

Chapter 1780 Who Was Dying

Collen's mood soared with satisfaction after he believed he successfully framed Trevor. Brimming with confidence, he made his way back to Chantil Inc., his steps lighter and his spirits higher than before.

As Trevor was about to discuss the current situation with Mateo, he coincidentally bumped into Collen again.

This time, Collen's confidence had grown exponentially.

He took the initiative to taunt Trevor.

"Hey, Raven, it looks like your days are numbered. Why bother coming to the company? You should follow me and help me keep a close eye on Mateo's every move. What do you think?"

Trevor responded with a scornful sneer, "I think it's you who will meet your downfall soon. My advice to you is to save your energy. You can't even protect yourself, yet you continue to spew nonsense."

Thinking Trevor was referring to the competition for the presidency, Collen spoke with unwavering confidence.

"Do you really believe Mateo stands a chance of becoming the president?"

Trevor sneered again, "Or what? Do you think someone like you could be a better choice?"

With a stern expression, Collen announced, "Truth be told, there are many people within the company who support me. And most importantly, the mayor is on my side! The special approval for the demolition will be issued soon. Tell me, how can Mateo possibly compete with me?"

Seeing Collen's assurance, Trevor fought back the urge to burst into laughter and jeered, "Does the mayor support you by having you arrested?"

Before Collen could retaliate, several policemen suddenly arrived at the scene, interrupting their confrontation.

A well-organized police team, armed and ready, surrounded Trevor and Collen.

The captain, with a grave expression, scrutinized Collen and addressed him in a deep voice, "You must be Collen, correct?"

Collen nodded and retorted, "Yes, yes, I am."

He winked at Trevor and taunted, "See, I told you that you're done for. The police are here to arrest you! I'll give you the last chance. Now, if you're smart, you might just listen to me, and I'll consider sparing you."

Trevor merely smiled faintly in response, saying nothing.

Growing increasingly furious at Trevor's defiance, Collen cursed, "Your refusal to seize this opportunity is why you'll end up in jail!"

He then turned to the police captain, displaying a self-satisfied expression, and pointed at Trevor, saying, "He is Raven! This guy is definitely a spy, right? You should take him away immediately!"

The policemen frowned, exchanged bewildered glances, and whispered among themselves, "What's wrong with this guy? Is there something off with his brain? Why is he talking nonsense?"

The police captain's face twitched in response to Collen's behavior. He motioned for the officers to stop their discussion and addressed Collen seriously, "Mr. Singh, please come with us."

Collen was momentarily stunned, his bravado crumbling as panic set in.

Stammering, he asked, "What? Where are we going?"

The police captain grimaced and patiently explained, "You'll be going to the police station for investigation."

Collen's shock and panic were evident as he waved his hand frantically and screamed, "Are you sure? What did I do? You should be catching him!"

With a sneer on his face, Trevor confidently approached Collen and taunted, "Who's the one facing trouble now? Embrace the investigation! I'm sure the police will arrange a nice, cozy individual cell just for you!"
