

Chapter 1769 Top-Down Exploits

Jonah's eyes widened in shock.

He had hired the gang to kill Raven. How could it turn out to be harming their boss's boss?

How did things end up spiraling into this dangerous situation?

Trevor glanced at Jonah's men and sneered, "You came here with Jonah. Are you here to make trouble for me?"

The men exchanged uneasy glances, and none of them dared to speak up.

Crossing his arms, Trevor teased, "I recall you all beating him up before. Why are you standing with him now?"

Seeing that the Black Bear members were obedient to Trevor, Jonah's men quickly grasped the situation and waved their hands, denying, "We're here to beat him up! We're definitely not with him!"

Trevor raised an eyebrow and smiled without saying a word.

These hooligans weren't fools. They understood Trevor's unspoken message and sided with him to beat Jonah without hesitation, showing even more ruthlessness than the Black Bear members.

Jonah endured the merciless beating, tears streaming down his face. His body was covered in bruises, and he could hardly move.

Desperate to stop the violence, he decided to confess everything.

"Stop it, please! Let me go! It was Collen who asked me to do this! He offered me ten million to hire a gang and assassinate you!"

Cobra was stunned and exclaimed angrily, "Ten million? Damn it! I only got two million and five hundred thousand!"

As he prepared to strike Jonah again, Jonah quickly pointed at Roosevelt and clarified, "I only took five million! I gave the remaining five million to that brat! I'll transfer it to you as soon as I get back!"

Hearing that Jonah had betrayed him, Roosevelt rushed forward and kicked him. Angriily, he retorted, "You're still lying there! Do you think I would dare to take two million and five hundred thousand? Hand it over now!"

While saying that, Roosevelt couldn't help but sigh in his heart, "This is really an unfair distribution! I only got a quarter of the total!"

Cobra's face darkened. He didn't believe Jonah's words at all.

Jonah not only caused all the trouble but also took a large portion of the money that was supposed to go to them!

The gang members did the hardest work but received the least amount of money!

Unable to contain his anger, Cobra kicked Jonah twice more.

Trevor's presence restrained Cobra, or else he would have tortured Jonah without any restraint, and it wouldn't have been just a few kicks.

Jonah gave up entirely, not daring to argue about the remaining two million and five hundred thousand.

With a trembling voice, he took out his bank card from his pocket and pleaded, "Please stop! I'll make it up to you! The password is written on the back of the bank card."

Cobra eyed the card, tempted, but he wasn't the one with the final say. He cautiously looked at Trevor, licking his lips.

However, Trevor had no interest in a few million dollars.

Trevor understood what Cobra was thinking.

With a slight curve of his mouth, Trevor nodded and said casually, "Take it."

Cobra was elated.

From that moment on, Cobra held genuine respect for Trevor.

Trevor didn't pay much attention to the small amount of money, so he didn't bother to argue with a gangster over it. His main focus was still on dealing with Collen.

He dismissed the men brought by Roosevelt and Jonah and issued a warning. "Roosevelt, take your men and leave. Don't do such foolish things again. And stay away from the orphanage. If I catch you there again, today's leniency won't repeat itself!"

They didn't dare to defy him and quickly nodded before running away, fearful of potential consequences.

Trevor turned his gaze back to Jonah and asked in a low voice, "Tell me, where is Collen now?"

With Cobra and the other members closing in, cracking their fists, they effectively intimidated Jonah.

Jonah broke out in a cold sweat and confessed, "He must be at home! I'll take you to him right now!"

With a satisfied nod, Trevor resolved to make Collen suffer for his attempt to hire someone to kill him.

He planned to repay Collen's "kindness" in kind, even if he didn't personally show up to confront him.
