

Chapter 1787 I Have Something To Say

After signing the contract, Collen was in high spirits.

"If you don't mind, you all can move out now. I'm going to contact the demolition crew and I would like to expedite the implementation of the project. I will invite all the senior executives of the Group to visit," Collen said.

Trevor chuckled to himself when he heard Collen's words.

He turned to look at the director and Cordell and said, "Pack your belongings and move to the hotel for now."

Neither the director nor Cordell understood Trevor's plan, but they still went along with it.

As a matter of fact, Trevor had put his plan into place after he confirmed that Tucker was using the trust fund to manipulate the company.

He ordered Mateo to contact the Film and Television company in Corden, and the overlooking Restaurant, the Central Hospital, and Newmere Cosmetics in Dreles.

These were Trevor's and Luisa's properties.

Then he transferred a large sum of money from Singh Group under the guise of cooperation and investment.

Initially, it was a bit challenging to execute the transfers, but after Trevor assumed the role of CFO, the operation became more convenient.

As things stood now, Trevor had almost depleted the cash flow of the Singh Group.

Unfortunately for Collen, he was unaware that Singh Group couldn't afford much money at the moment. He was so immersed in his 'success' that he didn't question anything.

Now that he had Trevor's 'cooperation', he wanted to demolish the orphanage as soon as possible.

He even invited Trevor to stay behind and watch the demolition.

"Don't leave so quickly. Stay and watch the demolition with the senior executives of the Group," he said.

They might have come to an agreement on the orphanage, but he still held a grudge against Trevor.

The only reason he invited Trevor to watch the demolition was so that he could fire him in front of everyone.

Doing so would greatly damage the general manager's prestige.

Trevor saw through Collen's intentions, however, he wanted to see how Collen could fire him seeing as he was a shareholder.

His smile widened and he agreed, "Okay!"

He would wait until Collen enacted his plan before he announced his identity as the second-largest shareholder of Singh Group.

Both men had different thoughts and plans.

The only thing they shared was the happy, boisterous laughter that came out of their mouths.

The demolition crew arrived in a formidable array.

Not long behind them were the senior executives.

They praised Collen one after the other.

"Mr. Singh, you are a talented young man. You easily won such a significant project. I believe you will soon become the CEO of Singh Group."

Collen smiled happily as they heaped praises in him. Occasionally, he glanced at Trevor and Mateo to gauge their reactions.

Finally, everyone was present.

Under Collen's command, the demolition crew knocked down the first wall.

The shattered bricks and stone created a large amount of dust that permeated the air.

Collen was greatly relieved when the wall fell.

Before the demolition crew could continue with their job, he asked everyone to gather for a group photo. "To commemorate the start of the project, I suggest that we all take a group photo together."

The crowd gathered and everyone touched up their appearances as much as possible for the photo.

But before the photographer could take the picture, Collen spoke again.

"Before we take the group photo, I want to ask you one thing. Since I won the amusement park project, am I the new CEO?"

Collen asked Mateo sharply.

The crowd looked at Mateo, waiting for his answer.

To their surprise, Mateo nodded and calmly announced, "After a discussion among senior executives, it's been decided that Collen Singh will assume the role of president of Singh Group from now on."

Collen was overjoyed with Mateo's announcement. Now, he was certain that he had reached the pinnacle of his life.

He glanced at Trevor, his happy smile morphing into a sneer.

"In that case, I have something to announce as the new president!" he said jokingly.
