

Chapter 1806 Tucker's Demise

Running his hand through his hair, Trevor said, "There's a Mobius member detained here right now. Would that be big enough of a gift?"

Jasmine was quite surprised by the information.

"How did you do it? The police couldn't catch a Mobius member by themselves despite their force and weapons, but you did. How did you manage to detain that man in the police station? Your achievements continue to amaze and intrigue me!"

A triumphant smile escaped Trevor's lips as it was part of his plan to keep Jasmine curious.

"It's not even the main event. A much bigger surprise gift might come your way in a few days," Trevor teased.

Jasmine laughed. "Really, huh? Then I'll wait for it."

She ended the call and instructed Klein to prepare.

They would go to the police station in Zayden to take White Monkey, who was still confused as to how he got busted.

Meanwhile, Cheetah was at his wits' end.

He couldn't help but feel like Trevor would scold him again any time.

Trevor didn't give them any instructions and just let them devise a plan for their next move by themselves.

Not wanting to get another scolding, Cheetah thought hard.

After a while, he came up with an idea and hurriedly shared it with Bear.

"We should destroy Singh Group first. That way, we can pressure Collen to take the blame for White Monkey and get him out of prison. What do you think?"

Bear couldn't think of any plans, so he agreed to Cheetah's idea.

"Alright. Then what is our next move?"

Cheetah sneered.

It was in Bear's wildest dream to take his place. Bear even had to listen to his orders.

Bear leaned over and Cheetah continued, "We'll use the name of the Sanderson family to force the bank to pressure Singh Group to pay their debt.

Once they are pushed to the wall, we can force them to do whatever we want so that they can be spared."

The plan was quite feasible, so the two immediately carried it out.

As expected, the Singh Group cracked under pressure.

The company went bankrupt.

Soon, the news of the Singh Group declaring bankruptcy spread in the business community.

Inside his office, Collen was slumped to the floor, utterly dejected by what had just happened.

He grabbed his hair, murmuring in disbelief, "Is this really the end? After everything I've worked for, this is what happens? The company is finished off just like that?"

The door suddenly opened from the outside and revealed a few police officers.

Walking in, they held up their IDs and said, "Mr. Collen Singh, you have been tagged as guilty of commercial crimes. Please come with us to the police station for further investigation."

Collen almost broke down as the magnitude of this downfall dawned on him. His company was dying, and he was no longer the powerful and wealthy man he once was. He could be easily disposed of and thrown to jail without previous status!

As he felt so wronged, he suddenly remembered the part where his grandfather made him a puppet to all these conspiracies and denied the charges against him.

"No! I'm innocent. I didn't do anything, so I won't come with you. I was merely following my grandfather's orders. He was the one who partnered with a secret criminal organization to seize illegal properties, not me."

The police officers weighted his words, wanting to see if he was telling the truth.

After much thought, they averted their focus and left the office to get Tucker.

White-collar criminals were far more valuable than ordinary offenders.

Watching the scene secretly, Cheetah felt something was off and immediately informed Trevor about Tucker.

"Mr. Sanderson, we have an update. Singh Group has declared bankruptcy. We called the police on Collen, but he denied all charges and put the blame on his grandfather. The police are now on the way to arrest Tucker Singh, who turns out to be still alive! I worry he'll expose information about Mobius to the authorities to get back at us."

Trevor was also stunned by the news.

Collen didn't even hesitate to throw Tucker under the bus. The apple didn't fall far from the tree, indeed.

Trevor was quite impressed by Cheetah and Bear's move, but he didn't make it obvious as he chided, "Then why did you have to call me? You should know the next move! Forget it. I'll go to the police station to get more information. You two remain in your post and don't do anything until I say so."

After the call, Trevor drove back to the police station.

Sitting behind bars, Tucker looked years older than his actual age with his grey hair and hunched shoulders.

Trevor walked over and sneered, "You've grown old, Tucker."

Hearing Trevor's voice, Tucker raised his head and looked daggers at him.

"You moron! Why did you target the Singh Group? What good will it do to you if you destroy it?"

