

Chapter 1869 Please Save Her

Kane, in his carelessness, brushed against the needle on Nola's body.

As a result, the needle sank deeper.

Nola's body began to convulse.

Meanwhile, cold beads of sweat formed on Kane's back. In a fit of panic, he tried to fix the needle's position.

But, instead, he pulled it out entirely.

All of a sudden, the alarms of the machines in the emergency room went off.

Nola's vital signs became dangerously unstable in just a second.

Elin cried out in disbelief, "What's going on? She was okay just a moment ago! Why did her condition suddenly decline?"

Kane was shocked as well.

It turned out that Nola's injuries were sustained by that very needle.

Realizing his mistake, Kane had never been this anxious in his life. After all, he had taken Lennon's money. If anything happened to Nola, Lennon would not spare him.

Hearing the commotion, Lennon stormed into the room. He shot a worried look at Nola and then turned to Kane, fury evident.

"Why has her condition gotten worse? Didn't you say she was stable?"

Elin could not bring herself to meet Lennon's fierce gaze. She lowered her head and happened to see the fallen needle. With that, she picked it up and said, "Kane, insert the needle back and stabilize her vitals. Don't make Mr. Wright worry."

Then, she turned to Lennon and tried to pacify him. "Don't worry, Mr. Wright. Kane was probably just trying to assess Miss Wright's state. Since he's taken your money, trust that he's committed to treating her."

Lennon seemed somehow relieved and turned to Kane.

"I overreacted. I'm sorry about that. Save her, and I'll give you another 30 million."

Elin could not help but look at Kane with admiration. Thirty million dollars. It was enough for him to live in luxury for the rest of his life.

Kane said nothing. Instead of feeling happy because of Lennon's offer, sweat broke out on his forehead.

He would have been on cloud nine if he had the ability to do that. But he did not.

He took the needle with shaking hands. After a moment's hesitation, he could not bring himself to do it.

If he accidentally killed Nola, his life would be over.

In the end, he gave up and admitted, "Miss Wright's condition has changed. I'm not sure if I can save her. You'd better take back the check, Mr. Wright."

Although with a heavy heart, Kane returned the check. He wanted nothing more than to leave the emergency room. He felt trapped in here.

However, Lennon blocked the door and threateningly said, "What did you say? Listen up. You have to treat her whether you like it or not. If she recovers, the ten million is yours. If not, brace yourself for the wrath of the Wright family."

Scared out of his wits, Kane collapsed and broke into tears.

"I'm so sorry. It wasn't me who stabilized Miss Wright. It was another patient's family. Please, just let me leave."

When Lennon heard Kane's seemingly absurd lie, he kicked Kane and asserted, "Who is it? Where is he? Call him over and tell him to save my daughter!"

Meanwhile, Kane's mind raced.

Where the hell was Trevor?

Of course, he did not dare to say that out loud. He looked around and, to his surprise, saw the very man he needed.

"There... there he is!" he exclaimed while pointing at Trevor. Then, he dragged himself over and pleaded, "Something happened to Miss Wright! Her condition is unstable. She is in the ER right now. Please, you need to see her. Sir, please!"

Trevor frowned and realized that Kane must have made a mistake. But there was no time for blame. Without a word, he rushed to the emergency room.

The commotion attracted the attention of the director of the hospital. When he arrived at the scene, an obvious look of displeasure was on his face.

"Greed for money does nothing good. Do you want to kill Miss Wright? You're fired!"

He then turned to Trevor and added, "You're the skilled doctor who stabilized Miss Wright, aren't you? Please go in now. I'll have our surgeons assist you. Please save her."