

Chapter 1828 My Treasures

Luisa also covered her forehead - not knowing whether to cry or laugh.

She asked her brother to pretend to not know Trevor. Instead, what he did was create a conflict as soon as they met.

Trevor didn't know how to reply. He simply just stood still as he watched Balfour's performance.

Lenard, on the other hand, let out a smug smile.

Turned out that his dad's guidance was right. Flattering Balfour didn't turn out to be in vain.

Upon noticing that the situation was advantageous to him, Lenard laughed. "Balfour, Luisa, I've prepared a banquet to welcome you two. Get in the car. Someone is waiting there."

With that, Lenard took Balfour's suitcase and put it inside the trunk of his car.

Balfour's eyes lit up as he excitedly rubbed his hands together. "Luisa, let's go inside his car!"

Seeing Balfour act like that, Trevor rubbed the bridge of his nose and mentally sighed. "Miss Burke, don't you want to know where Trevor is?"

The moment Luisa heard that, she rushed over to Trevor's car.

If they didn't leave now, the play would still continue. But what was going on with her brother? Why did he mess up on purpose?

Frowning, she put a hand on her hip, pretending to be mad at Balfour. "I'll take this car anyway. If you want to get inside that car, then suit yourself."

Lenard clenched his jaw when he heard that. In that instant, his father's words flashed in his mind, causing him to glare at Trevor. "How dare you threaten Luisa with that excuse again? You're despicable, Raven!"

Trevor's eyes widened for a moment. He was also quite surprised that Lenard was talking to him like this.

Narrowing his eyes at him, he shouted, "Know your position, Lenard! How dare you talk to me like that?!"

Lenard's face turned pale as he instinctively took a step back. Frightened by his murderous aura, he didn't dare speak anymore.

By then, Balfour pretended to persuade Luisa again by saying, "Are you sure that person can help you find Trevor? I think he's pretty shady. Let's take Lenard's car instead, Luisa."

Luisa didn't respond. She simply covered her forehead and wondered how long Balfour was going to keep up the act.

Noticing that his sister was ignoring him, Balfour walked up to Lenard and meekly said, "I'm sorry, but she's not listening to me. I have to follow her, or else something bad might happen to her. I'll take your car next time."

After saying that, he went over to the trunk to take his suitcase.

By that point, Lenard became anxious. He figured that he really didn't have a chance, now that Balfour is being forced to follow Raven and his sister.

However, he was still determined to let him get inside his car.

Suddenly, he grabbed Balfour's luggage and looked at him dead in the eyes. "Balfour, you don't have to worry. I'm sure Raven won't do anything to your sister. Why don't you take my car so we can get to know each other more? Who knows, right? We might become really good friends."

Balfour shook his head and repeatedly refused.

"I appreciate it, but no thanks. I won't be able to forgive myself if anything happens to my sister. Next time, though, I'll take your car."

Balfour tugged on his suitcase, but Lenard still wouldn't let go of it.

He frowned. He was beginning to grow impatient.

"Why are you being so stubborn? That is my luggage. Give it back to me right now!"

By that point, Lenard also noticed that he seemed a little too pushy and thought that might leave a bad impression on Balfour.

Not knowing what else to do, he just loosened his grip on the suitcase.

Before Balfour knew it, his suitcase suddenly fell to the ground.

That was when they heard the sound of glass shattering.

It came from inside the suitcase.

Balfour's eyes widened in pure horror.

"Oh, no! My treasures!"