Trevor owned the second-largest shares in the company, so why did he pressure it into bankruptcy? This made Tucker even more confused and angry about who Trevor was and why he could do anything as he pleased.

"It's you, right? You framed me up! You want me to be arrested!"

Trevor was pleased to witness Tucker's devastation with his own eyes. A sneer escaped his lips.

"You betrayed me. It's only normal that I seek revenge on you, isn't it?"

Tucker paused and narrowed his eyes at Trevor.

He had betrayed so many people that he had lost count. Who was Trevor among all of them?

Sighing loudly, Trevor taunted, "I must say I'm impressed by Collen's improvement. He's become more shameless than six months ago. He knew he couldn't go down with you and betrayed you to save his ass. He's better than you because he didn't even hesitate, which is why you're here now."

As if struck by lightning, Tucker widened his eyes when he finally recognized who Trevor was.

"It's you! You're Trevor Sanderson! I can't believe Collen betrayed me. That bastard!"

Trevor sneered, watching Tucker have a taste of his own medicine.

"That bastard!" Tucker roared, realizing that he was doomed. "I'm going to kill him. I'll kill the both of you!"

He pounded on the steel bars, lashing out with gritted teeth and livid eyes.

Trevor gave him a smug look and shook his head, leaving without another word.

Tucker lost his cool and began lashing out uncontrollably.

His case was related to Mobius, so Klein wouldn't let him off the hook easily. In other words, there was no saving him this time.

And just like that, the once legendary business tycoon had met his demise.

Chapter 1807 Raven's True Identity

In Zayden, news of the Singh Group's bankruptcy had spread like wildfire.

Collen, once arrogant and proud, had lost everything, including his confidence.

At this moment, Jeanette found him, her eyes filled with a mix of emotions as she looked at Collen.

As she had something urgent to discuss with him, she approached with a gentle demeanor and said, "Collen, I finally know who Raven is! I just passed by the police station and saw him. He's Dragon!"

"Dragon?" Collen asked in utter shock.

He knew more than that.

"My grandfather told me that Dragon is actually Trevor, the eldest son of the Sanderson family. So, Raven is Trevor."

With his realization, all doubts were cleared, and Collen was filled with resentment.

He believed that this was all his grandfather's fault. He justified his betrayal of his grandfather.

Jeanette's hatred for Raven and Dragon was evident. The reason she had come to Collen was to persuade him to seek revenge.

Although the Singh family had gone bankrupt, she had an idea.

"The Singh Group is finished. Why don't you go find Lenard?" she suggested. "In Zayden, only he can deal with Raven."

Collen despised Trevor as well. Therefore, he nodded without hesitation.

Meanwhile, Trevor had just returned to the Sanderson family castle.

Cheetah and Bear were there, waiting anxiously for Trevor's wrath. They were aware that they had messed up once again.

With a stern look on his face, Trevor rebuked them. "When will you learn?! You almost caused serious trouble!"

Cheetah looked down and nervously asked, "What about Tucker? We'll be in big trouble if he spills about Mobius."

Trevor snorted and stared at Cheetah with narrowed eyes. "I've dealt with it. Tucker won't expose Mobius. But we can't release White Monkey yet."

Cheetah and Bear were both surprised and relieved. They had feared Trevor's solution but were glad the crisis was resolved.

They thought Trevor had rushed into the police station to kill Tucker to keep his mouth shut.

In addition, they believed that Trevor deserved to be the deputy leader after breaking into the police station.

As Trevor observed their expressions, he had a rough idea of what they were thinking. Suddenly, a scornful laugh escaped his lips.

He had already reported Mobius' secrets, to begin with. How could Tucker get a chance to spill them?

With the issue resolved, Cheetah turned to Trevor and reported, "The change in the Sanderson family's shares has caught the attention of Lenard, the young master of the Sanderson family. He came to me once, but I turned him away. Should we attack next?"

This time, Cheetah was more respectful than before. Trevor's break in had completely won him over.

Trevor sneered at the news.

Lenard and Ruben were next on his list. He was planning to see them after dealing with the members of Mobius.

But if they were brazen enough to come to him first, he would have no qualms about handling them sooner.