

Chapter 1801 Another Gamble

Cheetah's voluntary request left both Trevor and Green Bat utterly astonished.

They couldn't believe what they were hearing!

The two of them stood apart as they exchanged bewildered glances.

Caught off guard, Green Bat didn't know how to react and resorted to taunting in an attempt to cover his bewilderment.

"Cheetah, you're actually willing to gamble with me? What a loser. How could you even think of betting with me?"

Cheetah's face flushed, and he was about to step forward to confront Green Bat.

However, he knew he needed Trevor's approval before taking any action.

So, Cheetah urged Trevor, "Sir, please let me try! I am confident that I will win this battle!"

Seeing how Cheetah was about to put the plan in jeopardy, Trevor squinted as he brainstormed a solution.

With a smile, he agreed to Cheetah's request, saying, "Go ahead, but before that, we must establish a bet."

Stepping forward, Trevor addressed Green Bat firmly, "Green Bat! I'm up for the gamble, but we need to set the terms! If Cheetah emerges victorious, you must hand over half of the shares of the Sanderson family! But if Cheetah loses, I'll offer my shares of the Singh Group in exchange!"

Upon hearing Trevor's bet, Cheetah froze in disbelief.

Was Raven crazy? Regardless of the outcome, the other party would have to hand over the shares. Only a fool would agree to such a lopsided bet!

Moreover, what worth did the shares of the sinking Singh Group hold? It seemed like a worthless exchange for Green Bat.

As suspicion clouded Cheetah's mind, Trevor noticed his unease and offered a reassuring pat on the shoulder.

With a smile, he praised, "You have done a commendable job lately. Despite not acquiring the Sanderson family's shares yet, you have managed to burden them with various concerns. They might not even realize that the Singh Group is on the verge of bankruptcy!"

Rarely receiving praise, Cheetah beamed with pride and nodded, responding, "Yes! Even if they disagree with our gambling, I'm confident I can seize all their property within a month!"

Observing Cheetah taking all the credit, Bear felt a tinge of unhappiness and muttered, "You're not the only one dealing with the Bat faction. Some of the credit should go to me as well!"

Trevor smiled, remaining silent, and merely observed Cheetah with a faint expression.

Without being praised, Bear felt a surge of emotions and saw Trevor's gaze fixed on Cheetah. He had made a judgment in his heart.

There must be a secret deal between Raven and Cheetah and they had concealed it from him!

Trevor's plan was unfolding as he intended. The relationship between Cheetah and Bear would crumble as Bear's suspicion grew stronger.

It was precisely what Trevor aimed for.

Immersed in the joy of his achievements, Cheetah failed to notice the shift in Bear's demeanor.

He believed he had made a significant contribution, and winning this bet would surely lead Raven to fulfill his request for a share division.

However, Green Bat had yet to agree.

Worry crept into Cheetah's voice as he asked, "Although Green Bat and his fellow may not be the sharpest, they won't agree to such an unfair bet, right?"

With a playful smile, Trevor waved his hand confidently and called out to Green Bat, "Have you made up your mind? I won the last bet! If you want to challenge me again, it's only fair to pay a price!"

In a subtle gesture, Trevor conveyed his intentions through his eyes.

Green Bat caught the hint and immediately understood what Trevor wanted.

Without hesitation, he agreed, "Deal! I'm in!"

As soon as Cheetah heard that, he was instantly overjoyed.

In his mind, Green Bat was merely a loser from their previous fight, no match for him at all.

Cheetah vividly remembered the last bout they had, considering it as Green Bat's true fighting capacity.

He taunted loudly across the distance, "Don't talk tough. Come here and get ready to be beaten up!"

Green Bat snorted and assumed a prepared stance, signaling the beginning of the fight.

Disdain was evident on Cheetah's face as he threw a heavy punch at Green Bat, his eyes filled with confidence.

However, reality hit him hard when he realized he had underestimated his opponent. With a slight turn sideways, Green Bat effortlessly dodged Cheetah's punch and, in turn, landed a powerful blow that stunned Cheetah!

The exchange happened in the blink of an eye!

After a moment of dizziness, Cheetah precariously rose from the ground and shouted, his expression mixed with surprise and frustration, "Damn it! You weren't that strong last time!"
