Chapter 1827 Balfour's Top Acting Skill

Trevor turned in astonishment to Luisa, questioning, "Your brother? Is Balfour coming to Zayden?"

Caught off-guard, Luisa replied shyly, "It's all your fault. I was so engrossed in our time together that I forgot my own brother."

Caught between amusement and disbelief, Trevor enveloped Luisa in a warm hug.

"Once Balfour's in Zayden, ensure he acts like he doesn't recognize me. Let's keep my true identity under wraps; we don't need extra complications."

Luisa got the situation and nodded in understanding. She pulled out her phone and dialed Balfour's number.

"Listen, Balfour, I'm with Dragon now. Given his delicate situation, he needed to hide his identity. So, if you bump into him, don't spill the beans!"

Luisa's unexpected phone call was shrouded in intrigue, with her words carrying an air of mystery.

He asked in confusion, "Weren't you headed to Zayden for Trevor? How did you end up with Dragon again? And what's this about him hiding his identity?"

Luisa was about to speak but hesitated, realizing that explaining her thoughts might be challenging. Instead, she gave a vague response.

"Stay out of it. Details aren't important right now. Just act like he's a stranger."

After pondering for a bit, Balfour made up his mind to uncover the situation once he reached Zayden.

"I'll be in Zayden by plane tomorrow. Just relax. I'll pretend that he's a stranger. I'm good at pretending!"

Upon hearing Balfour's words, Trevor instinctively touched his nose and entered deep thought.

This guy seemed unreliable!

The following day.

Trevor and Luisa made their way to pick up Balfour at the airport.

But due to heavy traffic, they got delayed.

Upon reaching the airport's parking lot, to their surprise, they spotted Lenard!

He was exchanging pleasantries with Balfour. The latter was introducing himself with enthusiasm.

"I'm Lenard, the heir of the Sanderson family. You must be Luisa's brother, Balfour. Quite the looker, aren't you? Luisa sent me to pick you up. Let's get in the car."

Balfour frowned and felt confused.

Why isn't Luisa here herself to pick me up?

However, Lenard's warm demeanor swayed Balfour's thoughts, making him consider stepping into the car.

Luisa hurried forward and stopped.

"Balfour! Balfour! Over here!"

Upon spotting Luisa approaching, Lenard's eyes sparkled. While he was admiring her charm, a thought crossed his mind.

It looks like my father's advice has been absolutely right! If I can get Balfour on my side, Luisa will surely come around!

Lenard pretended to cough and said happily, "Ah, Luisa, you're here! Hurry up and get in the car together."

With that, he courteously approached Balfour, swung open the car door, and gestured for him to hop in, saying, "Let's go."

Balfour's grin widened at the gesture.

The young heir of the Sanderson family willingly held the car door open for him. It would definitely earn him some praise if this got around!

He was about to slide into the seat.

That was when Trevor's car glided in. He addressed Balfour with a calm tone, "I'm sorry for the delay, traffic held me up. Please get in the car."

As soon as Balfour saw Dragon, he remembered what Luisa had told him yesterday.

He trembled all over and felt that his mind was full of acting skills and inspiration. He took the initiative.

"And who might you be? Offering me a ride? Your grim expression doesn't exactly scream trustworthiness."

He inspected Trevor's car before adding, "Do you know why there is a traffic jam? Maybe if you had a better car, you wouldn't face such issues! Have you seen Lenard's ride? A luxury car! So he won't be stuck in a traffic jam."

Trevor, taken aback, could only gaze at Balfour, dumbstruck.

He had asked Balfour to pretend not to know him, instead of being against him!

However, Balfour remained oblivious to this fact. Once he had spoken, he turned his gaze towards Luisa and playfully winked, silently conveying a message.

"I think I did a good job!"
