence.

The instant Trevor laid eyes on the person, his muscles tensed up.

Instinctively, he deduced the man was a formidable, ruthless, and dangerous criminal.

Even just catching a glimpse of the man's back, Trevor couldn't help but feel uneasy.

To avoid detection, Trevor didn't dare look directly at the man, but observed him from the corner of his eye.

Trevor went unnoticed by the man who swiftly made his way to the end of the first-floor corridor.

Then the man vanished into thin air.

Trevor frowned and glanced to the side, where he spotted a concealed pathway.

At the end of the concealed corridor lay an entrance to an underground area.

The staircase leading to the underground space was located at the far end of the corridor, far away from the elevator and the upper floors. Its appearance was dark and mysterious.

Trevor looked around, finding it odd.

Six members were stationed around the entrance to the underground passage, outnumbering the guards at the reference room.

What could be so valuable in that secret passage that Mobius needed to assign six official members to guard it?

Trevor didn't linger, continuing toward the building's glass door.

The imposing figure left Trevor deeply concerned, and he was intrigued by the mysterious underground passage.

However, with the six formidable members on high alert, it was clear that Trevor couldn't easily infiltrate the area.

He mentally noted these observations, hoping for an opportunity to uncover the truth in the future.

He left the building with an emotionless face through the glass door.

He had gathered a lot of valuable information during this risky infiltration of Mobius's headquarters, making the danger well worth it.

Chapter 1626 Criminalistics

Trevor left Mobius' headquarters in the night and got as far away as possible.

It wasn't until Trevor could barely see the outlines of the building that he finally stopped. He couldn't hold back his excitement any longer and waved his arms enthusiastically.

"Great!" Trevor exclaimed.

Trevor could ignore the passage at the end of the corridor on the first floor for the time being.

The greatest accomplishment he had from entering the building was what he found in the reference room.

Trevor had finally found substantial information about the man with a mole on his nose. That man's code name was Vulture.

He had learned that Vulture was the warden of Mobius' hidden prison in Glareder.

Trevor was so excited that his heart was beating fast.

Of course, he was disappointed that he hadn't found where the prison was. But now that he had known Vulture's identity, all Trevor needed to do was to find him and he would have a great chance of saving his grandfather and father.

Trevor returned to his hotel immediately and thought the matter over in his room.

If he had to find Vulture, his starting point would be the second-hand phone.

Trevor had the feeling that Vulture was the previous owner of this mobile phone. That actually explained why he was featured in the sex videos on the mobile phone.

So, the only clue Trevor had at present was the videos.

Trevor coughed and licked his lips.

In order to avoid any embarrassing situation, Trevor locked the door of his room. He didn't want Patrice to suddenly walk in and find him watching an erotic video. That would cause a serious misunderstanding.

After taking all precautionary measures, Trevor finally played the videos.

The erotic images that flashed before his eyes and the moans of the couple in the screen made Trevor blush and his heart beat fast.

Trevor couldn't help thinking of Luisa at this moment.

He was getting really excited suddenly.

Trevor had to pat his thigh hard to calm himself down.

It was not the time to fantasize about Luisa.

The pain on his thigh quickly sobered Trevor up and he tried his best to concentrate and find some clues. Perhaps there was something peculiar about the environment where the video was taped.

Some of the scenes in the video were shot in a fixed position. It was therefore very likely that the mobile phone had been installed on a telephone stand or placed on a table to film.

Videos shot from a fixed position could provide little information.

Trevor watched the videos several times and sorted out some basic information.

Judging from the high-end decoration, the videos must have been shot in a duplex apartment. He wasn't sure, however, whether the apartment was decorated by the developer or Vulture.

The man and woman in the videos were the same, which could mean that the woman in the video was Vulture's partner.

Trevor had learned a lot from Bradly, including criminalistics.

Trevor could extract valuable information from the videos and then combine with the information he got from the reference room. Perhaps he could find Vulture's hiding place this way.

Soon, Trevor found out something very important.

There was a video which Vulture took while holding the mobile phone in his hand.

The movements of the camera accidentally caught the scenery outside the window.

Trevor immediately paused the video and carefully observed the landscape on the screen. Here again, he found some pretty useful information.

He could spot out the billboard of Hammurabi Hotel. Judging from the video frame, Trevor could tell the video had been shot about 400 meters to the south of the hotel. That meant the video was shot in the same block Trevor was.

Judging from the angle of the video, the room where it was shot should be on the sixth or seventh floor.

Trevor was shocked and he immediately stood up and drew the curtain to observe the scenery outside.

There was only one such complex that was located about 400 meters south of Hammurabi Hotel.

He was almost certain of his guess.

It was Ploy Apartment Complex!
