Having gained their compliance, Trevor proceeded to inquire about the information he sought.

Fixing his gaze on Cheetah, he issued a calm order. "Cheetah, tell me about the Singh Group."

Cheetah swallowed nervously, making no attempt to hide it. He looked serious and spoke with honesty.

"Most of the Singh Group's assets are under our control. Currently, only a core real estate subsidiary, Chantil Inc., remains beyond our grasp, but we expect to take over that soon too! We already have control over their other industries, and we even assisted in Gunter's killing of Tucker."

Trevor couldn't hide his surprise but feigned composure, asking in a casual manner, "Is Tucker truly dead?"

Cheetah sneered, his tone icy, "Indeed, he's dead! A man who can betray the eldest son of the Sanderson family will inevitably betray Mobius in the end! He got what he deserved at the hands of Gunter."

However, Trevor harbored doubts about Cheetah's claim.

Tucker was cunning as a fox. His demise seemed too easy to believe.

Choosing not to delve further into Tucker's fate to avoid raising suspicion, Trevor shifted his focus back to the real estate company.

"Tell me more about Chantil Inc. Provide as many details as you can."

Cheetah paused briefly before continuing, "The CEO position of the Singh Group is still vacant. Collen, Tucker's grandson and the vice general manager of the group, is currently vying for this position. I've also supported a compliant general manager's bid for the role with my shares. Our people are well-placed within the company. If all goes smoothly, that position will soon be under our control."

Trevor absorbed the information thoughtfully, remaining silent as he processed the details.

Cheetah's gaze locked onto Trevor, misunderstanding his intentions. With clenched teeth, he reluctantly spoke. "Deputy leader, if you're interested in the Singh Group, I'll hand over all my shares to you!"

Trevor was taken aback, thinking to himself.

In Mobius, power commands respect indeed. I didn't even ask for it, yet my subordinate offers me such a substantial gift.

It was something that Mobius had obtained through its numerous sinister doings. Trevor couldn't help but smile, nodding as he graciously accepted the offering.

Bear, on the other hand, felt torn. The shares were the result of his and Cheetah's joint efforts, and giving them away for nothing left him uneasy. However, he didn't dare to defy Trevor's authority.

Sensing their inner conflict, Trevor decided to play with their expectations, making them believe they would receive some benefits in return.

In a confident and boisterous tone, Trevor declared, "During my visit to Zayden, I was entrusted with a mission by our leader, Lone Wolf. He wants us to eliminate the members of the Bat faction in Zayden and seize control of the shares they had snatched from the Sanderson family. Rest assured, you both will reap substantial rewards from this endeavor."

The news of an internal struggle within Zayden's criminal factions left both Cheetah and Bear in shock. Wiping out all members of the Bat faction in a city was no easy feat!

The two of them considered voicing their concerns but ultimately decided against it.

They had been longing for the shares of the Sanderson family for quite some time now!

Trevor didn't feel the need to explain any further, opting to give clear instructions instead.

"Cheetah, transfer the shares of Chantil Inc. to me as soon as possible, and provide me with the phone number of the general manager you supported in the competition."
