

Chapter 1842 A Surprise After The Deal Is Concluded

Trevor also noticed the look of surprise and doubt in Lenard's eyes.

Consequently, Trevor pretended to be very nervous, avoiding eye contact with Lenard and pretending to wipe his sweat from time to time.

The fact was that this price was the most Lenard could afford.

Looking at Trevor, who he didn't know was playing, Lenard felt his heart beat faster. He decided to bet all on this and he shouted, "55 million!"

This was the most money he could spend at this time.

If he failed...

Lenard didn't want to think too much. After giving his last bid, he looked at Trevor, anxiously hoping that Trevor would give up.

As he expected, Trevor sighed and waved, signaling that he gave up.

"55 million, once! 55 million, twice! 55 million, last chance... Deal!" the auctioneer announced loudly.

Lenard was overjoyed. He had finally got the shares he longed for.

Without wasting anytime, he went straight to the stage and signed the contract quickly. Once he was done, he immediately transferred the money to the designated account. He intended to mock Trevor once everything was settled.

After everything was done, Lenard breathed a sigh of relief.

He wiped the sweat from his brow and assumed a proud posture. After all, he had just won an important victory. Satisfied, he told Trevor arrogantly, "Raven, I'm about to become the absolute majority shareholder. You better sell me your shares right away. Otherwise I'm afraid it will be very difficult for you to find a buyer for the shares of a company close to bankruptcy like Severich."

Trevor wanted to burst out laughing, and he had to muster all his energy to hold back his laughter. Pretending to be surprised, he said, "Aren't you going to give the company to Luisa? How about we both directly give her our shares?"

Upon hearing that, Lenard's expression changed at once and he thought it over.

He wanted to use the shares as an asset to pursue after Luisa! If he wanted to give her Severich, he needed to take complete control of the company first.

He decided he would only give her the company once she agreed to marry him. That way, he wouldn't lose anything.

While Lenard thought of this, he also figured a good excuse not to give his shares to Luisa.

Looking at Trevor with disdain, Lenard said, "That's different. All the shares you have, you bought them, right? Although I won now, I'm still willing to purchase your shares so that you won't suffer more losses than you already have. When I give the whole Severich to Luisa later, she will definitely appreciate it more. To be honest with you, I'm going to further develop my relationship with Luisa first. When our relationship is stable, I'll give her Severich as a gift."

Balfour noticed the cunning look on Lenard's face, and he immediately figured what Lenard actually had in mind. He muttered indignantly under his breath, "You looser! So you still want to court my sister? Without Dragon's arrangement, I am pretty sure my sister would never acquire Severich!"

Lenard was in his fantasies at the moment and he didn't notice Balfour's angry look at all. With a cheeky smile, he said to Luisa, "Luisa, I'm almost the controlling shareholder of Severich now. Shall we have dinner to celebrate?"

Of course, Luisa was still indifferent to Lenard's words and she refused coldly.

"No, thanks. I've already had dinner!"

Her cold rejection filled Lenard's heart with anger. Since she turned down his polite invitation, he decided to threaten her.

"Luisa, I am sure you don't want there to be any problems with the acquisition of the Severich, do you? The reason I invite you to dinner is to discuss about some specific details with you."

Lenard's eyes were full of confidence as he spoke. He was certain that Luisa would not turn down such a great opportunity.

But before Luisa could say anything, Sheena came down.

She solemnly reported to Trevor, "Mr. Chairman, the auction went well and all the money has been received."

Lenard was stunned when he heard how Sheena addressed Trevor and he stammered, "Ch...chairman? How? What did you just call him?"

With a playful smile, Trevor slowly stood up and stretched himself leisurely. Then, he said casually, "Don't you know? Ten minutes before the auction began, I became the absolute majority shareholder of Severich with fifty-one percent of the shares in my possession! So, it is but normal that I am the chairman of Severich."

Lenard suddenly felt that everything was dark in front of him.

He staggered back and sat down numbly.

He almost fainted. How could this be?

Gazing at the distraught Lenard with a smile on his face, Trevor continued, "By the way, this auction was my idea. Well, so why don't you sell me your shares? They won't be of any use to you anyways. If you don't sell them to me, I'm afraid it will be very difficult for you to find a buyer for the shares of a company close to bankruptcy like Severich."

Lenard was so angry that his face turned red.

Trevor used his own words against him now.
