

Chapter 1746 The Real Identity Of The Captain

Seeing the dangerous situation on the ship, Trevor became more alert and carefully observed the movements of the crew.

He quickly noticed something wrong with them.

They looked fierce and they whispered to each other from time to time, as if they were plotting something.

Trevor's face became gloomier.

Suddenly, the captain walked towards the restroom.

Trevor quietly followed the captain, pretending to go to the restroom as well.

On the way, he glanced at the captain and discovered that there was something hanging from his waistband.

It was... A pistol!

Trevor was now firmly convinced that the captain was up to something.

Now that he knew his guess was right, he looked away and went back to the deck as if nothing had happened.

On the deck, Trevor walked to Rupert.

Rupert still had a relaxed and cheerful expression, completely unaware of the danger lurking on the ship.

Trevor walked up to him and whispered, "There is something wrong with the ship you found! You stay here and keep an eye on the crew. I will call Jasmine and ask her to send reinforcements directly to the town where we will be docking."

The smile on Rupert's face suddenly vanished. He looked at the crew members around and also felt something was wrong. He panicked.

How careless he had been! Mobius heavily guarded the harbor and did not let anyone in or out of Glareder. And yet there was a ship offering to help them escape the city. It was obvious that this crew had ulterior motives. The crew either intended to rob them or even kill them.

Rupert was nervous and restless. He regretted so much having been so careless. Now, he had put everyone in danger.

He took a deep breath and asked Trevor in a low voice, "Do you think there's a chance your intuition is wrong?"

Before Trevor could answer, the captain happened to come out of the restroom at that time, and he saw the odd look on Rupert's face.

The captain had a lot theft and murder missions under his belt, so he immediately realized that the plan might have been discovered!

His eyes turned fierce and he suddenly pulled out the pistol hidden at his waistband and shot to the sky.

A loud bang pierced the air. Everyone was startled by the sudden gunshot.

The captain growled, "Everyone! Hands up! If you don't want to die, stay in the cabin!"

As soon as the gunshot sounded, the other crew members rushed over and surrounded the association members.

Rupert looked at the captain with a serious look and asked sternly, "What do you want to do? Don't you want the balance?"

The captain and the crew burst into laughter upon hearing Rupert's words. Then, the captain said with a cold laughter, "Ha-ha! Are you still living in your dream? You can keep the balance and instead choose a coffin for yourself! We are from the Black Gold Union! We will sell your organs!"

Rupert's heart skipped a beat and his legs wobbled upon hearing that. He staggered back and stammered in disbelief, "Didn't Black Gold Union assemble all its strength to attack Mobius? Why are you here?"

The captain sneered.

"Why would we choose to fight Mobius when we can be making money instead? Crocodile is stupid, and I'm not going to die with him in such a hopeless fight! I'd rather make money!"

Up until now, the association members had been in high spirits, thinking that they had finally left the city of sin.

They hadn't expected to run into Glareder's scum again. Now, their faces changed with fear.

In fact, it was precisely because they had sought protection from the Black Gold Union that their whereabouts were discovered.

The captain and his men were well prepared.

While everyone was in panic, Trevor looked calm. He even showed a faint smile.

Now that he knew who these men disguised as sailors were, Trevor was relieved.

A few ordinary members of the Black Gold Union were not a threat to him.

The only thing that Trevor was concerned about was the pistol.

Trevor's calm expression stood out from all the panicked faces of the crowd and it instantly caught the captain's attention!
