

Chapter 1770 | Am Still Inside

Trevor decided to keep only Cobra with him and dismissed the other members of the Black Bear.

Guided by Jonah, Trevor and Cobra stealthily made their way into Collen's villa.

Cobra had been somewhat worried, knowing that this action would cause trouble for Collen. After much hesitation, he whispered to Trevor, "Boss, if we attack Collen, won't it cause trouble for the Black Bear? The Singh Group is one of the leading companies in Zayden, after all."

Trevor smiled and asked, "If we don't do it ourselves, how will he know it's connected to us? I have a task for you. Find me a sack."

Hearing this, both Cobra and Jonah were perplexed.

Trevor then turned to Jonah and said, "I'll give you the sack later. You can teach Collen a lesson. Give him a good beating, or I'll tell him that you took half of the money he paid to the gang."

Jonah was stunned, finding it hard to believe what he just heard.

How could he do such a thing?

Swallowing hard, Jonah felt conflicted and murmured, unable to form a coherent response.

Observing Jonah's hesitation, Trevor surmised that he had many misgivings.

Trying to persuade him, Trevor said, "Think about it. If it wasn't for Collen's order, you wouldn't have been beaten today, would you? And did he ever treat you like a human being? Remember how he humiliated you at the orphanage gate that day."

Jonah continued to avoid eye contact with Trevor, even though he knew deep down that Trevor's words held truth.

The burden of attacking Collen weighed heavily on Jonah's conscience.

He was filled with hesitation.

Trevor, undeterred, continued to persuade the unresponsive Jonah with a reassuring smile, "You've worked wholeheartedly for Collen all this time, but he's never treated you as a human being! Don't you want to stand up for yourself? Seek revenge for all he's put you through. Besides, he won't even recognize you with the sack over him. What are you afraid of?"

Cobra found the sack and joined in the persuasion, threatening, "If you go and teach Collen a lesson, we'll let you off for taking the larger share of the money that was supposed to be ours. Otherwise, my fellow members will get even with you!"

With his words echoing Trevor's, Cobra handed the sack to Jonah.

The combined efforts of Trevor and Cobra finally persuaded Jonah. His expression turned more determined, and he stared at the sack in his hand, thinking to himself. Collen, you brought this upon yourself. You deserve it!

After the discussion, Jonah, Trevor, and Cobra hid in the garage of Collen's villa, waiting for the right moment.

Before long, an orange Lamborghini pulled into the garage.

Collen casually stepped out of the driver's seat.

He was humming a tune, clearly in a good mood.

Suddenly, the grey sack was thrown over Collen, covering him entirely.

As the sack covered Collen's head, darkness engulfed his vision.

Panicking, he shouted, "Who is it?! I'm Collen from the Singh Group. Get out of here if you don't want to die!"

The only response he received was a barrage of punches.

Jonah, initially timid, confirmed that Collen couldn't recognize him and mustered all his strength to strike him.

The hollow iron rod repeatedly hit Collen's body, creating dull thudding sounds.

Begging for mercy, Collen cried out in severe pain, "Stop it! Please stop it! How much do you want?! I'm very rich!"

But Jonah remained relentless, ignoring his pleas. His face flushed with anger as he vented the pent-up grievances he had endured for days.

Meanwhile, Trevor watched the chaotic scene unfold, trying to stifle his laughter.

Satisfied with the outcome, Trevor left Collen's villa with Cobra, ready to make their exit.

As Jonah continued to strike Collen, he noticed Trevor and Cobra about to climb over the wall to leave. Panic struck him when he realized he couldn't climb the wall himself.

Years of indulgence in drinking and neglecting exercise had taken a toll on Jonah's physical abilities, and he couldn't escape over the wall.

If Jonah chose to leave through the route they had sneaked in, he would have to go around a large circle, which wouldn't allow him to escape without being discovered by Collen.

Realizing this predicament, Jonah lowered his voice and said in a sad tone, "I'm still inside!"

Trevor turned to look at Jonah, grinning mischievously, and said slowly, "You can figure it out by yourself."