

Chapter 1841 Bidding War

After receiving a scolding from Trevor, Balfour continued his training and cheered himself, "I can do this! I can improve and become stronger! I can make Sheena look my way and fall in love with me!"

Trevor shook his head, unsure whether to cry or laugh at Balfour's eagerness.

"Don't overdo yourself. If you get injured while working out, you will leave a bad impression on Sheena. Take it easy and put all your focus on improving yourself. I have already found a way to counter the acquisition."

Balfour knitted his brows in disbelief.

"Are you kidding me? After doing a few laps of push-ups, you came up with a solution?"

With a sly smile, Trevor said, "I found that Lenard only has eighty million dollars to risk on the acquisition. Isn't that a great tip-off from which we can devise a plan to counter them?"

Astonished, Balfour's mouth gaped open.

"Eighty million? How did you know? Do you have a spy inside the Sandersons' place? Man, that was awesome! No wonder you don't look worried at all!"

Instead of telling Balfour the rest of the information, Trevor told him the next move.

"I want you to look up How To Become A White Knight and study it. Afterward, go to Severich and discuss the plan with Sheena. This is your chance to show her what you've got."

Balfour's face lit up. He was so grateful that he couldn't speak and just patted Trevor's shoulder to express what he felt.

Before Trevor could say anything more, Balfour tidied himself from the sweat and headed out of the gym to go to Severich.

After hearing everything from Balfour, Sheena beamed.

"That's such a great plan! I'm amazed you came up with that. With Newmere Cosmetic's support, we can secure our shares and prevent the Sanderson family from being the major shareholder."

Balfour couldn't help smiling from ear to ear, hearing Sheena's praise.

"It's nothing. I know many other things. You can ask me anything if you need help. What do you say we have dinner together if the acquisition goes well?"

Sheena smiled curtly and said, "Let's talk about this again after the acquisition."

Meanwhile, Lenard was busy buying Severich's shares, oblivious to the doom that awaited him.

After a few days, Lenard had successfully acquired forty-four percent of Severich's shares, which was close to the shares' quota for a shareholder to purchase the company.

In another meeting, however, Sheena made an announcement.

"At eight o'clock tonight, I will put five percent of my shares for bidding. Anyone interested can participate."

Greediness immediately covered Lenard's gaze.

If he won the bidding and get five percent more of the shares, he would be the major shareholder.

By then, Raven could do nothing but watch as Lenard won Luisa's heart.

That evening, many people attended the bidding.

But the most anticipated participants were Trevor and Lenard.

When Lenard saw Trevor arrive with Luisa and Balfour, he blocked their path and sneered at Trevor.

"Why did you come? Didn't you know? I will win the bidding and get most of the shares tonight. If I were you, I won't sweat it and leave."

Trevor smirked but said nothing.

Lenard looked so pathetic that Trevor almost had second thoughts about crushing his ego later.

After a while, the bidding began.

Lenard put up a relatively high bid. "Three million!"

It was still a reasonable bid, so the other bidders contested one after another.

"Three million and two hundred thousand!"

"Three million and three hundred thousand!"

"Three million and a half!"

Luisa and Balfour also joined, but in truth, they had no intention of winning the bid.

The most crucial part of this plan was in Trevor's hands, but he hadn't made a move yet, so the bidding continued.

Noticing Trevor's silence, Lenard sneered and bid higher.

"Five million!"

Everyone fell silent. Five million was a huge amount. The other bidders didn't have that much to contest, so they quietly back away.

It was then that Trevor made his first bid.

"Eight million!"

Just like that, the bid went up by three million. Everyone gasped in astonishment and exchanged comments.

"If he buys five percent of the shares with eight million, won't it be a loss?"

"Maybe he doesn't care much about the money. He only wants the shares and to show off to everyone that he's here to take over Severich."

"That can be the reason."

Like the other bidders, Lenard was surprised by Trevor's last bid.

He felt challenged, so he made up his mind to win the bid even if he had to use up all his money.

After all, he could earn back every penny he would spend today once he took over Severich and merged it with Newmere Cosmetics after marrying Luisa.

So, without hesitation, he made a much higher bid.

"Eight million and a half!"

Without batting an eyelash, Trevor contested, "Ten million!"

Unlike Lenard, who seemed too worked up, Trevor casually raised the bidding price.

Lenard didn't want to show weakness, so he bid higher until they were the only ones participating actively.

"Fifteen million!"

"Twenty!"

"Twenty-five!"

The bid went on until the price reached fifty million.

It was way more than the value of the five percent shares.

Lenard was close to his limit.

He glanced at Trevor, who didn't look as worked up as him, and felt uneasy.

Something was off. Otherwise, why would Trevor be so calm?
