

Chapter 1781 Tucker Must Be Still Alive!

The police captain paid no attention to Collen's words and calmly reached for his handcuffs, ready to make an arrest.

Collen put up a fierce struggle and cried out, "Help! The police are arresting people without cause! They're breaking the law!"

The captain grew increasingly irritated by Collen's repeated resistance. He drew his baton and forcefully struck Collen's abdomen.

In a cold tone, he asserted, "You're resisting law enforcement. I have the right to use force to subdue you! If you persist in causing trouble, I won't hesitate to subdue you completely and take you in! Otherwise, I'll add 'assaulting an officer' to your charges!"

Despite the captain's warning, Collen remained defiant. He glared at the captain and retorted, "Just because you're the police, you think you're above the law? You can't arrest me without valid reason!"

The captain snorted and scolded, "You won't be so defiant when reality hits you! We've traced multiple significant financial transactions between your account and Chantil Inc. You're suspected of embezzlement and tax evasion, so you're coming with us for investigation!"

Collen's face turned pale in an instant. He stood there, speechless and in disbelief.

He had always believed he was destined to become the CEO of Singh Group, so he was treating Chantil Inc. as his personal piggy bank.

Collen had been embezzling funds through Jeanette, but had never taken it seriously. But now, the police informed him that he had to pay taxes for his own money?

With wide eyes and a sense of disbelief, he couldn't fathom it.

He shouted, "This money is mine! None of your business, you corrupt policemen! I'm reporting you!"

Originally, it was only the police captain who took out his baton, but when

Collen made that defiant remark, several other policemen also brandished their batons, glaring at him!

Collen's face turned pale with fear, and he didn't dare to utter another word, worried that the police might escalate to using their pistols.

Eventually, amidst the gaze of onlookers, Collen was dragged into a police car.

The sight of Collen being taken away from the company sparked a lot of discussion among the public, with many people speculating about what he might have done.

Trevor couldn't help but smile as he watched Collen's arrest.

He firmly believed that Collen deserved it.

Afterward, Trevor brushed the matter aside and made his way to the general manager's office.

As soon as Mateo saw Trevor, he greeted him with joy, "The purchase of the chief financial officer's shares went smoothly! He was so disheartened that he sold his shares well below market price and even relinquished his position to you."

Trevor's face lit up with happiness. He smiled and said, "Once I acquire a few more shares, I'll become the largest shareholder!"

However, Mateo's expression turned slightly strained.

"I've already approached several small shareholders to buy their shares. However, for some reason, they suddenly changed their minds and refused to sell. After I tried to persuade and coerce them, one person revealed that the trust fund threatened them not to sell the shares!"

Trevor narrowed his eyes.

He became certain that Tucker was still alive!

Moreover, it seemed highly likely that Tucker had been secretly orchestrating various affairs within the Singh Group through the trust fund.

This would also explain why, right after Trevor's purchase of the chief financial officer's shares, the other shareholders were promptly threatened.

Trevor sneered.

Tucker, you can't remain calm for much longer! The trust fund couldn't have reacted that swiftly without you interfering! In the end, you will lose to me!

Tucker's unexpected reappearance had completely disrupted the original plan, leading to a sudden and dramatic shift in the situation.

Remaining calm, Trevor pondered the situation.

He began devising a new strategy after much contemplation.
