

Chapter 1692 A Good Act

Elwood was really worthy to be the head of the Sanderson family.

The moment he saw the silver needle Trevor had raised in the air, his expression changed. However, he quickly put back his normal look.

If Trevor hadn't been standing very close to his grandfather and watched the old man's every expression carefully, he might not have noticed the fleeting change.

Elwood had recognized him!

Noticing that his grandfather had sensed something, Trevor continued to hint, pointing at the silver needle.

"Elwood, I learned acupuncture from an expert. With my skills, I can cure people, but also torture people in a way that they'll beg to die. If you don't want to suffer, you'd better sign the documents. Otherwise, you will beg me to kill you very soon."

These words sounded like a real threat in Midnight's ears.

But it was a coded language between Trevor and Elwood and the old man understood it perfectly.

Elwood blinked several times. He sensed that the man in front of him was most likely his grandson, Trevor.

Although Elwood had guessed Trevor's identity, he had to continue this play, or he would not only hurt himself, but also his dear grandson.

Elwood might be old and weak, but he had incredible acting skills. He pretended to be angry and shouted, "Do you think I'll be scared of a mere silver needle? Just bring it on. You really think your funny threats would make me sign the documents? Dream on!"

Trevor played along, he too pretending to be angry, and said, "If I were you I won't underestimate this silver needle. Even Mobius toughest killers have to kneel down and beg for mercy in less than five seconds after facing my needle. You are just an old man. Do you want to die here under torture?"

Elwood kept on acting and kept a straight face.

"Even if you kill me, I won't sign them. I know my destroying grandson will come here sooner or later and destroy this Mobius shit!"

With the silver needle in his hand, Trevor stepped forward and said, "Well, since you insist, I'll let you have a taste of my skills. You'll soon know that there are things way worse than death."

Midnight who was closely watching the scene, panicked. It was true that he asked Trevor to torture Elwood, but what he wanted was for Elwood to sign the document. As long as he signed it, everything would be fine. But if Elwood died without having signed the documents, Midnight was afraid that he would be in big trouble.

He quickly reminded Trevor in a low voice, "Raven, don't kill him. He is still useful."

Trevor pretended to be annoyed by Midnight and replied fiercely, "I know what I'm doing."

What Midnight didn't know was that his fear had encouraged the two to keep on acting.

Trevor then turned back to the old man and began to prick him with the silver needle. He seemed to be doing the same thing he did when he tortured Boar just now. Upon seeing that, Midnight's fear grew as he wondered if Elwood could bear it.

"Ah!" Elwood let out a scream as if he was in immense pain.

Trevor was actually treating his grandfather.

Elwood had been Mobius' prisoner for a long time, so he had naturally developed a lot of health problems. Trevor's treatment was effective, and the old man's body began to slowly recover.

Elwood felt so much better now and he really enjoyed it. However, he didn't show it and instead, his face was ferocious and his body was curled up. He was sweating profusely, which was just a tool for him to show he was in pain.

The old man kept screaming on top of his lungs. Everyone present was really convinced that Elwood was suffering unspeakable pain.

Little did they all know that this was just an act by the old man and his grandson.

Trevor knew there was no certainty this trick would work next time, so he decided to be the bad guy and said fiercely, "Elwood, Mr. Midnight asked me to take it easy on you. If you still refuse to sign them, I won't show you any more mercy."

After saying that, Trevor winked at Midnight, to show he was just threatening Elwood.

Midnight got Trevor's hint and he felt reassured. He was also satisfied with Raven's performance and even wanted to poach him from the Wolf faction into his group.

Seeing that his grandfather was silent, Trevor grabbed one of the documents and said meaningfully, "You have to sign at least one document today, or you can never walk out of the room alive."

Elwood immediately understood what Trevor meant. He praised his grandson's intelligence in his heart. Finally, the old man agreed to sign a less important document, which brought an end to the interrogation.

The old man and his grandson looked at each other and both were secretly very happy. They knew that by signing a random document, Elwood would get a respite. Sooner or later, he would be able to escape from the imprisonment.